The big game of the week sends Detroit against Canadiens in Montreal Thursday. With only one point now separating the teams, it will be a battle for first place no matter how the Red Wings fare with the Chicago team Tuesday.

Harry Lumley of the Leafs lost ground in his quest for the Vezina Trophy and, of course, the $1,000 that goes with it. A week ago big Harry had a seven-goal margin over Terry Sawchuk of Detroit. Now it is three.

Former Winners Defeated In Ontario Spiel

TORONTO (CP) — Two of last year's trophy winners in the Ontario bonspiel were eliminated Monday in first and second round play for the Royal York trophy.

The Royal York is top prize of the five-day bonspiel. Second-round play in the Royal York and first-round play for the Birks- trophy was completed Monday. The North American Life trophy competition begins today.

LONDON OUT

None of the three rinks from London survived the Royal York second round. The rink skipped by Dr. J. A. Wright was dropped 8-7 by Don Holden of Oshawa in the second round. Harry Sifton and M. Aylesworth were eliminated in the first round.

The S. H. Smithers quartet from Galt moved into the Royal York third round with a 10-6 win over Toronto's W. Walden in the first and an 11-8 win over Toronto's W. S. Thomenson in the second.

Don Holden of Oshawa entered the Royal York third round with an 8-7 victory over Dr. J. A. Wright of London. The other Oshawa rinks were eliminated in the second round.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — We've thought on it and thought on it and still do not understand for sure why big league pitchers fail to make the grade as managers after their arms play out.

Of the 16 pilots who will open spring drills March 1, not a one ever sneaked over a spitball or creased a batter's skull. With the departure of Freddie Hutchinson from the Detroit helm during the winter the most recent experiment with a former thrower has failed.

Going into the 1955 campaign, the managerial line-up will include 10 former infielders, three ex-catchers and three ex-outfielders. Two of the three former outfielders never really made the grade as major league players. Walt Alston of Brooklyn had only a brief acquaintance with the big tent and Mayo Smith, the Phillies' new foreman, got into only a modest number of games with that club in 1945.

The other former fly - chaser, Casey Stengel, was never a top star, but he learned something out there besides which way the wind was blowing.

GRIFFITH LONE SUCCESS

The only pitcher we can locate who seems to have shown any real ability as a manager after he left the mound was Clark Griffith, and that was a long time back.

Since then, to recall only those who come quickly to mind, such outstanding curvers as Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson, Bob Shawkey, Fred Fitzsimmons, Bucky Walters, Ted Lyons and Burleigh Grimes took a shot at the main job with signal lack of success. Mostly they found themselves fired in fairly short order. Almost invariably, the indictment has been that they didn't know how to handle men.

A former catcher, since a manager, gives this reason for failure of the hill heroes as managers:

"Most of them are too self-centred during their pitching days," he said. "They think they're the whole damn show and that the rest of us are there just to fill out the side. They still have this lofty attitude when they start managing. They don't know how to come down and get close to their men."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

What makes bridge a great partnership game is the feature of exchanging precise information. Distinguishing details are shown in the spot in which certain signals are employed.

One of its truly hot flashes is the difference between jumps; particularly between an immediate jump and a later round jump. I refer to the one-jump; a number of one higher than needed.

If such a jump is in any round except the first it makes only a promise of tricks enough to make a game. But if this jump is on the first round it also guarantees two sure tricks.

♠K Q 7 4
♦A 8 7
♣K 9 6 4

What is your first response? An immediate one-jump assist to three spades. This promises spade support, tricks enough to help make a game in spades, and two sure tricks somewhere in the hand.

The opening one bid by your partner was a promise of at least five tricks. With your five you can see ten; enough for game in the agreed trump suit for which you show support.

But this is not all. The fact that your one-jump was immediate promised two sure tricks. with such information, if opener has seven tricks instead of only five he should investigate a slam.

Suppose the diamond ace was the king of diamonds. Your hand has a count of five without two sure tricks in that case. So, you must not one-jump immediately. What would you do then?

Make a double-jump to four spades and say you have tricks for game help without two sures among them. Or, if you had some other bid first, one-jump on the second round.

Some partners refuse to split hairs that fine. So, I tell them to get a rope. They might know what to do with it.

PENGUINS OFF PANAMA

PANAMA (AP)—Note to Pacific coast bird-watchers: A correspondent of the newspaper Estrella Panama reported today a colony of penguins was sighted Monday, swimming close to shore off the banana port of Armuelles. The report said children captured one of the Antarctic birds. It didn't seem bothered by the tropical climate.

BERHARD STOPS

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands stopped over briefly at this airport Monday en route to New York.

CHEATED DEATH FIVE MILES UP IN THE AIR

Now recuperating at RCAF hospital at Stevenson Field, Winnipeg, two U.S. airmen told how they cheated death more than five miles above the earth's surface when their stratojet bomber was blown to pieces. They held little hope for the fate of two other men aboard the B-47 although search aircraft are scouring the area north of The Pas after seven flares were reported sighted. Lt.-Col. Kenneth G. McGrew, left, and Capt. Lester F. Epton, right, both of Riverside, Cal., were on a training flight to Greenland from California when their right motor caught fire. They were preparing to abandon ship when it exploded and went into a downward spin. After parachuting from the plunging bomber, McGrew and Epton were rescued from wilderness in Northern Saskatchewan by an RCAF pararescue unit comprised of nursing sister Marion Macdonald of Vancouver, who parachuted to the scene to rescue the captain while a ground party went in to escort the lieutenant to a nearby aircraft. Historical Shows on TV Must Be Right in Details

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP)—It's the little things that can trip you up in historical shows on television, says Dr. Francis Ronalds of Cavalcade of America.

Ronalds, historical consultant for the weekly ABC show, says that if a show concerning the war of 1812 had a U. S. flag with only 13 stripes there would be a lot of protests.

"There were 17 stripes as well as 17 stars in the flag in the war of 1812," he says.

The one time University of Illinois history professor points out that the original plan for the flag was to add a stripe as well as a star for each new state. When the number began to get too large, the flag reverted to the original 13 stripes and added only stars for new states.

A show such as cavalcade may present a historical fact that's unknown to many or even most people, he says. But there are a lot of people who do know all about it. They will spot even minor slip-ups.

Starting Feb. 28, he's putting a daily 2½-hour variety show on the network's local station, WABC-TV, in what he admits is a big gamble involving a budget of $30,000 a week. And while it will be seen initially only in the New York area, it could have considerable impact on daytime TV programming on a country-wide basis if it succeeds.

Oberfelder says he's not aiming so much at taking current viewers away from rivals as inducing more people to turn on their TV sets in the daytime. He reports an average of only 17 per cent of sets are turned on during daytime hours in the New York area.

The shows will be patterned after Broadway revues. The cast will include Ray McKinley and his orchestra, actress Marian Colby, singer Bob Carroll and Tom Poston as master of ceremonies.

"There's no middle ground on this," says Oberfelder. "I think it's going to be either a great big success, or a big flop."

Taina Elg Learned to Be Ballerina After Bombing

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Finland's contribution to Hollywood is lovely Taina Elg, who learned to be a ballerina after escaping Russian bombs.

Taina (rhymes with Dinah and there's no one finah) is 24 and full of grace. She has a willowy figure, long dark-blonde hair and a fresh, shiny-cheeked face.

As far as she knows and according to film historians, she is the first acting importation from Finland. This seems strange, since Hollywood has acqured many Scandnavian stars, especially from Sweden.

"I don't know why it is," said Taina. "We certainly have an excellent theatre in Finland and many good actors. Perhaps it is the language. It is quite difficult for Finns to learn English. Finnish goes 'way back to early ages, the same as Hungarian."

EIGHT MONTHS' SILENCE

Taina's tangle with English turned out successfully. She speaks it with scarcely an accent, having begun to learn when she went with the Sadler's Wells ballet troupe in London.

"I was terrified at first," she recalled. "For the first eight months I said nothing. But I was listening all the time. Pretty soon I was able to speak well enough to be understood."

MGM producer Edwin Knopf saw her at a party in London and tabbed her as a film prospect. She was brought here a year ago and has spent most of her time in diction, acting, singing and dancing lessons. She played a role as Lana Turner's handmaiden in "The Prodigal" and will do a similar chore in "Diane." MGM promises big things for her.

Havings come from temperatures of 42 below zero, she has taken to southern California. She lives with her husband, Carl Bjorkenheim, a childhood sweetheart she married on a return to Finland in 1953.

SHUTDOWN IS BRIEF

BOGOTA, Colomba (AP)—Interior Secretary Elias Sabogal said Monday Col. Cesar Augusto Cuellar, governor of the state of Tolima had lifted his order closing the newspaper Tribuna of Ibague. Cuellar padlocked the newspaper Sunday because of "criticism of the governor and the national government."

AT THE McCARTHY

Missionary's Sister Loves a Beachcomber

That very capable actress, Glynis Johns, has played many varied roles in her long film career, but none has been so exciting and so convincing as her portrayal of a missionary's sister in "The Beachcomber". In this new technicolor version of Somerset Maugham's famous novel she is required to fall in love with a drunken island outcast whom the natives call 'The Honourable Ted'. This no-good derelict is seen in the person of Robert Newton, firm film favourite of the roving eyes.

In the story of a strange love set in the south sea islands, these two exciting players bring a new kind of romance to the screen. However, this brilliant story is more than a romance, for woven around the theme is a thrilling adventure full of dramatic impact.

From the bolsterous carousing of Newton as 'The Beachcomber' to the moment when the lovers are condemned to be sacrificed to the sacred elephant, the film rushes headlong with breathless excitement.

"The Beachcomber" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre, has suspense, drama and tenderness. In fact, everything, which goes to make thoroughly satisfying movie entertainment.

Nielsen Quits Track Efforts

After Saturday's mile race in the U.S. national AAU championships, Nielsen, owner of the world indoor mile record of 4:03.6, will head back to his pressman's job in Denmark.

"Just trying to win is tough enough," Gunnar observed today. "But going after a world record week after week has taken too much out of me. I need a rest."

Originally, Nielsen, the first non-American to hold the world indoor record in more than two decades—the great Paavo Nurmi was the last—had intended to make the entire circuit.

On the same program giant of all thrillers "The Snow Creature". Both hits are first Belleville showings.

AT THE BELLE — Jeff Richards has a top supporting role with Gene Kelly in "Crest of the Wave", an excitement packed drama now playing at the Belle Theatre. On the same program is a startling and different presentation in "Prisoner of War" starring Ronald Reagan and Steve Forrest.

IF WE DIDN'T HAVE GOOD THEATRES

What Kind of a Town Would Belleville Be?

Let's go to the picture show! How many times have you heard that in your lifetime? It's a question about as Canadian as Cheddar Cheese. Everyone loves a good movie! Even in this day of stay-at-home TV viewers, movies are still about the most popular pastime you can find. When there's a good show on, you'll find lots of people . . .and when there's an outstanding one, you'll still see the "outstanding room only" sign out. Which proves that good movies still pack 'em in, despite the fact that lots of people have television in their front room and can watch a movie most any time. The obvious reason is that the movie houses still have good shows and people would rather pay their money to see good entertainment than to watch a free mediocre show at home. Fact is, the movies still pull people away from their viewers, when good programs are on. People just like to go to the movies.

Belleville is fortunate in having three good year-round movie houses, plus a drive-in for summer. Among them, they bring top productions to us. Many of the "colossals' in movies are available here as rapidly as in the big cities.

The movie houses are an important cog in community life. They' employ about 38 full time workers besides being a training ground for a lot of youngsters in business. Many youths get their first business experience as ushers, doormen and at other jobs in theatres where they learn to meet the public.

Good theatres bring a lot of people to town, too. People outside in the trade area recognize Belleville as a good movie town.

Belleville Theatre Managers have been behind every movement for the welfare of the community-lnding their screens for the national drives for Red Cross, The Salvation Army, Christmas Seals, etc., all members of the Motion Picture Council of Canada, pledged to help worthwhile efforts.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

For Wednesday, Feb. 16, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—A little achievement in right direction can be more valuable, profitable than sporadic jumps ahead, in not to sure matters. Plan wisely, strive steadily but don't be too forceful.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—It will save time, money, bring bigger returns if you pay closer attention to important details, instructions; follow scheduled outline where you should. All useful activities in order.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—There's vigor, impetus in the air: fine, so long as you don't overdo with this added stimulus and perhaps overlap or crowd self with more than can be reasonably handled. Be sensibly cautious.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Advice to Aries could aid you return desired results quick-. No need to fret nor to doubt outcome of efforts if you perform with your usual efficiency, cheer and faith.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Full, substantial sort of day with domestic interests, necessary work, industrial, manufacturing and other essentials to everyday living out front in favor. Up to you WHAT you do with time.

August 23 to SEPTEMBER 23 (Virgo)—May find today more amenable to artistic matters, work or other activities requiring purely brain effort rather than physical power. However, all useful and purposeful activity can benefit.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Efficient planning and allocating properly day's schedule and tasks will net healthy, valuable returns. So much more, better, can be realized when system, timing, etc., are employed.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Simplify whole day's activities, whether for work, study, socials or religion by keeping in mind the urgency of each and how much time you can spend with it. Good going!

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—You can be as skillful and efficient as usual and same time enjoy your work, study or whatever honorable interests take up your time. Don't dissent with rightful authority.

December 23 to January 21

associates will facilitate, speed completion of your interests, also build harmony and good will. Good day generally, help make it stick.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Speed up action to high attainment but we do not mean to be careless or strained in the doing. Important to keep promises, appointments on time. Do a thorough job at a healthy pace.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Heed advice to Sagittarius now. It can be unusual day for many enterprises, for new, progressive ideas and methods, for stabilizing interests, making needed improvements. Confer.

YOU BORN TODAY are humane, kindly, thoughtful, and once aroused very industrious. May have to be spurred on at times to be as ambitious and acquisitive as you should for true success. Great talent in Aquarius but it must be nurtured and brought to the fore. Inertia could be a fault, also worry, so be on guard. Worth while success doesn't drop from out the blue, it has to be hopefully worked for, confidently fought for. Maintain only high purpose, believe in yourself, And in God. Birthdate of: Henry Adams, noted historian, biographer; Vera Ellen, famed dancer.

Little Benny's Notebook

I was thinking of getting reddy to start my homewerk, and I said to pop, Hay pop, are 2 heads better than one?

Yes, if they're on diffrent peeple, pop said.

Being a joke, and ma said, Of course 2 heads are better than one. That's proverbial. The peeple who themselves end up by being executives with paneful stummick ulcers and no simpathy from anyone, she said, and I said, Well anyways. I made an agreement with Puds Simkins to make our school marks better by helping each other with our homewerk, if both our fathers and mothers are willing.

Oh, well, now that's another story, ma said. It all depends on how earnest and serious you are, she said, and pop said, A compact like that might just be an excuse for horseplay instead of brian play, even though the princpal itself is good.

Well heck, pop G, ma, we're serious all right, I said. Puds is one of the best in the class at arifmetic, and that's what he'll help with, and I'm one of the best at writing compositions, and that's what I'll help Puds with, because his best is my werst and my best is his werst.

Maybe the boys have got something there, pop said, and ma said, Well, maybe. Where will this mutual help take place, here or at Puds's house? she said.

Both, I said. He'll do the arifmetic problems at his house and I'll write an exter composition, and then we'll call each other up on the fone, and he'll tell me the answers and I'll reed him the composition so he can write it down in his own true writing.

That's out of the question, pop said, and ma said, Well I should say so.

Both meening no.

EDITORS MEET

PUBLICITY CHIEF

Thomas L. Johnston, 39, formerly head of United States operations for the National Film Board since 1953, has been appointed chief of information and publicity for the NFB. He succeeds Stan Helleur who has returned to newspaper work in Toronto. (CP from National Film Board.)

OTTAWA EDITOR

Marshall D. Yarrow, 49, has been appointed editor of the Ottawa Citizen. He succeeds Chas. J. Woodsworth, editor since 1948. Mr. Yarrow, managing editor of The Citizen since 1952, will continue in that post. (CP Photo).

SURVIVES CRASH

Capt. Lester E. Epton, 33, of Riverside, Calif., is in Winnipeg hospital after surviving a parachute jump from a plunging Stratojet bomber and exposure to below-zero weather in northern Saskatchewan. Two of the four crew members of the United States plane were rescued. Two others were reported missing. Capt. Epton was treated for frost-bitten feet suffered while he was marooned in deep snow for more than 30 hours awaiting rescue. An RCAF crew parachuted to his aid. (CP Photo).

AT CONFERENCE

OFFERS BOUNTY FOR DOWNED MIGS

Thomas E. Robertson, oilman of Dallas, Texas, is offering U.S. airmen $100 for every Red Mig they shoot down in self defence. Robertson said that if his bounty plan had been followed two or three years ago, "we wouldn't be in this condition now." He decided to offer the bounty "because I was getting darned tired of the Communists shooting down our planes." He explained that his offer holds good only in cases where U.S. pilots shoot in self defence. (Central Press Canadian).

CHASED BADITS

Terry French, society reporter for the Victoria Times, chased two armed bandits in her car when she spotted two suspicious looking men climbing into a car after a robbery of $6,000 from the business office of The Times. She followed the car for a while but lost it in traffic. She then reported to police. (CP Pho-

OLDEST MEMBER DEAD

FALSE ALARM

STRATFORD (CP)—Police sped to a township schoolhouse Monday night after an excited call from a woman who lives next door to the school. The woman said two "desperate" men were demanding the key to the school from her, they said. When police arrived they found the men—tuning the piano.

ASK TAX CUT

SIMCOE (CP)—A brief urging a reduction in tobacco taxes will be presented to the federal government Feb. 22 by the Ontario Flue-cured Tobacco Marketing Association. The brief was prepared by a special taxation committee in collaboration with Prof. David W. Slator, professor of economics at Queen's University, Kingston.

Administration In Row Over City Charity

MONTREAL (CP)—Administration leaders are sticking to their guns in a row over what the city should contribute to charitable organizations, but there is hesitancy among the rank and file at city hall.

Chilled by a blast from the big city charities Monday a city council caucus Monday night voted 32-2 to request the city executive committee to reconsider its plan to cut municipal grants by $750,000.

The meeting was called to consider a letter sent to the executive committee by the Inter-Federation Council, which represents the four big charities. The federation said the economy cut if put through would mean so radical a reduction in welfare services that the city would be obliged, according to law, to create other agencies of its own to do the work now being done by the voluntary groups.

That, it said, would mean scrapping complex services already functioning which had years of experience.

MINDS UNCHANGED

Mayor Jean Drapeau and Pierre Desmarais, chairman of the powerful executive committee whose decision touched off the ruckus, however, have not changed their minds.

Mr. Desmarais did not go to the city hall caucus, but he issued a statement saying that the public is being "fooled and badly informed at a time" when the executive committee is doing the impossible to restore order in the administration."

He said planned cuts amounted to lezss than $600,000 and even that amount exaggerated the true position since some grants not listed in the social welfare budget would be transferred to other budgets "where they should logically appear."

Mayor Drapeau, who went to the meeting, said later in a speech to the Canadian Railway Club that charity when it reaches the permanent stage is a national and not a municipal problem.

Earlier at city hall he said no matter what councillors might think of the good work being done by any charitable organization they should not forget that although the city might have jurisdiction to intervene in the social welfare domain, "it has no obligation to do so."

Boxing World Eyes Focus On Fullmer

BROOKLYN, N.Y. (AP) — The time has arrived to take serious notice of Gene Fullmer, the young boilermaker's assistant from West Jordan, Utah, who has won 28 straight fights.

The strong 23-year-old middleweight gave Paul Pender of Boston a sound drubbing Monday night at Eastern Parkway Arena here to win a unanimous decision in 10 stormy rounds.

Fullmer dropped Pender in the fourth round, and nearly floored him the third as he took the offensive with a solid head-and-body attack that swept the first five rounds on all official cards.

Fullmer, the 13-to-5 favorite, now has won nine decisions and knocked out 19 in his unbeaten string since he turned pro in 1951.

BUSY, BUSY, BUSY

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Frederick Sherwood, 26, a guard employed by a private protective agency, has admitted that in the course of a year he looted stores in his care more than 100 times. Detectives recovered a $5,000 mountain of merchandise.

LEAVES OBVIOUS CLUE

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Police had a good reason for charging Harry Bethke, 25, wth a $37 break in a New Haven garage Saturday night. They said they found his wallet with all his identification papers on the premises.

Trent Valley Hockey League

MARMORA— One of the cleanest games to be waged between those old T.V.L. rivals, Campbellford and Marmora was witnessed on the latter's rink on Monday evening as the homesters won by 6-2.

Campbellford opened the scoring early in the first period, Stevenson beating Killian on Payne's assist. Before the period closed, Marmora retaliated with goals by Mantle on Smith's assist and by Lavender on K. Trumble's assist. In this period there were no penalties.

The second period opened with Maynes also scoring in the first minute on an assist from K. Trumble. Darrah also found the net shortly afterwards on a pass from K. Trumble.

a good position made no mistake with Mantle's pass. Payne got through for Campbellford unassisted and C. Trumble got the final tally for the victors on Sweet's assist. Campbellford got two penalties in the second and each team got one apiece in the third.

TEAMS

Campbellford — goal, Nelson; defence, Louth, Free; centre, Blake; wings, Stevenson, Payne; alternates, Eady, Herrington, Jeffs Kemp, Dooher, Lee, Pace, Fields.

Marlies Whip Hamilton 6-2

HAMILTON (CP) — Toronto Marlboros, scoring five unanswered goals in a second-period splurge, defeated Hamilton Cubs 6-2 Monday night in an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game played before 1,738 fans.

Bill Binnie and Cummy Burton were the Cub marksmen.

After a 1-1 first period Marlies struck for five goals in 15 minutes play to carry a 6-1 lead going into the last period. The Hamilton coach tried to get Cubs back in the game by playing most of the last 20 minutes with five forwards.

Cubs outshot the Marlboros 23-22 and by an 11-3 margin in the last period.

'Golden Beak' To Get Test

GROSSINGER, N.Y. (AP) — A worried Rocky Marciano will put his golden beak to the test today in a four-round workout with sparmate Keene Simmons.

If the $1,000,000 nose, sliced badly down the left side in his September clash with Ezzard Charles, cuts open again, the heavyweight champion will have to take a long layoff or maybe quit the ring entirely.

"The big show will be tomorrow" said Rocky.

"I'm anxious to find out what's going to happen myself. We'll go all out."

Eddie Olson Leads American

NEW YORK (AP)—Veteran left-winger Eddie Olson of Cleveland Barons has taken over a familiar spot as leader in the American Hockey League individual scoring race.

Olson, the circuit's scoring pacesetter two years ago, got two goals and three assists in last week's games to bring his point total to 68. He now has four more than teammate Fred Glover, out with a fractured ankle.

Olson, a native of Hancock, Mich., has 34 goals and 34 assists and Glover 27 goals and 37 assists.

Rookie Jim Anderson of Springfield, the league's top goal-getter with 37, is third in scoring with 61 points. He's followed by Kenny Wharram of Buffalo with 58 and Ross Lowe of Springfield with 57.

SET STEEL RECORD

LUXEMBOURG (CP) — Steel producton within the six-country European coal and steel pool set a record last month with an output of 4,132,000 tons, the pool authority announced here Monday night. The pool is formed by France, Italy, West Germany, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg.

English Soccer Rare Double May Be Won

By JEFF RYAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—The talk of the taverns these days is of the possibility of some English soccer team pulling off that rare feat, the cup and league double.

With but 16 teams left in the Football Association Cup competition and five of them juggling for the league championship, the chances seem good. The five in line for the league title are Sunderland, Wolverhampton Wanderers, Charlton Athletic, Manchester City and Chelsea.

The cup-and-league title consists of winning the FA Cup, goal of a season-long knockout competition, and finishing first in the first division of the Football League.

Only two teams have pulled off the double in soccer history, and no team has done it in the present century.

Preston North End did it in 1889, winning the league title without losing a match all season and the FA Cup without conceding a goal throughout the tournament. Aston Villa also completed the double in 1897 but not in such a spectacular style.

There are three really hot favorites this year — Wolverhampton, Sunderland and Charlton.

The Wolves have taken turns with Sunderland at the top of the table, while Charlton, ninth at the start of the season, has entrenched itself around the third or fourth position.

The next round of cup competition will knock out at least one of these favored three as the Wolves play Charlton Feb. 19.

Manchester City and Chelsea also have a good chance for the double and both face second division teams in their next cup round. An FA Cup victory alone would suit Chelsea as the London club never has won English soccer's top honor. It reached the final in 1915, but lost.

There's a possible consolation double, sometimes called the "little double." This is achieved by winning the FA Cup and being promoted to a higher division in the same season.

One team in the running for the "little double" is second division Luton Town playing at home to Manchester City in the next round. The "cup and up" double hasn't been done since West Bromwich Albion pulled it off in 1931.

Penticton V's Given Welcome In Berlin

BERLIN (CP) — Penticton Vs, who will represent Canada at the world hockey championships in West Germany later this month, arrived here Monday night by air.

They will meet a selected team of Canadians, Germans and Swedes in West Berlin's Sportpalast in two friendly matches Wednesday and Friday.

Sports editors described the matches as biggest hockey event here sinie the end of the war.

Earlier, the Vs spent two hours in Duesseldorf.

Representatives of the Canadian embassy in Bonn, scores of West German hockey fans and a British military band gave the Canadians a warm welcome.

MARLENE TIES

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Five teams, including two previous winners and last year's medalist, tied for medal honors Monday in the annual mixed foursomes two-ball golf tournament at the Everglades Club.

Pat Lesser, Seattle, Wash., and Bob Sweeny, Palm Beach, had 35-36—71 over the 5,913-yard course where par is 36-35—71. Last year they won medalist honors with 73.

Others who posted par 71s Monday included Marlene Stewart, Fonthill, Ont., and Hobart Manley, Jr., Savannah, Ga., who won in 1953, 32-39—71.

Eighteen hole rounds will be played each day with the finals on Friday.

Has Slight Lead

OTTAWA (CP)—Quebec had a slight lead on Ontario in family allowances at the end of 1954.

This was shown in a return tabled Monday in the Commons by Health Minister Martin. Payments last December totalled $30,842,458 of which $9,750,617 went to Quebec and $9,332,516 to Ontario.

At Dec. 1 there were 2,176,130 families receiving payments for 5,104,662 children.

Referred to Board

TORONTO (CP) — City council Monday voted to leave the question of fluoridation of the city's water supply with the board of health.

The decision overruled a board of control suggestion that a plebiscite of the metropolitan area be taken on fluoridation.

COLD JOB

There may be colder jobs, but the one Ralph Persia, of Thorold, has not only takes the cake but puts the frosting on it, too. Here, Ralph, a Welland Canal diver, is shown descending the ladder through a cluster of icebergs for a frigid underwater inspection of a bridge repair job near Thorold, Ont. Down the better part of an hour, he said the icy water quickly pushed in his rubber suit and was almost as bad as a bath in ice water. It's an experience he might like to recall next July. Parachutes Safely From Disabled Jet Believed to be the second man to parachute successfully from a Vampire jet, F/O G. E. Gilroy, of the 430 Toronto RCAF auxiliary squadron, landed in a field three miles from Picton, Ont., after a drop of 3,000 feet. The Vampire is not equipped with an ejection seat and Gilroy, seen above, had to fly the plane upside down and drop out of the cockpit. On week-end firing scheme with the squadron, Gilroy was returning to Trenton from the air-to-ground range at South Bay when the engine flamed out.

TACHENS LEFT IN RUINS BY WAR

A little orphan stands crying in the ruins of a building on Kinmen Island, north of the Tachens, after it had been blasted by an artillery attack by Chinese Communists from the mainland 10 miles away. At top, a refugee carries her child on her back as others look through the rubble for their personal belongings. Evacuation of all the Tachens is now completed with 30,000 people removed. Only a handful elected to stay on the islands. (Central Press Canadian).

Baking, Milling Firms in Britain Start Feuding

LONDON (CP) — Purchases of Canadian flour direct from Canada appear to have started a battle between two of Britain's biggest baking and milling firms.

Allied Bakeries Ltd., owned by Canadian Garfield Weston and users of one-fifth of the flour consumed in the United Kingdom, started buying Canadian flour 18 months ago when cereals were decontrolled.

PRICE, QUALITY FACTORS

"We are not going to be held to ransom for flour," explained a Weston group spokesman, indicating the firm's fear of dependence on British millers for both domestic and Canadian wheat flour.

"Our purchases in Canada, which totalled about 25 per cent of all our flour requirements last year, were due to price and quality. We plan to continue as long as those factors hold good." Total U.K. purchases of Canadian flour last year were worth more than $25,000,000.

Allied Bakeries represents 72 bakeries and more than 640 shops. The firm has just added a £2,900,000 string of tea and confectionery shops, and outbid Ranks for a £250,000 chain. Ranks has been buying busily in the north of England and in Wales.

"Customers just wouldn't like bread made without Canadian flour," an Allied Bakeries spokesman said. The giant concern does its own blending.

BLACKLIST 40,000

False Teeth Often Have a Certain Odor!

Polident is the specially designed cleanser that keeps false teeth—and breath—clean and fresh always. Follow these simple rules.

1. Never use a brush on them! Your dental plates are much softer than natural teeth. Brushing wears down fitting ridges so they get loose.

2. Never use soap or toothpaste! They can leave film which collects bacteria and food particles, a major cause of offensive "Denture Breath."

3. Use a soaking-type cleanser made for false teeth only . . . Polident! Polident is the denture cleanser recommended by more dentists than any other. No brushing, no handling of soapy plates that can slip and break. Polident gets where a brush can't reach. Best of all, Polident always leaves false teeth odor free. Get the world's largest selling denture cleanser, Polident, at your drug counter.

Fluoridation Helps Prevent Tooth Decay

OTTAWA (CP) — It has been proved definitely that fluoridation of water helps prevent tooth decay, Health Minister Martin said in a return tabled Monday in the Commons.

He said one part per 1,000,000 of fluoride in water supply is 65-per-cent effective.

This had been proved by research in Canada and the United States, including a study during the last eight years by the health department in co-operation with the Ontario health department, the city of Stratford, and the Ontario counties of Lambton and Brant.

CHARGE DISMISSED

HAMILTON (CP)—A charge of wounding with intent to maim against Mrs. Mary Murney, 50, was dismissed in magistrate's court Friday. Mrs. Murney was charged with wounding her nephew, Sanford Soles, 37, of Hannon, Ont., Dec. 29. Soles suffered a scalp wound and was in hospital for 10 days. Soles testified the gun fired accidentally.

AGA KHAN IMPROVING

CAIRO (AP)—The Aga Khan Monday night was reported improving from a respiratory infection but still confined to bed. A medical bulletin said the condition of his heart was satisfactory. The 77-year-old leader of the Moslem Ismaili sect has been in bed in a hotel here since Thursday suffering from what has been described as a series of heart attacks.

DUPEL MINES has acquired the important copper discoveries made late last fall in the Hindon Township, about 12 miles northwest of the popular summer resort of Minden, Ontario.

The holdings comprise a group of 36 claims, in a solid block, totalling about 1800 acres. The following are excerpts from a report on the property made by A. S. Bayne, B.Sc., P. Eng., the engineer in charge of development.

"The dissemination of copper minerals throughout the rock is a very favourable condition for the delineation of a substantial tonnage of ore over the good widths and great length of formation in which commercial copper exists."

"The amount of evidence yielded by only brief prospecting and the limited amount of work done, proves this copper deposit to be of sufficient importance to warrant extensive exploration development."

"Pits have been blasted in the outcrop over widths of 20 to 150 feet across the strike intervals of from 30 to 600 feet for a total length of approximately 2245 feet."

Two zones parallel and lying over half a mile apart, have been established. The diagram details the main west zone. Exploration involving additional rock trenching and thorough diamond drilling is now getting underway.

These discoveries could have far-reaching impact if successfully developed. Not only would locations assure most favourable operating costs, but the successful mine development would open a whole new area for intensive mineral exploration.

IMMEDIATE DEVELOPMENT ASSURED

$165,000 was recently placed in the treasury for preliminary development, and the company is assured adequate funds for its initial programme.

With Pride, Hope Britons Welcome A-Power Program

'Pubs' and Papers Excited By Development Proposal

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain today welcomed the advent of her "atomic era" with a mixture of pride and hope.

People all over the country saw Britain "taking the lead" in a new pioneering development as the government disclosed its intention of switching over from coal to atomic power to supply industrial and domestic electricity. The "sense of excitement" admitted by Fuel Minister Geoffrey Lloyd as he announced the atomic plan to the House of Commons Tuesday throbbed through homes and "pubs" and was reflected anew in newspaper headlines today.

In the largest-scale nuclear power program yet drawn up by any country, Britain will put 12 atomic generating stations into operation in the next 10 years. By 1975 the electric power output from atomic plants is expected to reach a level just below the present generating capacity of all Britain's present conventional plants, according to the government's announcement.

Britain has only a modest program in atomic arms. Though there is recognition here of the necessity of maintaining a stockpile of powerful weapons to safeguard the West, many Britons nevertheless rejoice that the government's imagination-inspiring new program is aimed at "good rather than evil."

Lloyd's announcement in the House of Commons and the government white paper he presented seems to have kindled a new glow of national pride.

Propose Tunnels To Let Penguins Cross Highways

HOBART, Australia (CP)—The little Tasmanian community of Bruny Island is debating how it can solve its traffic problem—too many penguins on the roads.

One proposal the local authorities are studying is the laying of pipes under the roads as "subterranean penguin crossings." Skeptics, doubting that penguins would take easily to subways, suggest low fences along the roadsides.

Questioning Of Chauffeur May Solve Killing

NEW YORK (AP) — Police arrested a slender chauffeur Tuesday and said they were hopeful that questioning of the man would lead to solution of the Serge Rubenstein murder.

Herman Scholz, 50, a rental limousine driver, readily admitted that he plotted two years ago to kidnap Rubinstein, multi-millionaire draft dodger, police reported.

Late Tuesday night Alexander Herman, an assistant district attorney, said:

"If I wanted to at this time I could not identify anyone, but I am hopeful through Scholz of obtaining information leading to the identity of the perpetrator or perpetrators."

No charges were placed immediately against Scholz, however.

SEARCH HOUSE

After Scholz was picked up Tuesday more than 65 detectives swarmed through his home on Long Island. There, the officers said, they found a number of weapons, surgical tape, venetian blind cord and clippings about the Rubinstein murder of 20 days ago.

The wealthy financial manipulator was found bound, gagged and murdered on the floor of his palatial Fifth avenue home. He had been tied with venetian blind cord and gagged with surgical tape.

Police said Scholz, who had been trailezd for days, admitted plotting with a confederate two years ago to kidnap Rubinstein and hold him for ransom. The plan fell through when the confederate was jailed for burglary.

The investigation had apparently been in the doldrums after a few days of intensive questioning of Rubinstein's business associates and rivals and his many girl friends. But authorities said after his arrest that Scholz had been under investigation since two days after the Jan. 27 murder.

Many Thousands Of Sumatran Homes Flooded

JAKARTA, Indonesia (Reuters) Whole villages have been swept away and tens of thousands of people left homeless in central Sumatra, where incessant rains over the last 10 days have caused the worst floods in the region's history.

Masses of people driven from their homes crowd the hills overlooking their inundated villages. Planes of the Indonesian air force are dropping emergency supplies to them.

Altogether, about 350,000 out of a total regional population of 430,000 have suffered from flooding. At least five have died.

KILLS SELF IN DESPAIR

COVENTRY, Eng. (Reuters)—Failure to win the football pools, Britain's big weekly gamble on the results of soccer matches, was blamed Tuesday for the suicide of a 55-year-old Ukrainian immigrant. Karpo Waschtschnuk was said to have spent £5 of his wages every week on the pools.

Seven Perish In Two Fires

IONIA, Mich. (AP)—A $100,000 fire hit a main business block early today before firemen had finished battling a house blaze that claimed the life of a three-year-old boy.

The later of the two fires destroyed a variety store and for a time threatened the entire business block.

The fires here came a few hours after six persons had died near Pontiac, Mich., in a blaze touched off when a 19-month-old boy tipped over a can of gasoline.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: Snow and some rain have again invaded the southern half of the province this morning, but are expected to end by noon today in the Windsor area and by evening in eastern sections, as slightly colder air edges down from the north. Skies will clear by tonight and Thursday will be mainly sunny and a little colder throughout most of the province.

Courageous U.S. Airman Rescued, Without Food, Sleep, for 3 Nights

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — A mighty happy guy arrived in Winnipeg Tuesday night.

Capt. Tommy Pittman was safe. Only five hours before he lay severely injured and helpless in a snowdrift in the northern Saskatchewan bush. He had been without food and without sleep for three nights and three days in subzero temperatures. His only shelter was his parachute. A new-type survival suit saved his life.

Captain Pittman was aboard the plane to test the survival suit.

His right leg was smashed. Both legs were frost bitten. His head was injured. Twenty feet away lay a rabbit he had shot but could not retrieve to eat because of his helpless condition.

He lay unnoticed in the snow, yelling at search planes overhead. He watched a fellow survivor of Saturday's crash of a U.S. Stratojet being rescued only a mile away.

Tuesday afternoon the ordeal ended. Searchers finally spotted Pittman and he was plucked from the snowdrift by a helicopter.

"I'm mighty glad to be here."

How did he feel?

"Oh, I've got a few aches and pains here and there but otherwise I'm all right."

Pittman, a native of Fabens, Tex., was one of three who survived when the Stratojet bomber from 22nd Bomber Wing at Riverside, Calif., exploded while flying 35,000 feet over northern Saskatchewan, 435 miles northwest of Winnipeg.

The pilot, Lt.-Col. Kenneth G. McGrew, 33, was rescued a few hours after the crash. Capt. Lester E. Epton, 33, the co-pilot, was located Saturday morning and rescued by an RCAF para-rescue team from Winnipeg.

Maj. Robert Dowdy, 31, the navigator, was killed. His body was found in the wreckage Monday.

McGrew and Epton were treated in hospital for frost bites, cuts and bruises and flown to Riverside Tuesday.

The Stratojet was on the return leg of a polar training flight in company with four other aircraft when the jet engines in the right wing caught fire. The crew managed to extinguish the fire but moments later the plane exploded.

H-BOMB COULD KILL ALL PEOPLE FOR 140 MILES

Bikini Test Showed Vast Area Dangerous

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—If a hydrogen bomb of the type the United States tested almost a year ago should explode in a populated area, the drifting poison cloud could kill all exposed persons up to 140 miles down-wind.

Perhaps five to 10 persons would die out of every 100 as far as 190 miles away in the direction the wind was blowing. This deadly zone of radiation would be in the shape of a long cigar up to 20 miles wide.

There would be serious danger in an area of 7,000 square miles.

But, the Atomic Energy Commission said Tuesday in reporting these estimates, any kind of shelter would reduce the peril.

HUGE CONTAMINATION

After an intensive study of the radiation effects from the H-bomb detonated at Bikini atoll in the Pacific last March 1, the AEC reported that:

1. An area about 140 by 20 miles was so contaminated by radioactive particles from the drifting cloud that no one in it would have survived unless he fled to shelter or took protective measures.

2. At a point 10 miles down-wind from the detonation, the radiation was estimated at 5,000 roentgens, the scale used to measure radiation, for 36 hours after the poison rain had drifted past. For comparison, 450 roentgens in one day can be fatal.

3. But if a similar explosion occurred where people had warning, took shelter, were careful about food and water and cleaned up as soon as possible, the casualty list could be cut sharply. The intensity of radiation would be cut by half within an ordinary frame house, even more in one of brick or stone. A basement would reduce radiation effect to one-tenth. And an old-fashioned cyclone cellar, covered with three feet of earth, would be completely safe "in even the most heavily contaminated area."

4. At 160 miles away contamination might bring death to 50 per cent of the people who failed to take protective measures; five to 10 per cent might die at distances as far as 190 miles.

The total amount of radiation received by North American residents from all conventional and hydrogen atomic tests up to now—including those conducted by the U.S., Russia and Britain—is only about that received in a normal chest x-ray, the AEC asserted.

WATCHES SON PERISH

HEBER, Utah (AP)—A legless father watched helplessly from his wheelchair Tuesday as his son lay bleeding to death on the kitchen floor. Gary N. Hiatt, 15, had crawled upstairs to the kitchen from the basement after an unexplained explosion ripped off one of his arms and sent fragments into his stomach and legs. He died from loss of blood less than 30 minutes later.

Premier Frost Says Federal Plan Best Jobless Solution

TORONTO (CP)—A federal plan under which provinces and municipalities would carry out development projects with a percentage grant from the federal government is the best unemployment cure, the Ontario legislature has been told.

Premier Frost, in the debate on the speech from the throne, said Tuesday he could see no better solution to the problem than that proposed by the federal government in 1945.

"No one level of government can deal with this alone," the premier said. His 90-minute speech followed that of Liberal Leader Farquhar Oliver.

Mr. Frost said the federal government could help relieve the strain on municipalities caused by unemployment by extending unemployment insurance benefits to 18 months or two years.

Throne-speech debate continues today. Thursday the House hears the report of the legislature committee on highways irregularities from chairman A. Kelso Roberts, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto St. Patrick.

Premier Frost said Tuesday the government during the last two years has improved administration and methods in the highways department, which operated on a defective basis for more than 30 years.

He said highway contract overpayments in no way implied dishonesty.

Say Communists Are Massing Opposite Matsu and Quemoy

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Nationalist Chinese political quarters spoke today of a threatening Communist build-up opposite the Nationalists' Matsu and Quemoy islands. Defence ministry sources said they couldn't confirm it.

Most quarters here feel the Reds might unleash a big bombardment of Quemoy before the Manila pact powers open their conference in Bangkok Feb. 23.

There were no reports of any military action today in the offshore islands from Nanchi in the north to Quemoy.

Sources here feel the lull is an ominous one. The Reds are conceded the capability of attacking any and all of the off-shore outposts.

CHARGE KIDNAPPING

Red China meanwhile accused the United States of "crimes against humanity" for helping the Nationalists evacuate the Tachens.

In a blistering attack on what it called American "armed intervention in China's internal affairs," Peiping radio charged that U. S. Marines killed and kidnapped the inhabitants of the Tachens and reduced the Tachens to ruins by applying the "scorched earth" policy.

Blame Gangland For Bomb in Car Of B.C. Man

VANCOUVER (CP)—A man who may have been the latest target on an underworld death list lay in a guarded hospital room today after being severely injured in the bomb blast which destroyed his car.

Jack Leanhard, 38-year-old salesman, was reported in satisfactory condition following a successful midnight operation to save his torn right leg. He also suffered facial lacerations.

Detectives said Leanhard's late-model car was shattered Tuesday night by a bomb placed next to the battery. It was believed wired to the ignition.

Officials refused to voice any theories but their choice of investigators indicated they are working on the possibility that the assassination attempt may be linked with two other gangland-style attacks here, one of them successful.

Leanhard had just gone to the car, parked next to his house, garage wre blown away.

Partly-Refined Radium Found Vial's Contents

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCMP said today investigation of a mysterious vial of radioactive material at Port Arthur indicates it is partially-refined radium which is not dangerous unless handled over a long period.

A spokesman said the vial, now in the radium vault of the Port Arthur General Hospital, was obtained by Angus MacDonald in Hengeloo, Holland while serving with the Canadian Army Provost Corps during the Second World War.

The spokesman said the RCMP is aware of the hospital's request that the vial be removed, adding that it is probably considerably less dangerous than the hospital's own radium supply stored in the same vault.

No charges against MacDonald are planned, the spokesman said.

Auditorium Owners Ask End To Music Fees

OTTAWA (CP) — Abolition of performing rights fees on copyrighted work in Canada for a five-year trial period was proposed today.

The Auditorium Owners and Operators Association Inc., whose members operate dancing and other auditoriums in Ontario, said as users of copyrighted music they are "disgusted" with the present situation.

In a sharply-worded brief to the three-man royal commission studying Canada's copyright, patent and trade mark laws, the association was highly critical of performing rights societies who license performances and collect authors' fees on copyrighted work.

WOULD TRY ABOLITION

It suggested the performing right fee be abolished entirely for five years, after which the situation could be reviewed by a competent government-appointed authority.

It said this would influence publishers to pay more attention to Canadian talent, "top the hundreds of thousands of dollars that now flow across the border," and reduce operating costs for such publicly-owned corporations as the CBC, which pays about $175,000 a year in performing rights fees.

The auditorium operators said "complete confusion" surrounds attempts to establish ownership of copyright. Performing rights societies should be made to mark their music as to ownership.

ASK PROBE OF SOCIETIES

They told the commission, headed by Chief Justice J. L. Ilsley of Nova Scotia, that "no investigation into copyright and performing right would be complete without an investigation into the internal workings of the two performing rights societies" in Canada—the Composers, Authors and Publishers Association and BMI-Canada Ltd.

"Very little information is given out by these societies as to what happens to the hundreds of thousands of dollars that they collect annually from Canadian music users," their brief said.

No member of the association was aware of any instance "where a Canadian composer or author has received monies of any significant amount from either of these performing rights societies."

Atomic Test Again Postponed

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Cautious atomic testers hoped today to play a third attempt to pry the lid off Operation Teapot, the new nuclear series which has been twice delayed by shifting winds.

The second postponement Tuesday night pointed up the Atomic Energy Commission's concern for public safety from radiation fallout. With winds of up to 100 miles an hour forecast at higher altitudes, test officials feared a possible threat to the southeast corner of Nevada.

The opening shot had been set for Tuesday morning, but was postponed then because of high northerly winds.

A meeting today may determine whether the tower blast will be rescheduled for pre-dawn Thursday.

HOUSE POLICY ON IMMIGRATION IS UNDER FIRE

Opposition Says Govt. Plans for Little Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Federal immigration policy and practice has come under opposition fire in the Commons.

The first salvo was fired Tuesday by Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) who said the government is "planning for a little Canada" through its reduction of immigration.

He presented a motion calling for a Commons vote of non-confidence in the government on the stated grounds:

"The immigration policy of the government is not clear, consistent or co-ordinated, and is not in conformity with the needs or responsibilities of Canada and in its administration denies simple justice to Canadians and non-Canadians alike."

CCF and Social Credit members spoke in support of the Conservative motion, which has not yet come to a vote. Indications are that the debate will continue for another day or more. Today, however, the House deals with private members' resolutions.

WANTS MORE PEOPLE

Mr. Fulton proposed "a planned, vigorous policy of selective immigration to bring in more people."

Given a healthy, growing economy—which he said the government has done little to provide—Canada could absorb more people "without any adverse effect on employment. . . ."

Unique Operation Saves Man's Life

TORONTO (CP) — An 85-year-old man, who several weeks ago was dying of exhaustion because of an uncontrollable threshing of his left arm and leg, will leave hospital soon after an operation performed here for the first time.

Dr. William J. Horsey, a young surgeon at St. Michael's Hospital, decided to operate.

He made an opening into McPhee's skull to reach the peduncle, a sort of stem down which nerves travel to the trunk and limbs.

Slowly, movement has returned to Mr. McPhee's artifically-paralyzed limbs, and doctors believe he will be well enough to leave hospital soon.

-76 AT ALASKAN TOWN

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—The temperature dropped to 76 degrees below zero at Umiat, Alaska, Tuesday to tie the all-time record for cold weather in the territory. Weather bureau officials said it was the coldest recorded in Alaska since the mercury dropped to -76 at Tawana, on the Yukon river, in 1886.

World Headed for War and Extinction Or Else Peace and Material Paradise

MONTREAL (CP) — Mankind lives in the shadow of a "mushroom cloud" while even a brief period of real peace could bring a "material paradise," a high United Nations official said Tuesday night.

"Even a few years of international peace will make possible a frontal attack on the inequalities and injustices that are everywhere so apparent," said Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, director general of the UN's technical assistance administration.

"A serious, united, determined effort to end these shameful conditions by the application of even our present knowledge could, in a moment as history measures time, turn this world into a material paradise that would surpass the wildest dreams of our most utopian prophets.

"Imagine what could be achieved in human welfare by even 10 years during which the energy, skill and money that now are being used for military purposes were devoted to decent and constructive ends. And as present suffering was gradually erased by such a program peace itself would become more secure."

Former Canadian under-secretary of state for external affairs, Dr. Keenleyside was addressing the McGill University school of social work, the first speaker in a special series of six weekly lectures.

He expressed the hope that the terrors of the hydrogen bomb, which already could destroy civilization around the world, will "frighten us into sanity" and bring continuing peace.

"Humanity is on the verge of war and extinction, or alternatively, of peace and unparalleled progress," he said.

Dr. Keenleyside declared that "no peace can be deemed secure so long as over half the population of the world is ignorant, diseased and oppressed," and glaring inequalities in health and income remained among countries.

After touching on various specific enterprises of his administration, Dr. Keenleyside said: "There is some gain for peace, and often a very considerable gain, in the greater understanding that comes from working together on common problems."

Three Anti-Reds Holding Legation In Bern Give Up

Surrender Without Battle To Swiss Police Officers

By LYNN HEINZERLING

Captain Hermann Alboth of the Swiss army said there were only three men in the building and the fourth man was "only a bluff."

Police officers who entered the legation after the three men walked out, ending their dramatic 42-hour occupation of the legation said the building was strewn with torn-up Communist propaganda material. Otherwise, they said, the building was not seriously damaged.

Earlier the Socialist Press Service of Switzerland reported that the anti-Communists had found documents in the legation which showed that it was "a spy centre against the Swiss."

REFUSED NAMES

The three men were between 27 and 35 years of age. They refused to give their names. Police said the leader of the band told them his father had been killed by the Russians in Romania.

The group, which killed the legation chauffeur when he resisted them early Tuesday, had vowed to hold the legation in this capital of neutral Switzerland until their Red homeland freed five resistance leaders from imprisonment behind the Iron Curtain.

The group had been given an ultimatum to get out or fight. Swiss tank officers surveyed the legation area and rifle-armed troops ringed the grounds. The ultimatum, first set for 11 a. m., was extended to 4 p. m. (10 a. m. EST) after the men showed their first signs of giving up.

Surrender of the men in face of a police ultimatum ended an occupation of the Romanian legation which started at 10 p. m. Monday night. The men forced their way into the legation, held several attaches and their families prisoner for several hours and fatally wounded the legation chauffeur.

The men will face trial in Switzerland for the killing of the chauffeur. It was understood, however, that the Swiss government, as part of the capitulation deal, had indicated that extradition to Romania, as demanded by the Communist Romanian government, would not be granted. The surrender came after a Roman Catholic priest visited two of the men who had requested him in the legation.

The Romanian charge d'affaires, Emeric Stoffel, said his government would demand compensation from the Swiss government for damages to the legation and the loss of its use.

REAUME WILL RUN

WINDSOR (CP) — Arthur J. Reaume, Liberal MPP for Essex North, announced Tuesday from Toronto that he will seek re-election to his seat in the next provincial election.

Deer in Toronto Kills Dog, Cat, Upsets Child

By this time it had killed a dog and a cat with its flailing kicks, knocked over a child and upturned garbage cans as it fled through backyards and over fences.

Wallace, using a strong spotlight, found the deer in a garage. The men worked 40 minutes to get three nooses on the doe and carted her away in the Humane Society's ambulance.

Montreal Boy's Death Believed Accidental

MONTREAL (CP) — Police awaited the result of an autopsy today before continuing their investigation into the death of little Richard Guibeau, found dead Tuesday in a snow-covered field in the city's north end.

Homicide detectives said a preliminary investigation indicated no foul play was involved in the death of the 2½-year-old youngster. But they withheld final judgment until an autopsy is performed.

"We have reason to believe that the child's death was accidental but we are not ruling out the possibility of foul play until an autopsy is completed at the morgue," Det.-Lt. Guy Francoeur, deputy chief of the homicide squad, said Tuesday night.

1,200 HELPED HUNT

Richard's disappearance Monday afternoon touched off one of the largest searches in the city's history. Some 1,200 neighbors joined police in a methodical search of nearby houses and fields in a 12-square-mile area.

The body was found by one of the volunteers, Benoit Dibe, 37, who found footprints in the deep snow and followed them. Near a heavy growth of small trees and bushes, he found the boy, his left arm outstretched and the mitten gone from his hand.

At first, both police and the boy's father, Louis Guibeau, thought the boy had been murdered. The father led searchers in prayer where the body was found.

PSI Benefits May Be Available On Individual Basis Says Pres.

Dr. Reginald Anderson, Belleville physician and president of the Physicians' Service Incorporated, said here yesterday that PSI benefits will shortly be made available on an individual basis.

The enlarged program will be introduced "before too many months have passed," he said. However, the new scheme will be hedged by "various limitations."

At present PSI services are available on a group basis to employees in all branches of business and industry in Ontario.

Dr. Anderson was speaking to the Belleville Kiwanis Club during a symposium on health at the club centre. He did not enlarge further on his statement. Other members of the symposium, were Dr. Harold Craig, city dentist, and Miss Dorothy Connor, nurse-in-charge of the local Victorian Order of Nurses service.

Dr. Anderson centred his remarks on the efforts of the medical profession to emphasize the stature of the general practitioner to the public.

STANDING DECLINED

The standing of the family doctor has "somewhat declined" due to an increased tendency on the part of the public for specialized treatment for ailments. "This," Dr. Anderson said, "is a mistake." The general practitioner can attend to 85 per cent of the troubles "the flesh is heir to," he claimed.

"In recent years organized medicine has attempted to raise the stature of the general practitioner in several ways. A primary move was the establishing of the Ontario College of General Practitioners, a member of whom can be regarded as a man in whom the public can place its trust and confidence," he said.

Another problem being met by the profession is the investigation of grievances of patients who feel they have been overcharged for treatment or received inadequate treatment.

A grievance committee now is established in each local area in Ontario to handle cases of disgruntled patients. A dissatisfied patient may appeal to the committee and subsequently his case will be heard in the presence of the doctor against whom he brings the complaint.

"To my knowledge, in the case of over-billing it was adjusted quickly and to the patient's advantage."

If dissatisfied with the local committee's findings the patient may take his case to a central committee and if that fails the patient is directed to obtain legal aid. If the committee thinks the doctor is at fault legal aid will be supplied.

The city's preventive dental health program in city public schools was "adequate," he said, and the next step was fluoridation of the water supply.

NO CONTROVERSY

There is no controversy on fluoridation on the scientific level, Dr. Craig said. "The facts on fluoridation now are available."

"It is not, we feel, up to our profession to get into a big row over fluoridation. Rather is it up to the lay people," he said.

Dr. Craig also mentioned of the city's separate schools' refusal to institute the public school dental program in its schools.

"We lack the support of the separate schools in our program" and " . . . it is obvious in the children from the Separate schools we (city dentists) have seen in our offices."

Miss Connor backgrounded the work of the VON organization to the meeting, emphasizing the organization's slogan: "Service for all, regardless of color, creed or financial status."

The speakers were thanked by Frank Domenico.

Plainclothesmen Back to School

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton's police department is sending its plainclothesmen back to school to bring them up to date on the latest methods and techniques in police work.

Detectives, morality officers and members of the identification branch spend one day a week attending lectures by the department's senior officers and other experts in their fields.

The school was organized by chief constable Len Lawrence and personnel inspector Gerald Reed who claim it's the only in-service school of its kind in the country.

During the three-month course, the officers will hear lectures on such subjects as interrogation, sources of information, surveillance, criminal law, homicide investigations, fraud, raids and auto thefts.

Dial System Will Be Cut In On April 17th

All telephones in Belleville will be changed to dial operation early Sunday morning, April 17, G. W. Proctor, Bell Telephone manager here, announced today. He said that all projects associated with the cutover are proceeding on schedule.

The entire program, which takes months to carry out, is arranged so that the actual cutover will cause virtually no interruption in service, Mr. Proctor said. At the time the dial system goes into service all Belleville numbers will be changed and the exchange names Woodland 2 and Woodland 8 will come into use.

To help make the transition as smooth as possible, a dial demonstration unit has been placed on display in the company's business office at 75 Bridge Street. Visitors to the office can listen to the dial tone, and can test their dialing skill by dialing a number which connects the two telephones at the display unit. As they dial, they can watch the dial switches in the display actually move in succession to form the electrical path to complete the call, making the second telephone ring. Demonstrations will be given between 8.30 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, for the next few weeks.

STUDENTS TO LEARN

Students in Belleville schools will learn about the dial system through the visits of Bell Telephone representatives who will present the motion picture, "The Dial Comes to Town" and give instruction, aided by portable dial equipment, on correct telephone usage.

Another phase of the work preparatory to the introduction of the dial system is a telephone survey designed to give people in this vicinity personal instruction in the use of the dial telephone, so that they will know how to obtain full benefit from their new telephone system when it goes into service. Seven Bell employees will spend several weeks calling each customer in the Belleville exchange area in turn. The city will be canvassed in this way, beginning on February 21. The rural areas served by Belleville exchange will be surveyed in the latter part of March.

Besides answering any questions customers have about the new system, those conducting the survey will allow telephone users to listen to the various "tones" — the "dial tone", which indicates that the equipment is ready to handle the call, the "busy signal", which tells the caller that the line is busy, the "ringing tone", which shows that the called persons' telephone is ringing, and the siren-like sound indicating that there is no such number as the one that has been dialed.

ALL SETS ADAPTED

Nearly all telephone sets have been adapted for dial operation or have been replaced by dial sets, Mr. Proctor said. The installation of the intricate equipment in the dial exchange building at the corner of Bridge and Church streets is well under way, and the rearrangement and extension of the network of outside wires and cables is progressing on schedule.

At the time of the cutover, all who have been waiting for telephones will receive service. The new telephone numbers for those who request service before March 8 will be contained in the next telephone directory, which will be delivered a few days before the changeover to the dial system and Woodland 2 and Woodland 8 numbers.

MISS CATHERINE FORD

One of the outstanding educators of the deaf on this continent, Miss Catherine Ford, former teacher and supervisor of professional training at the Ontario School for the Deaf, passed away in York County Hospital, Newmarket, on Tuesday morning, February 15.

Miss Ford joined the O.S.D. staff in 1908 and served as teacher, supervising teacher, and directress of professional training for 42 years until her retirement in 1950. She was specially trained for her work at the Clarke School, Northampton, Massachusetts, under Dr. Caroline Yale, and became the Canadian pioneer in the teaching of speech to deaf children. During her long and distinguished career at the O.S.D. she was responsible for the training of teachers as well as the supervision of their classroom work, and was much beloved by pupils and teachers alike.

The many honors bestowed upon Miss Ford in recognition of her contribution to her chosen profession include the following: Honorary Life Member of the Federation of Women Teachers' Associations of Ontario; Life Member of the Volta Speech Association for the Deaf; Life Member of the Association of Teachers and Instructors of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

On her retirement in June 1950, her colleagues and friends established the Catherine Ford Scholarship to be awarded annually to the two pupils in the senior grades of the Junior School who have made the greatest effort in Speech and Speech Reading and have achieved satisfactory progress. The respect in which she was held can best be expressed in the inscription on the Scholarship Plaque in the main hall of the O.S.D. and which reads as follows:

> To Commemorate the > Establishment of the
> Catherine Ford Scholarship
> In Recognition of 42 Years'
> Service as a Devoted Teacher
> And Friend of the children > of this School
> "All Her Talents She Gave, > Withholding None"
> Ontario School for the Deaf,
> June 1950.

Miss Ford was formerly a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville.

She is survived by her sister Mrs. Wesley Boyd, Newmarket, and two brothers Hugh A. Ford of Stettler, Alberta, and Charles Ford of Windsor.

MRS. FRANCIS BURKITT
(R.R. 2, Consecon)

Mrs. Hester L. Burkitt, 5th concession of Hillier township, R.R. 2, Consecon, died early on Wednesday, February 16th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ewart Harns. She was in her 82nd year.

The deceased was born in Marmora township, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Amos M. Caverly, and lived in Marmora township prior to moving to Consecon district 43 years ago. She died after an illness of one year's duration.

She is survived by her husband, Francis Burkitt; a daughter, Mrs. Ewart (Ida) Harns, of Hillier and a son, William E. Burkitt, Ameliasburg.

Also surviving her are a sister, Mrs. Edward (Annie) Blakely, Bannockburn; three grandchildren, Douglas Harns, Muriel Minaker and Harry Burkitt, and three great grandchildren, Lora Minaker, Larry Minaker and Deborah Burkitt.

The deceased was a member of Burr's United Church and the Women's Association.

Britton Maker Wins Top Prize In Scotland

Several times winner at the British Empire Dairy Show at Belleville and also at the C.N.E. Leslie Adair of Britton in Western Ontario has again demonstrated his ability as a cheese maker by carrying off first prize at the Scottish Dairy Show being held this week in Scotland, Glasgow.

Mr. Adair won the International Cheese Award at the Scottish dairy show.

Canadian cheese makers did well at the overseas cheese show with three Ontario makers finishing among the first six. William Jeffrey of Mount Elgin, near Woodstock, won third prize and David Dean of Delta in Eastern Ontario placed sixth. There were four entries from Ontario at the show.

Charles N. Heath, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, noted that his organization encourages Ontario entrants in the overseas show by paying shipping charges on show cheese, payment of entry fees and other out of pocket expenses of the makers.

Police Blotter

Loss of a wallet containing personal papers and a considerable sum of money, theft of 200 gallons of fuel oil from a storage tank and three minor motor accidents comprised the more important occurrences reported to police during the past 24 hours.

Police were also informed that 200 gallons of fuel oil in a storage tank at the rear of the Provincial Tire store on Front St. had disappeared.

IN MEMORIAM

WATSON. — In loving memory of a dear dad, James Theodore Watson who passed away February 16th, 1953.
—Always remembered by son Floyd and daughter-in-law Alida. F16

GREEN. — In loving memory of my dear wife, Margaret Elenor Green, who passed away February 16th, 1954.

Since you've gone first and I remain
To walk the road alone
I live in memory's garden, dear
With many happy days we've known.
I hear your voice, I see your smile
Though blindly may I grope
The memory of your helping hand
Still buoys me on with hope.
We've known so much happiness,
We've had our cup of joy
And memory is one gift of God
That death cannot destroy.
Since you've gone first and I remain
One thing I would have you do,
Walk slowly down that long, long path
For I will follow you.

—Your ever loving husband, Murney. F16

GREEN. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Margaret Elenor Green, who passed away on February 16th, 1954.

If I had all the world to give
I would give it, yes, and more
To hear her voice and see her smile
And greet her at our door.
But all I can do, dear Mother,
Is go and tend your grave
And leave behind tokens of love
To the best mother God ever made.

—Ever remembered by son John and family. F16

GREEN. — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Margaret E. Green, who passed away February 16th, 1954.

No matter when we needed you, Mom
You were always near
To help us with our troubles
And wash away our tears.
When your time came to leave us
We couldn't understand
There was nothing we could do,
Just watch, and hold your hand.
You couldn't see our hopeless tears
Or know that we were near;
You couldn't hear our prayers to God
To let you stay, Mom dear.
We have lost, but God has gained
The most wonderful mother the world contained;
So, please, you that still have your mother
Cherish her with care
For you'll never know the heartache
'Till you see her vacant chair.

—Lovingly remembered and sadly missed by daughter Audrey, Gord and Carolyn. F16

GREEN. — In loving memory of my dear mother, Margaret Green, who passed away February 16th, 1954.

She bade no one her last farewell,
She said goodbye to none.
The heavenly gates were opened,
A loving voice said come.
We often sit and think of you,
The things you used to say,
We wonder why you had to die
Without a chance to say goodbye.
Though out of sight you're ever
Still missed, still loved, still mine.
You live with us in memory
Until the end of time.

—Sadly missed by son Murney, Clara and family. F16

GREEN. — In loving memory of my dear mother, Margaret E. Green, who passed away February 16th, 1954.

We little knew when we awoke that morn
The sorrow the day would bring;
For the call was sudden, the shock severe
To part with one we loved so dear.
Sometimes it's hard to understand
Why some things have to be,
But in His wisdom, God has planned
Beyond our power to see.
God gave us strength to fight it
And courage to bear the blow
But what it cost to lose you, Mom
No one will ever know.

—Sadly missed by son Gordon. F16

GREEN. — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Margaret Green, who passed away February 16th, 1954.

Her charming ways and smiling face
Are a pleasure to recall.
She had a kindly word for each
And died beloved by all.

—Ever remembered by Peter, Marion and grandchildren Peter, Bobbie and Kathy. F16

Brothers Found

AJAX, Ont. (CP) — Two young brothers, missing from their Ajax home since Saturday, were picked up by provincial police Tuesday night on a highway near Bracebridge, 10 miles to the north.

PRODUCE MARKET

The egg market was firm with offerings light and demand good.

Quotations provided by the Dominion department of agriculture: Eggs, graded, in fibre cases: A large 40; A medium 39; A small 34; B 32; C 26. Wholesale to retail: A large 45; A medium 44; A small 39; B 37; C 31.

Butter solids: Ont., first grade 61.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Industrials were strong but the rest of the stock market eased narrowly today in light early afternoon trade.

Papers, utilities, constructions, liquors and manufacturers led industrials to a moderate advance. Federal Grain jumped $3 to $35 by 1 p. m. EST and Canada Permanent Mortgage climbed $4 to $95. Ahead $1 or more were Algoma, Burns B. and Canada Steamship.

Base metals, western oils and golds eased but losses in individual issues were small.

Campbell Red Lake and Lamaque lezd golds down. In uraniums Gunnar dropped 25 cents to $15 and the warrants 50 cents to $7.75. Algom and Consolidated Denison were also lower.

Forced Off Road

HAILEYBURY (CP) — Nineteen men from Petawawa army camp, en route here to attend a military funeral, escaped injury Tuesday when their bus skidded, plunged 190 feet down an embankment and struck a telephone pole.

Sgt. Edward Cliche, the driver, told police he was trying to avoid an oncoming car when the bus was forced off the highway and skidded in loose snow. The soldiers continued here for the funeral of Pte. Donald Deline and returned to Petawawa in the damaged bus.

Joan of Lorraine Cast

In the picture are, left to right: Mrs. Joy Wonnacott, as Joan; Harry Mulhall, the Dauphin; Mrs. Philippa Faulkner, set designer; Syl Quinn, who played both Joan's father and the Bishop of Beauvais. Kneeling is Syd Rose, director of the play.

"Joan of Lorraine" will compete with plays from Peterborough, Ottawa and Hull during the festival. The winning play will receive the Calvert award and be eligible for entry in the Dominion Drama finals in Regina in May.

'Joan of Lorraine' Receives Boquets and Brickbats From Drama Festival Adjudicator

"Joan of Lorraine", Belleville Theatre Guild's opening night performance in the four day Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival received bouquets and brickbats Tuesday night in a 20-minute adjudication by British actor, producer and director, Andre Van Gyseghem.

Mr. Van Gyseghem paid measured tribute to the leading performers and complimented the whole company on a "lot of hard work for a very interesting play."

"I compliment you on the costumes and on the crowd scenes and for a very natural and compelling beginning," he said. "The armour was especially striking. On the whole the play was well worked out."

He levelled his heaviest criticism at "the massive sets in the final scenes, the positioning of which tends to interrupt the action and to lower the tension of the play."

FLAWS IN DICTION

He admonished almost everyone on certain flaws in diction and voice projection and criticized positioning of actors in certain scenes.

Mr. Van Gyseghem prefaced his adjudication with the remark that "I intend to treat a serious effort seriously" and that, "my criticisms are not intended to dampen the enthusiasm that is the backbone of theatre everywhere."

"Joan of Lorraine," Maxwell Anderson's modern theatre version of the story of "Joan of Arc" is the story of a theatrical company rehearsing the play. It was played without a curtain and actors, who appeared in the opening scenes in street clothes, were costumed gradually as the play progressed.

"I commend you on your choice of play," he said. "It was written by a craftsman of the theatre who wanted to write a Joan of Arc play but needed a "gimmick" to distinguish it from what he himself must have felt was an already superlative production.

"The "gimmick", of course, was setting the stage in front of the audience. I do not think it advances the play. I think Shaw's "Saint Joan" is better."

CRITICIZED SETS

"A great deal of care has been taken with the costumes," he said. "As for the sets, I liked them at the beginning of the play and less and less as the play went along. I do like to see the whole company taking part in a production. On the whole the play was well worked out."

Mr. Van Gyseghem said he was "overpowered by great geometrical patterns" in the final scene in which Joan awaits the executioner in prison. He would have preferred "a cold, plain background fading into nothingness."

He also criticized the "almost total darkness of Joan's final scene in prison." He termed the lack of lighting "awfully unfair to Joan."

Use of microphones for projection of Joan's "heavenly voices" was scored by Mr. Van Gyseghem for "breaking the feeling of the play and for spoiling the whole illusion."

"She has a lot right for the part," he said in complimenting her on her bearing, appearance, mobility and dignity.

"Her movements and gestures were simple and I liked that."

"Her voice was somewhat harsh and lacks variety," he continued. "When playing Joan she might have added more warmth to her voice. I didn't mind it at all when she was playing the actress, when it was right and easy for the part."

He also suggested that Joan might have shown more "blaze" in certain scenes and said that Mrs. Wonnacott "understood the part completely with her brain but not so completely with her heart."

"It was a very brave attempt."

SPEECH HANDLED NICELY

Ted Schwab, as the director, "stars beautifully with a gripping natural easy manner. But he should watch his diction. He tended to be careless with the ends of words in an attempt to be too natural."

"As the Inquisitor he was easier to hear. He provided a very good contrast between the two roles. I liked his speech on the 'magic' scene. He handled it very nicely."

He praised Joan Tanner's performance as "the very efficient stage manager. I have seen hundreds of them and I know the type well."

Lloyd Heaslip, as the fop from the Dauphin's court, "had a good voice but his gestures need polishing." As Father Massieu, Joan's confessor during imprisonment, Heaslip registered with "warmth and sincerity."

Doris Chips, as Aurore, the Dauphin's mistress, and Tessie, the assistant stage manager, was "very witty and very flighty but hard to hear."

Rod Ross, as Dunois, a general in the French army, was "convincing as a soldier. I believed him. I think, however, he could have shown that he enjoyed fighting a little more," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

Harold Bankier, as the Archbishop of Rheims, had "a strong, powerful voice and a tendency to sing his lines."

DAUPHIN VERY GOOD

Harry Mulhall, as the Dauphin, was "very good."

"He was loose and easy in his movements. His diction was good. He obviously has worked hard on the characterization. He had a tendency to miss the full impact of his comedy lines because he didn't point them just right," said Mr. Van Gyseghem. "But then, comedy is the hardest thing to do properly in the theatre."

Phil Flagler as George, Duke of Tremoille, "understood his part clearly as the power behind the throne. He gave a mature performance."

Syl Quinn, as Joan's father, was "too mournful for an angry French peasant." As the Bishop of Beauvais, Mr. Quinn gave a "paced" performance that the adjudicator liked.

Mr. Van Gyseghem spoke at length with members of the cast following his public adjudication. The audience responded warmly to his generous constructive criticism.

District Rotarians Mark Golden Anniversary of Club

Close to 260 Rotarians from widely-scattered points as Kingston and Toronto last night gathered in the Masonic Temple to join with Belleville Rotary in marking the golden jubilee of the Rotary organization.

Members were present from Campbellford, Colborne, Napanee, Picton, Stirling and Trenton while included in the guest list were Mayor Jack Both, Elmer Sandercock, M.P.P. and district-governor of Rotary, Basil Tippett of Toronto.

The evening was a full one with the busy program scheduled by chairman Harold Mott being carried through without a hitch. Following the turkey dinner Egerton Boyce and Jack Deacon started the ball rolling with community singing.

President of the club, Fred Adsett, then introduced the guests present and Mayor Both extended a welcome to those present on behalf of the city.

In a brief address District-Governor Basil Tippett noted the "remarkable" fact that all of the clubs present hailing Rotary's fiftieth year had an approximate average membership of 50. "Rotary," he said, "is a valuable organization, in that it provides "wonderful leadership." The anniversary year also could be a very full one in doubling the valuation of Rotary, he told the members.

Guest speaker at the banquet was Kenneth G. Partridge, Port Credit, Canadian representative to Rotary International.

Mr. Partridge backgrounded the organization of the international service club, describing the machinery of the club's headquarters in Chicago.

"The true Rotary spirit is the spirit of men," he said. A Rotarian must have faith in men, faith in his cause and faith in the good in men. Core of his remarks was the Rotary slogan: "He profits most, who serves the best."

The slogan, first coined in 1910 at the organization's convention in Chicago, has been the spirit of Rotary ever since.

"Rotary," he said, "is not a commercial organization. Rather must it be free of commercial action and follow the golden rule of life."

He went on to emphasize that profit from participating in Rotary's service is an inward thing. A Rotarian assumes a stewardship in Rotary and as such takes part in the activities of an organization that has "a workable formula for humanity." That formula must be followed by each Rotarian so that he will become proud of the organization's slogan.

Mr. Partridge was thanked by McLean Haig. In an eloquent address, Mr. Haig said that Rotary, now fifty years old, is only in its beginning. He pointed up to members the true spirit of the organization.

Other speakers through the evening were Wilfred Buckley, Stan Emerson, past district governors, and Oswald Scott. Entertainment highlighted the evening with vocal solos being rendered by Jack Deacon and Mrs. Lee Reidel. An outstanding contribution to the program was given by violinists Barnett and Raymond Taylor.

Toll Highways Are Distinct 'Possibility'

TORONTO (CP)—A committee of the Canadian Industrial Traffic League said Tuesday institution of toll highways in Canada is "a distinct possibility.'

The committee's report, presented at the league's annual meeting, said the success of toll roads in the United States "may have favorably impressed the (Canadian) public with the advantages of such a venture" and advised league members to prepare themselves for the possible inception of such roads in Canada.

Another report said there may be delays and congestion in St. Lawrence canals as a result of the seaway project "but this is not considered too serious a matter."

J. Mitchell of Montreal was elected president of the league.

Ottawa Fruit Warehouse Burns

OTTAWA (CP)—Oil-fed flames burning out of control Tuesday night destroyed a two-storey fruit warehouse on Ottawa's lower-town market place and menaced a business block on busy Rideau street.

Damage was estimated at $150,000 in the two-alarm blaze which brought out 15 pieces of fire-fighting equipment and injured four firemen, none seriously.

Mac Smith New President Of Conservatives

On Tuesday evening the annual meeting of the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association was held at the Kiwanis Centre with President John Lennox as chairman. Before relinquishing his seat he reviewed the work of the past year and thanked his fellow-officers for their co-operation. The minutes were read by Mr. Ray Gunsolus.

Mr. Harry Rollins conducted the election of officers for the coming year with the following results:— Honorary Presidents, W. E. Sandercock, G. Stokes, R. D. Arnott, Col. P. H. Wills, Col. A. P. Allen, Lee Grills, H. Rollins; Past President, John Lennox; President, Mac Smith; First Vice-Presidents, Norman Hickson, Ronald Cass; Secretary, E. Guss Porter; Treasurer, Joseph Shortt.

Mr. W. E. Sandercock, M. L. A., introduced the guest speaker, Rev. W. A. Downer, M.L.A., of Simcoe County, an Anglican clergyman.

Rev. Mr. Downer discussed the question, which was pertinent to an election year, "Why are we Conservatives?" Many varied answers were given to the question, but for his own part it was because he believed in the policies and principles of the party, and because the party had courageous leadership. They had brought irregularities into the open and had cleaned house. The Conservative administration had brought in mothers' allowances and in the opinion of the speaker should also have fathers' allowances to aid widowers left with families to care for. They had increased workmen's compensation and cut down the waiting time; they had given allowances for disabled persons and pensions for the aged and blind.

They had balanced their books and had not levied any new taxes in five years. Practically all the taxes are luxury taxes on liquor, gasoline, and amusement. They are going to pay half the cost of education this year so that no child need lack an education. Last year they gave 130 million dollars to municipalities to keep the rates down. Substantial grants had been given to hospitals.

"No government," said the speaker, "has been so lavish with the people of Ontario. We have paid eighty per cent of the cost of bridges. We have prohibited racial discrimination. In the Premier we have a man of vision with a capacity for leadership. The St. Lawrence Seaway will change things radically in Eastern Ontario.

Quoting from a U. S. publication called "Think" the speaker read a definition of Socialism as "Competition without prizes; economic warfare without victory; stagnation without hope; and statistics without end". The C. C. F. is going to be a factor in the next election, the speaker stated, and continued with a definition of Communism from the same publication as "Politics without principle; economics without ethics; destruction without distinction and life without hope".

Ray Gunsolus expressed the thanks of the members and stated it had been a great privilege to hear what the party had done.

Coffee and doughnuts were served by the ladies while a social visit was enjoyed.

URGE NEW JAIL

WHITBY (CP) — The basement kitchen in the 100-year-old Ontario county jail was described as a disgrace by a Supreme Court grand jury Tuesday.

Urging erection of a new jail, the jury maintained that money spent on the old building would be a misappropriation of public funds.

DRAMA FESTIVAL UNIQUE EVENT

The Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival which opened last night is an unique event in the life of this city.

For this week, at least, Belleville will be the theatrical capital of eastern Ontario as the best plays presented in this great area during the past year compete for honors and acclaim. The friendly competition being staged by the competing groups is a healthy rivalry which will profit not only the participating players, but theatre goers in Belleville and district and the theatre as an art form in this part of Canada.

Competition is the spice of life in the theatre as it is in all forms of human endeavor. The keenest kind of competition is assured for this festival with the best productions staged in Ottawa, Hull, Peterborough and Belleville scheduled for performance. The adjudicator, Mr. Andre Van Gyseghem, has stated that he is looking forward to his association with this festival because the plays have been well chosen and because they present interesting challenges for performers and technicians alike.

Mr. Van Gyseghem has also expressed his pleasure at finding that the three one-act plays scheduled for Saturday's matinee program are the products of Canadian playwrights. He has expressed a sincere and lively interest in the development of native playwrights and plays which deal with Canadian themes. His adjudications, based on a lifetime of work in live theatre, will add greatly to the success of this festival for both players and playgoers.

Those responsible for undertaking the herculean task of organizing and staging this festival here are to be congratulated on the success which seems assured.

The plays, players, and the adjudicator are doing their part. All that remains for the complete and solid success of the entire undertaking is generous public patronage of the plays.

It is a pleasure to welcome to Belleville the members of the various companies, the executive officers of the Eastern Ontario Drama League who will hold their annual meeting Thursday, officials of the Dominion Drama League, and their adjudicator, Mr. Van Gyseghem. May their visit be pleasant and profitable.

THIS IS NO SOLUTION

By 1958 medical graduates in Ontario and some other provinces will be required to serve in Canadian hospitals for at least one year of their internship, before being licensed to practise—in Canada, of course.

The Medical Council of Canada, by this requirement, probably wishes to retain a higher proportion of the young men and women trained in Canadian medical schools for service in Canada. Dr. J. F. Argue, Council registrar, says that the move is being made in the face of high salaries in the United States hospitals which are leaving Canadian hospitals short of internes. We have some doubt, though, whether the shortage of internes is the only phase of the present situation which is disturbing the Medical Council. At present many young Canadians who interne in United States hospitals later decide to practise in that country. The Council perhaps believes that if it can make these young Canadians interne in Canadian hospitals, they will remain in Canada.

Unfortunately the new regulation could have the opposite effect. Faced with the necessity of spending a year in a Canadian hospital if they were to practise here, the medical graduates could decide that they would interne, and later practise, in the United States.

A more effective, and a more just, method of remedying the present situation would be for Canadian hospitals to pay higher salaries to internes. In the United States salaries range from $200 to $300 a month, in Canada from $10 to $75.

There are some young Canadian medical graduates who just cannot afford to accept a position as interne in a Canadian hospital.

There is no reason why they should be required to work at such salaries. Most Canadian hospitals are struggling to make ends meet—but Canada as a nation is wealthy enough to pay a living wage to the trained men who serve it.

SHARK STORY

Down in Australia a leading Sydney surgeon has a theory about sharks which has been strengthened by recent evidence.

An immigrant has been attacked and killed just ten yards off shore, in the same area where a shark fatally mauled a 13-year-old boy three weeks earlier.

Dr. Victor Coppleson thinks that a shark does not become really dangerous until it has attacked its first human being. These two incidents tend to confirm his theory.

It is evident that the correct technique to follow, if you wish to bathe in shark-infested waters, is to throw your friend in first. If he escapes, then only uneducated sharks are lurking in the deeps and it is quite safe for you to take a dip. If your friend is eaten, you notify the authorities that a shark has become civilized and that bathing in that area is dangerous.

WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN

I might have been a grocer.
I remember, at the start,
A grocer who was friendly used to let me drive his cart.
I might have been a druggist, selling lipsticks night and day.
When I was just a youngster my career began that way.

My father dealt with figures and he added columns long,
But when I tried to do it my results were always wrong.
So, the office chief accountant
sadly shook his head at me
And suggested very kindly something else I ought to be.
I might have been a banker.

There was one I often met
Who said: "Come down to see me if a job you want to get."
Had his offer I'd accepted I'd have missed the printed page
And with other people's money
I'd be seated in a cage.

What the future holds is hidden.
I was not allowed to see
That our city's morning paper had a place in store for me.
I've been happy and contened and I'm grateful now and glad
For the pathway I've been treading and the friendships
I have had,

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 16, 1935.

Following are the recently elected officers of the Marmora high school board: chairman, G. B. Airhart; vice chairman, R. A. Elliott; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Mae Leonard; property committee, H. R. Haacke, Albert Burridge, M. J. Maloney and the Rev. A. B. Caldwell; finance and management committee, R. A. Elliott, Vincent Lynch, T. E. Laycock and G. B. Airhart.

Miss Mary Cruji and Miss Bessie Connell spent the week-end in Toronto.

Miss Ethel Horton spent the week-end in Toronto, the guest of Mrs. Roy Adamson.

The Rev. I. B. Naylor, pastor of the Tabernacle, has returned home after spending a short time in Chicago, Ill.

Miss Mary Carmichael spent the week-end in Toronto.

30 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 16, 1925.

Mr. Robert Goudy will be appointed to the city council to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Ald. Eugene LaRoche.

Lieut. Col. W. N. Ponton and Mr. Arthur McGie have been appointed by the Board of Education as delegates to the Urban Trustees' Association which will be held shortly in London, Ontario.

Mayor W. C. Mikel has been appointed to act as Crown Prosecutor at the assize in Welland.

Mr. Hugh Middlemiss of the J. J. Cash Company here, will leave shortly on a business trip to New York City.

Mr. W. E. Wiggins, reeve of Faraday township, and warden of the county is spending a few days in town.

40 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 16, 1915.

The men of the 15th and 49th. Regiments who are in training here as members of the 3rd contingent for overseas service, had a march out this morning for a distance of five miles. There were over 200 men on parade and they certainly made a fine appearance.

The annual ball given under the auspices of the Grand Knight, officers and members of the Belleville Council, Knights of Columbus, in the Academy last night was the popular event of the season. O'Rourke's seven piece orchestra furnished excellent music and the supper served by Ed. F. Dickens and Son was all that could be desired. To the Grand Knight, J. M. Truaisch and the Lecturer, William L. Doyle, together with the officers and members as a whole, the thanks of the guests are due for a most enjoyable time.

FEBRUARY 16, 1905.

The drug clerks were defeated in a game of hockey last night by the lock factory team, the score being 2 to 1. The following composed the teams: — Drug Clerks: — Dolan, Boyle, Campbell, Geen, Lattimer, Butler and Harkins; Lock Factory team,—Phillips, Lees, Sanders, Rowe, Matheson, McGuire and Robinson. The referee was W. Hough and he handled the game to the satisfaction of both teams.

Mr. Joe McDonald, night clerk at Hotel Quinte, will be absent from his duties for a time owing to illness.

Last night at a meeting of the members of the Trustee Board of Bridge Street Methodist Church, Mr. Charles Clapp and Mr. J. H. P. Young were added to the board.

Owning Car Is Expensive

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

Next time you view with pride your shiny automobile standing in your drive-way, give it a second look.

That beautiful metal monster may be laughing up its radiator at you.

Behind those innocent-looking scaled-beams sits a member of the family which annually costs you $1,000.

"Ridiculous," you may say. "That is all it costs a year to buy a good-sized house!"

True enough, but whether your car is large or small, easy or hard on gas, brand new or six years old, that faithful steel steed still costs you at least $1,000 a year to own, operate and insure.

We base that statement on a survey of hundreds of car owners (all makes, for the past six years) conducted by Popular Mechanics magazine.

The magazine found that the man who owns a low-priced car spends $5,019 on it in six years. The medium-priced owner spends $6,038, and the high-priced owner $7,255.

Since 18 per cent of the retail price of a Canadian car is taxes, and the Canadian model costs approximately $500 more than its corresponding American cousin, we must consider the "low-priced" Canadian car as a medium-priced" American automobile, in terms of initial, repair and operating costs.

If you—a Canadian motorist—buy the cheapest American-type car you can find, and drive it the average of 11,000 miles a year the privilege of having your own transportation will cost you $20 a week.

On the mileage basis, you will find it costs you at least 9.6 cents a mile, if you drive over 20,000 miles a year your cost per mile will be only 6.9 cents. But if you average under 5,000 miles, each mile you drive will cost you a sobering 28.4 cents.

And remember, these figures are approximate only for the cheapest American-type cars you can buy in Canada. South of the border they would apply to the "average" car. To own and operate a "medium" or "high-priced' car would cost correspondingly more.

Most important: if you own a car, use it. To own a car and keep it locked up in the garage for six years would cost you two-thirds as much as driving it 70,000 miles.

Over a six-year period, fixed costs will eat up 67 cents of every dollar you spent on your car, Largest single fixed cost is depreciation. Insurance averages 12 cents out of every dollar, and other costs such as taxes, licenses, parking fees and garage costs add up to eight cents.

Small wonder that only 52 per cent of Canadian families manage to scrimp and save enough to own car!

Two Viewpoints

(Country Gentleman)

While riding on a small branch railroad in a remote corner of the west, an eastern cattle buyer took the conductor to task. "Look here," said the easterner "don't you think 10c a mile on this doodlebug is pretty expensive?"

"Well," drawled the conductor, "it all depends on how you look at it. I'll agree that 10c a mile is pretty high, but on the other hand, where else can you get transportation for 35c an hour?"

Big Moments Built on Small

(Pueblo, Colo., Star Journal)

Not long back an American playwright wrote a play in which half a dozen middle-aged people, gathered together more or less accidentally, found themselves taking stock of their lives up to that time.

All of them realized with something of a shock that they had not accomplished much, that fame and greatness had eluded them, that their lives were empty of "big moments."

Finally, one man says, with a sad perception of a blunt truth: "There ARE no big moments unless you have a pile of small moments to build upon."

What he meant was that for most of us achievement follows only upon painstaking preparation. Greatness is seldom a thing of quick, flashing inspiration, except in some kinds of artistic endeavor.

The man who goes through life pursuing the "big moment" may exhaust himself in the chase if he does not understand that the laborious building up of small moments is the only sure course. Without this, he will look back at 50 upon a life that seems a barren wasteland.

For many of us, no doubt, there can never be anything but small moments. We can pile them up, but we cannot erect a bigger edifice upon them.

This should not move us to deep regret. The big moments, and the great men, are few. The test of living is the ability to make the most of the small moments, to push life to the farthest horizons permitted by one's limitations.

As there are no great moments without a base of smaller ones, so there are no great men without the vast accumulated accomplishments and experience of smaller ones to draw upon.

We are all part of the long bridge of time, of human history. Without our massive total outpouring of effort, there would be no nation, no civilization, nothing from which greatness could spring.

No one who builds good character in himself, who lovingly tends the growth and security of his family, who devotes full energies to his work and his pleasure, ought ever to fear that his life will seem a desert.

If he does all these things, even though greatness may never touch him he will make a great contribution to the world he lives in. He will be just one stone in the long bridge, looking very much like the one alongside.

But without that stone, and the next, and the next, the endless span would crumble and there would be no support for human life on this planet. Every single stone has its place.

Hospital Beauty Shop

(Kitchener Record)

A beauty shop for women has been established at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal. It will operate for those who can walk to it but it will also give bedside service.

Apart from good news from the doctor or a welcoming visit from family or friends, nothing could create more morale in a woman than a hair wash, a hair-do with curls or what have you. The person responsible for this beauty hospital aid should just about rate a Royal Red Cross medal because its curative possibilities are unlimited.

The little lady can now get fixed up in the morning, have her preparative nap and, when visitors come in the afternoon and evening, she will be sitting up in bed in her prettiest bed jacket and with her hair a glorious crown for a smiling face. Probably if the visitors look in the mirror they will feel that the wrong person is in bed!

Assails Statement By John Blackmore

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

The remarks concerning higher education of Mr. John Blackmore, Social Credit member for Lethbridge, as reported in the press, although hardly to be taken seriously by most Canadians, are surely cause for concern as to whether his statements reflect or influence opinion throughout the country.

Mr. Blackmore's recent public statements concerning Senator McCarthy are still remembered here and his statement in the House of Commons on Wednesday further serves to place him in the ranks of what seems to be an ever-growing anti-intellectual movement on this continent. His sweeping generalizations about Rhodes Scholars and the effect of an education obtained at Oxford and Cambridge and the London School of Economics can be discarded as pure demagoguery by those who have known or been directly influenced by graduates of these universities - - but what of the general public and their view of higher education after the publicity given Mr. Blackmore's speech? It would be a mistake, I think, to assume that such condemnations will not be accepted at face value by some sections of the public: the result can only be a further decline in the status that learning holds in this country. It is not just the institutions cited by Mr. Blackmore which are condemned, but any institutions which have graduates of these schools on their faculty - - this would include practically every university in Canada and many in the United States.

It is to be hoped that the press will not allow these widely disseminated charges to have so pernicious an effect on the public mind in this country.

Music Hath Healing Power

(Edmonton Journal)

Long ago, a poet sang that "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, to soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak." Nowadays, perhaps, doctors would not go so far as to say this, but at least some agree that music has a definite place in the art of healing. The ancients, with the poet, knew the power of music but it was only recently that their modern counterparts began to consider it seriously as a means of treatment.

One can easily picture a chieftain of days gone by, his head full of gremlins drilling hard, saying, "Come, lad, look sharp with thy harp, for I am sorely ill," or words to that effect. After a few deft arpeggios the gremlins would disappear and the chief would be happy.

However, the range of music today is probably greater than it was then and this poses a distinct threat to the efficacy of modern musical therapy. Furthermore, the music will probably be "piped into" the wards and this, too, may make for awkward situations. Consider, for example, what turmoil would be caused if a number of patients were supposed to be lulled to sleep when "Beat Me, Daddy With a Solid Four" came booming from the loudspeaker.

The same holds true for the reverse, of course, for it is conceivable that patients in the midst of exercises would drop off quickly when Brahms' Lullaby wafted about them. All in all, today's musical therapy should prove an interesting experiment and we can only hope that a faux pas with the fortissimos will not spoil the whole thing.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE BRIDGE CALLED LIFE

In addition to the words of Jesus found in the four Gospels (and one saying in Acts 20:35), there are a number of so-called "apocryphal" sayings which are of doubtful authorship and authority. Some of these are very interesting. They may have been uttered by Jesus or again they may not have been. But certainly some of them reflect his spirit.

One of these runs as follows: "The world is merely a bridge; ye are to pass over it, and not to build your dwellings upon it." Whether Jesus actually uttered these words or not, they express the fundamental truth that life here on earth is only the preparation for a larger, eternal, spiritual existence. Humanists of all kinds scoff at such a belief and call it "pie in the sky," but the teaching of the Bible undoubtedly is that we are here in the world for a short time to demonstrate, by the way we handle the circumstances which encompass us, whether we are or are not fit for eternal existence with God, Christ, and the angels.

This may seem very naive; but naive or not, it is Biblical. The whole current of Biblical teaching is that life is a bridge, and upon it we are to build no dwellings. We are to use it as a bridge to pass over into something better.

A belief such as this requires our making drastic revaluation of many things to which, along with the rest of the world, we may be devoted.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

THE TRUTH ABOUT SMOKING

Would you accept the opinion or advice of a doctor in respect to the use of, say, heroin or cocaine if you believed the doctor were addicted to the drug?

Dr. Brady

Would you risk your life or the life of one dependent on you on the judgment of a doctor you believed to be under the influence of a narcotic—such as morphine or alcohol?

These may be irrelevant questions, but anyway I want to mention at the outset that neither the older belief nor the newer knowledge of the effects of tobacco gives me any qualms about continuing to enjoy moderate smoking.

From the content and purport of the vast amount of material on the effects of smoking emanating from research laboratories, assorted specialists and eager headline hunters these days a casual reader might well infer that medical scientists know a lot about it.

My own impression is that nobody knows precisely what causes the ill effects doctors ascribe to smoking.

Nicotine? The chemical analysis of various kinds of tobacco show it contains from something less than 1 per cent to more than 6 per cent of nicotine. A ladylike chew of tobacco should flatten a batter before he can whiff at the third strike. I have found no reliable reports of analysis of tobacco smoke showing significant amounts of nicotine—if any nicotine escapes destruction by burning.

Recently the scientifics have diverted from nicotine to aldehydes, pyridine and tar as the dangerous substances in tobacco smoke. To these substances, especially tars, they now ascribe even cancer.

Nobody knows the cause of cancer.

Cigarette smokers who inhale smoke seem to be more likely to develop cancer of the lung than cigar smokers or pipe smokers.

Cigar smokers may inhale, but seldom do, in my observation. Pipe smokers rarely if ever inhale.

But hold on here. We haven't even mentioned the substance in tobacco smoke which, in my opinion, causes most of the ill effects doctors ascribe to smoking—carbon monoxide.

Chemical analyses of cigarette smoke show some carbon monoxide gas in every puff, and breathing air containing more than one part of carbon monoxide in a thousand is dangerous. Not that carbon monoxide is poisonous, but it has such a strong effinity for hemoglobin (oxygen-carrying red coloring matter in the blood corpuscles) that it crowds oxygen out and so causes a kind of cell or tissue asphyxia, anoxia or oxygen deficit. This is the reason why an athlete in training can't smoke.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Doctors liken this time of year to the hours of night just before the dawn. It is a dangerous season for people who have come towards the end of their model, and whose chassis and engine are getting a little worn. More people are said to pop off in February and March from avoidable strains than in any other period of the year.

The season invites activity in the elderly. They have grown impatient of winter and are looking with a spry spirit towards spring, just around the corner the calendar. Those of them who have been foolish enough to shovel snow fail to realize that late February and March snow is heavier than the pretty, crisp stuff they may have been tossing around in January. The sun is slowly marching north and the winter days are enticing. The elderly venture out more than they did three weeks ago. Yesterday, I saw a man of well over seventy hauling a garden bench out onto his front porch. Likely he had carried it up from the cellar where it had been stored. Farther along the street, a grey-haired woman was out with a step ladder, polishing her windows. It is a good eight or nine weeks until spring cleaning time, generally, but she had the bug already: and if she had slipped off the ladder, she would have landed in slush.

Late February and March are like three and four o'clock in the morning, and a good time to keep quiet. But the elderly are often restless at that hour and restless now. Those who are well enough off to go to Florida or California for this tricky season forget that there is usually a lot of effort involved in going and coming, and that no doubt explains why, these days, we see more frequent reports in the papers of deaths in the South.

"Tell them," my doctor says, "to lie low from now until April. Take it easy, March is a tough month for 1936 model cars. It's tougher on 1880 and 1890 model humans."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON STANDING ALONE

All of us are indebted to many others for what success we gain, but this is largely through example. In the end we rise or fall on our own responsibility. Much of our lives we stand alone—on our own legs—supporting ourselves.

In an interesting February Reader's Digest article on Herbert Hoover, Jr., a quotation of his father, former President, is given. The elder Hoover said: "My boyhood ambition was to earn my own living, without the help of anyone, any time, anywhere." That has been the caliber of father and son—a mark of genuine greatness. They have even donated their services to their country!

It's easy to stand confident when there are many about us to lend support in time of stress, but it's different when you find yourself standing alone, dependent upon your own legs and force of character to weather you through storm and stress, as well as the sunny times. It's the over-all test that is the important one.

Boldness has its rich reward, for it is usually backed by personal courage. Bold men in history have always had enthusiastic followers—Napoleon, Washington, MacArthur, and George Patton. Emerson's essay on "Self Reliance," to me, is his greatest and most inspiring. It has stirred the souls of millions of readers. One never is too old to give it another reading.

We need to keep digging into the innermost part of ourselves. There is more there than any of us ever suspects! How often we hear the phrase: "I never dreamed he had it in him." Meaning that he never showed what he had hidden. It never pays to sell any human being "short"! There is too often something else there, even though it may take an emergency to bring it to light. Somehow we never seem to lack for heroes and heroines.

Equal Pay for Equal Work For Women Lost in House

OTTAWA (CP) — The Liberals Tuesday defeated by a vote of [illegible] to 83 an Opposition member's private bill calling for equal pay for equal work for women.

The bill of Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West) was voted down in the Commons at second reading.

It was upported by 11 Liberals besides the Progressive Conservative, CCF and Social Credit groups and Paul Gagnon (Ind — Chicoutimi).

The 11 Liberals who sided with the Opposition were: J. L. MacDougall, Vancouver - Burrard; Dave Croll, Toronto Spadina; Mrs. Ann Shipley, Timiskaming; J. T. Richard, Ottawa East; Leon Crestohl, Montreal Cartier; Arthur W. White, Waterloo South; Elmore Philpott, Vancouver South; A. H. Hollingworth, York Centre; Hector Dupuis, Montreal St. Mary; Tom Goode, Burnaby - Richmond; and Guy Rouleau, Montreal Dollard.

Mrs. Fairclough, closing the debate during the Tuesday hour devoted to private members' bills, quoted Labor Minister Gregg as saying he agreed in principle with the bill but that he would need more information on the subject.

She said the labor department must have all the necessary information on female employment if it already has it for males. She asked whether Mr. Gregg was asking that women's organizations in Canada do the research that his own department should be doing.

Mr. Gregg had said he couldn't assume the power to carry out the legislation if it were passed. Mrs. Fairclough said it is the first time a Liberal cabinet minister has ever refused any additional power.

Sybil Bennett (PC—Halton) said women should have had wage equality with men for equal work years ago and speeches advocating it now should not have to be made.

Canadian business men are a soft touch when it comes to cashing bogus cheques, members of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club were told Tuesday evening at a dinner meeting held at the Shrine Club.

Member of a specialized police squad at Hamilton formed to run down cheque artists, Sgt. Det. Sam Burd as speaker for the evening told his listeners that bouncing cheques were "big business" in Canada and in the United States. Last year in the U.S.A. five hundred million dollars in bogus cheques were cashed.

Police are doing what they can to stamp out the cheque artists but the gullibility of business men who cash the cheques made it a lucrative field for the cheque bouncers to work.

THREE GROUPS

Generally the cheque artists could be divided into three separate groups. First was the alcoholic, ordinarily a respectable person, who resorted to cheque passing when funds were low; the second was the drug addict, who passed cheques for the same reason, and finally the professional cheque artist, who was the big thorn in the side of police.

The professionals seldom, if ever, pass their own bogus cheques but sell them to helpers who do the actual passing. The professional sets himself up with a cheque writing machine and rubber stamps and his cheques, often written against fictitious firms, look very authentic.

But cheques written on cheque protectors have no guarantee of authenticity and business men should be wary of typewritten cheques and rubber stamps.

"Be suspicious of typewritten cheques and rubber stamps, check on them, and never give cash along with merchandise," Detective Burd said. "Also be suspicious of too many credentials."

There were five big dont's for businessmen who might be persuaded to cash cheques.

They are: (1) Don't be hurried by the person cashing the cheque; (2) Don't cash cheques for strangers; (3) Don't cash cheques after business hours; (4) Don't cash cheques for juveniles, and (5) Don't be too proud to admit a mistake after being duped by a cheque artist. Always report to the police.

Police Chief Walter Probert and O.P.P. Inspector A. McDougall were guests at the meeting. Club president Harold Meyers was in charge of the meeting.

Angus Breeders Favor Insemination Program

Delegates to the annual convention of the Canadian Aberdeen-Angus Association came to their decision after debate on a motion to restrict the use of artificial insemination in producing Aberdeen-Angus cattle.

Ernest Redelmeier of Richmond Hill said the method, despite its faults, can be used to benefit the industry.

Vice-Admiral Of U.S. Fleet Son Of Nova Scotian

HALIFAX (CP) — The commander of the U.S. 7th Fleet now patrolling the troubled waters between the Chinese mainland and the island of Formosa got his sea legs as a vacationing schoolboy on the Bras d'Or lakes of Cape Breton.

Vice-Admiral Alfred Melville Pride is the son of a Nova Scotia sea captain, and to many people in this province the naval chief who guarded the successful withdrawal of Chinese Nationalists from the Tachen islands to the Nationalist stronghold of Formosa is still just "Mel."

His father and mother were born at Isaac's harbor in Guysboro county but they moved to Somerville, Mass., before their son was born.

Admiral Pride's cousin, Mrs. Morris O'Hara, lives in Halifax. She says he often visited Nova Scotia as a boy. "He was down home in Isaac's harbor several times and later visited us here in Halifax on a couple of occasions."

The admiral spent a summer—when he was 17—as a deckhand on his cousin's cruise steamer on the Bras d'Or lakes. Mrs. O'Hara recalls that he always had "a great love" for the sea.

ICE SETS HOUSE AFIRE

NORTH ADAMS, Mass. (AP)—Ice was listed today as the cause of a fire in the cellar of Mrs. Antoinette Laughlin's home. Fire officials said a piece of ice fell from the roof, struck a utility wire and caused a short circuit in the basement ceiling Tuesday.

Sask. Hunters Got Record Bag During 1954

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—Hunters in the woods and fields of Saskatchewan had a record bag in almost all varieties of wild game and birds in 1954.

They also widened considerably the gap in farmer-hunter relations.

Provincial game commissioner E. L. Paynter says the reason for farmer ill will towards hunters can be seen when damage caused by hunters is listed. Addressing the annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Fish and Game League here, Mr. Paynter said hunters in 1954 shot 19 cattle, three calves, six horses and one goat.

Fences were cut in 14 instances, and 100 yards of fence torn away in another.

A barrel of gasoline was shot through on one farm, a combine blasted on another, a car and a truck were damaged and a farmer barely escaped death when a bullet whizzed through the window of his truck.

"The worst, however, was the incident of a hunter shooting a steer and then trying to get away with the dressed carcass," Mr. Paynter said.

"He got stuck in the mud and had the gall to ask the farmer who owned the steer to pull him out. The farmer noticed the meat in the trunk and called the RCMP."

Dr. Nelles Gives Talk on 'Care Of Babies, Children'

The regular monthly meeting of St. John Ambulance Nursing Division, 150, was held last night at headquarters, 294 Front street, Belleville. The meeting was opened by Mrs. R. J. McLuskie, superintendent, and the speaker Dr. J. E. Nelles, pediatrician, was introduced by Miss Ruth Kellar, registered nurse.

Dr. Nelles who is one of the new and popular young doctors in the city, spoke on "The Nursing Care of Babies and Children," stressing pre-natal care for the mother, and tests for the RH Factor, stating that the breast fed baby has a much better chance than the bottle fed baby. He explained immunization, and discussed childhood diseases, such as mumps, measles, chicken pox and the common cold.

"It is a fact not generally known that more children die under the age of three from accident than from any other cause. Prevention starts in the home. Common sense in the care of children will prevent many accidents. Teach care in the home, on the street and in school. Learn to put harmful drugs, cleansers, high enough that little fingers cannot reach them.

"Prevention of infection is a mother's responsibility. Keep your child away from anyone with colds, sore throats, boils, and skin rashes. The sick child needs tender, loving care. Prepare them psychologically if they are to be taken to the hospital, by telling them the exact truth as to what is going to happen to them."

Dr. Nelles in closing, stated that child care is common-sense.

Mrs. Rita Henning, Reg.N., nursing officer for the division, expressed the thanks of the group to Dr. Nelles.

Guests of the Belleville division for the evening were, members of the Breadner school, RCAF Home Nursing class, and members of the Belleville Home Nursing class.

There was a total attendance of forty-two ladies.

Rev. Bev. Wilson Addresses Youth for Christ Rally

The Youth for Christ opening rally was held on Saturday evening in the Collegiate auditorium with a good representation from ten denominations present. The service began with the singing of old familiar hymns and choruses led by Mr. William Stapley, assisted by the Reverend Hope Smith at the console of the organ, and Mrs. Beverley Foster at the piano.

Seated on the platform were representatives from all walks of life, who came to bring greetings on behalf of Youth for Christ for the city of Belleville. Those taking part included: Mr. Bram Humphreys, alderman, representing Mayor Both; Mr. Wilbur Wright, chairman of Child Evangelism; Mrs. Phillips, teacher of Prince of Wales school; Miss Joan Crocker, nurse; Mr. Ken Groves, business man; Miss Barham, of Women's Temperance; Mr. Bob Anderson, Quinte High school, and Miss Ruth Watson, of Belleville Collegiate.

Those who were unable to attend, but who sent greetings were, Inspector Hayes, Mr. Bob Temple and Mr. Evan Hedley, director of Eastern Canada Youth for Christ, affiliated with Youth for Christ International.

MUSICAL PROGRAM

A most interesting musical program followed and included a message in song, by Mr. Clarence Jones, who rendered cornet solos, "The Stranger of Galilee," and "He Lives."

Mr. Joe Cox gave an inspiring testimony, after which a girls' trio, consisting of Misses Beulah and Jean Cooney, and Miss Helen Spearman sang "Wonderful Jesus." A duet by the Davidson brothers, accompanied by guitar and mandolin. This was followed by testimony given by Mr. Ernie Belch.

A mixed trio, consisting of Miss Louise Harris, Miss Jean Falconer and Mr. Dave Dow, who favored with "I'll Trust Him."

The Scripture John 1:1-14, was read by Mr. Wayne Muirhead.

The speaker of the evening, introduced by the Rev. James S. A. Spearman, was the outstanding Youth leader, the Rev. Beverley Wilson, B.A., of Canandaigua, New York. Mr. Wilson based his remarks on Romans 1:16: "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth."

The meeting was closed by the speaker with prayer.

A social evening, in keeping with St. Valentine's Day, was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacDonald on Friday evening.

A number of interesting contests were conducted by Mrs. M. LaRue, favors going to Mrs. MacDonald, Mrs. Parrott, Mrs. Ryan, Mr. D. MacDonald and Mr. Haig.

The highlight of the evening was when Mr. and Mrs. H. Walkom were invited to be seated together and the reading by Mrs. Farnsworth of a fine address on the splendid work Mr. and Mrs. Walkom had done for so many years as secretary and treasurer of the Kingston Road Church.

Mrs. Farnsworth also paid tribute to the many other things each had done for the church and community. Mrs. Walkom, as president of the W.A., secretary for the Blue Cross group in the W.A. and choir leader; Mr. Walkom ever ready to lend a willing hand whenever needed.

All took part in this fitting address by singing "Blest be the Tie That Binds."

Mr. M. LaRue, on behalf of the Kingston Road Church, and W.A., presented Mr. and Mrs. Walkom with a coffee table and centre ornament.

Mr. and Mrs. Walkom, although completely taken by surprise, thanked their friends most graciously for the honor accorded them, and for the beautiful gifts. Then all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the W.A., and a delightful social evening was brought to a close with prayer by Mrs. Farnsworth.

ST. THOMAS MAN ELECTED

Women's Activities

TABERNACLE E.A.

Several new members and visitors were welcomed at the February meeting of the Tabernacle Evening Auxiliary, held at the home of Ruth Pettifor, with Gladys Shane presiding.

During the business period, a motion was carried to buy flannelette for a layette for the Korean Relief. World Day of Prayer was announced and plans made for a pot-luck supper for the March meeting.

Ruth Pettifor led in the devotional period.

"Family in a Trailer," was the topic of a Christian Stewardship reading given by Mrs. R. Rowley.

Myrtle Lockyer gave a talk on "Temperance" and also presented the study book chapter, "Growing Together With the Church in India."

A social half hour was enjoyed.

SCOTT'S W.A.

Scott's Church W.A. dinner was held this month at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Sine with a large attendance. The next dinner will be held in March at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. Faul. The W.M.S. meeting was held in the afternoon.

Mrs. M. Sine opened the meeting with the call to worship.

The secretary's report was given by Mrs. A. Sine and the treasurer's report by Mrs. A. Martyn.

Mrs. M. Sine gave some interesting facts on "India" taken from the India Packet, including a questionnaire on the many different creeds in India, and the ways of worship. Mrs. Edison Sine, Mrs. Maurice Dafoe and Mrs. Carl Sne took part in this.

Mrs. K. Faul and Mrs. A. Sine took the devotional part of the meeting, the theme being "The Church Universal in India".

The Scripture, 1 Corinthians 12:4-11 and John, 17:18-21, was also read by Mrs. Sine. Mrs. Faul gave a talk on the church in India and how it needs support and prayers.

Carmel-Foxboro YPU Installs New Executive

Carmel - Foxboro Young People's Union took charge of two church services on their respective pastoral charges on Sunday.

During the afternoon they joined with the congregation of Carmel United Church when the pastor, Rev. L. S. Throop, delivered an inspiring sermon. Miss Marilyn Parks took charge of the service and was assisted by Joan McCurdy, Kathleen Homan, Jim Reid and Don. McCurdy. A choir composed of members of the Union provided the music with Carol Stewart as accompanist.

The regular evening church service at Foxboro United Church was under the direction of the same young people and members of the Union formed the choir. Rev. R. F. Darke brought a challenging message and installed the new executive of the Union in an impressive candlelighting service.

Deseronto Branch Red Cross Reports On 1954 Work

The Canadian Red Cross Society, Deseronto branch, report on work done during 1954 and undertaken for 1955 as follows: Regular meetings were held first Wednesday of each month Mrs. D. Dawson, Mrs. C. Cole have entertained Red Cross this year, 1955. On March 2nd the regular meeting will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. H. Transue.

Minor disaster assistance: During 1954 your Red Cross provided this service to five families comprising ten adults and sixteen children. Coffee and food were served to the volunteer firemen during six hours of one serious fire. Your Red Cross maintains an emergency supply cupboard equipped for this service. The volunteers on call are Mrs. H. Transue, Mrs. G. Walker, Mrs. A. Ross and Mrs. C. Cole.

First aid and water safety: In this department ring buoys are maintained at three docks. First aid kit is kept in readiness; Funds are available for replacement of cells in the resuscitator.

Women's work with Mrs. Gilligan, convener for 1955, have completed six blouses, five jumpers, two skirts, eleven pairs of socks, and 31 sweaters. A new shipment of wool is on hand. Helpers with knitting are most welcome.

Loan cupboard. A well stocked loan cupboard is maintained from which sickroom supplies for the seriously ill, convalescent comforts and necessities for care of bed patients may be borrowed. The hospital bed, wheel chairs and crutches are for loan at doctor's order for two month periods with renewal privilege. Smaller articles may be borrowed by contacting the convener, Mrs. D. Dawson, or Mrs. C. Cole.

During 1954, the annual campaign for funds four fifths of the quota of $500 was collected, the 1955 campaign begins March 1. Mrs. G. Walker has once again consented to be campaign chairman and Mr. P. M. Stover will act as campaign treasurer.

"The work of mercy never ends."

King George H-S Assoc. Holds Euchre

The King George Home and School Association held a successful euchre and bridge party at the school on Monday evening. There were 35 tables in play. Mr. H. Outingdyke was in charge of the games.

The winners were, bridge, Tom McCoy; consolation, Mrs. Marie Bell; euchre, ladies, Mrs. Nora McDonald, Mrs. Eileen Goyer; consolation, Mrs. Glenna Black; men, Mrs. E. Reddick, Mrs. Baldwin, (playing men's cards); consolation H. A. Hill; lone hands, Mr. McKay; door prize, Mrs. Delbert Caul; lucky draws Mrs. Donald Vance and Mrs. Sexsmith.

Refreshments were served.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HREE QUESTIONS FROM ONE GIRL

M[illegible] A.Z., who is 19 years old, as three questions to which she ant answers.

She sets them down as follows:

"I met a boy while he was home n leave from the army, and went ut with him a couple of times. I m 19 and he is 22, and my girl riend says he is too old for me.

"I would like to know, first, if he s too old for me, and, second it it ould be wrong for me to get him birthday present. He is to have a irthday soon.

"A third thing I have been won-ering about is that I am what ost people call ugly, and some oys try to get smart when I am ut with them. I tell them I'm ust not that kind of a girl. Many irls call me sissy for doing this, o I would like to know if you think [illegible]ight or wrong, and do you [illegible] some day a boy will really ke me for myself? I don't go out ith many boys, and I would like o have a nice boy friend, not a mart one."

No, Miss A.Z., I don't think a oung man of 22 is too old for a irl of 19. In fact, I think they may ell be very congenial. If I were ou, though, I wouldn't send a irthday present to a chap with hom you have been out only a couple of times. Instead, just send im a nice birthday card, with a riendly, but not sentimental, message.

As for your question about boys who "get smart," you are doing exactly the right thing, and pay no attention to those who call you a sissy. You are not a sissy at all, but a nice girl who knows what is wise and right, and you're much more likely to get the kind of boy friend you want if you keep on being that way.

I gather that you feel boys try to take advantage of you because you're not, perhaps, as pretty as some of the other girls and they think you'll be glad to get any attention at all from them. But you keep right on showing them how mistaken they are.

Moreover, I don't believe for a minute that you are "ugly," perhaps you just haven't made the most of yourself yet by giving enough thought to improving your looks.

I suggest that you check yourself on the points that, added up, make the difference between attractiveness and unattractiveness. These are, experimenting until you find the hairdo that's most becoming to you; using make-up wisely and to best advantage; choosing clothes that suit your particular type of figure and personality; keeping hands looking nice and, in general, making sure that you are always well groomed.

Add to these physical factors, a friendly, cheery personality, and see to it that you know how to do well the things young people of your age like to do and talk about, so you can share in all their activities. Once you've accomplished these things—and anyone can, who really tries—I don't think you'll have any trouble finding friends who like you for yourself.

I have a list of suggestions on how to become popular which I will be glad to send you if you will let me have a stamped self-addressed envelope.

'How to Make a Steak That Is Tender'

By Mary Moore

M.C. writes: "I enjoy reading your column very much but as I am a working girl don't find or "make" time to try many of your recipes. I am trying the automatic oven meals sent in by one of your readers, and enjoy them very much. If you have any others I would appreciate having them. . . I never know how to make a steak that is tender, as I don't understand what heats, etc. to use. I have just bought a new freezer a short time ago but have not used it much yet. I want it mostly for my strawberries which I raise in the summer, and my vegetables. . . would you know if there are containers available for fruits and vegetables similar to those in which we buy frozen foods, also some sort of plastic bags for meat, pies, etc.—M. C.

Two of the things I enjoy teaching you folks how to do is broil, steam and fry chicken.

PERFECT BROILED STEAK

Just as in everything else you do well you have to start with quality ingredients. Therefore you have to learn to buy good steak. Insist on red brand. If red brand beef is good quality and well-marbled with creamy-white fat through the lean portion and there is a good wide undercut section (tenderloin) where the butcher is slicing, I order a slice at least 1 1-2 inches thick. You can get this type of meat and cut in the meat section of a supermarket if you insist. If you want a further rule to go by ask for sirloin or porterhouse or T-bone steaks (cut thick) from beef that has been hung at least 18 days—then tenderness and flavor are assured. If meat is hung 18 days you can take a chance on blue brand although the fat will not be as evenly distributed. With sharp pointed knife slit fat edge for 1-4 to 1-2 inch to prevent it curling and taking on a sneering appearance. Now if you want to do as the expert chefs do have broiler very hot. Make a mixture of 1-8 teaspoon pure garlic powder, 1-2 teaspoon each salt and monosodium glutamate, 1-16 teaspoon pepper and rub it into both surfaces. I pause here to add that many a steak expert claims that a good steak requires nothing but salt, pepper and butter applied to second side of steak after first side has been broiled. Take your choice. Now place steak on hot broiler rack, place under very hot broiler about 1 1-2 inches from source of heat and allow to sizzle until deep gold and flecked with brown. Turn over. If you have not rubbed the mixture of seasonings into it, give it the salt and pepper and butter treatment now on the undone upside. Return to broiler and broil until it reaches the stage of doneness you prefer. I want mine rare every time. Serve on hot platter garnished with lemon and watercress. Your steak carver who is well trained, cuts steak with sharp carving knife in 1-2 to 1-inch wide strips, giving each diner a share of the undercut this way.

M.C. you wanted to know too where to buy freezer cartons and bags. Buy them at the locker plant nearest to you. They keep these on hand for customers who have food lockers in their premises.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

A WOMAN AND HER GLOVES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

To settle a discussion, will you please answer this question: Is it necessary for a woman to take off her glove to shake hands? If she doesn't take it off, should she excuse herself for not taking it off? — L.

A woman need not take off her glove to shake hands . . . and so she needn't excuse herself for not taking it off. (Of course, if her gloves are soiled, as when gardening, she would explain to the one offering to shake hands, "My gloves are very soiled . . . just a second, and I'll take off my glove.")

Beauty

WINNING HANDS

During the Victorian period, the ideal hand was small, dimpled, pink and white. Today hands get by if they look capable, have a smooth skin and nails that are perfectly groomed.

There is appeal in hardy little hands that bathe the baby, run the domestic works, sew a seam and chauffeur the family car.

By their hands you shall know them. The face may be a mask that conceals a person's character, but hands betray one. Their gestures speak a language that anyone can read.

The woman who is constantly picking at things with her fingers is a nervous, restless soul who must always be doing something. She lacks poise and, for that reason, is not a pleasant companion.

Feminine hands should be graceful, confident and at ease. They may be large or small, white or tanned, but the attribute most necessary is naturalness of movement.

The old theory that certain hands were "aristocratic", that the shape indicated culture or some artistic talent has gone by the board. There's just no such thing.

The lady of leisure who can go to the beauty shop every week for a manicure, and who has an occasional hand and arm treatment is minus a beauty worry that is common to the homemaker, whose hands take a beating. She should give them extra care, large daily doses of lotion or rich cream.

WHEN YOU LOOK GLAMOROUS, feel glamorous, too. A fragrant French perfume will turn the trick, make you truly feminine.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Clever Use of Make-Up Gives You More Allure

Have a big evening date? Then turn on the glamor. Raid the cosmetic counter. Under soft lights, a girl can wear more make-up, and with magical effects.

FRESHNESS OF COLOR

The approach to evening make-up begins with the use of a cleansing oil or cream. Remove it with tissues. For freshness of color, friction skin with ice. It may shiver your timbers, but what of it? It's worthwhile effort in the cause of beauty.

The next step is the application of a foundation cosmetic. Whether you use a warm flesh tone, rachelle or peach, depends upon your natural coloring. Buy your good-looks props at a cosmetic bar and let an expert choose the right shade for you.

True red or blue-red shades of rouge are a better choice for evening wear than orange-reds. Electric lights, though dim, have a tendency to drain red from orange and may impart an unflattering sallow cast to your complexion. Also, vivid scarlet or blue-red lipsticks tend to make teeth look pearly white.

You might find it exciting to try out a new beauty idea. It's the use of a pale mauve powder. Experts say this delicate color will give the skin a transparent quality that is intriguing beyond words. With it, wear violet-toned lipstick and violet eye shadow, but skip rouge.

This make-up is recommended for true blondes. The brownettes had better stick to the old order of skin-tone powder, red rouge and lipstick.

BE TRULY FEMININE

The final glamour touch when you're going places is perfume. Dab some on behind the ears and at the wrists. There's nothing but nothing, like it to make a woman feel truly feminine and completely glamorous.

Wife Preservers

OUTSIZE CHEESE

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—One ton of Wisconsin cheddar cheese, all in one piece, rolled into Salt Lake City Tuesday. The cheese had to be lifted from its truck by a crane so it could be delivered to the store that ordered it. The round cheese stands four feet, four inches high and measures four feet across.

Vancouver-Born Ballerina Making Hit at Radio City

By WILLIAM HARCOURT
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

NEW YORK (CP) — The first time Vancouver - born Audree Thomas looked across the stage of Radio City Music Hall, the world's largest indoor theatre, she thought she'd better get a bicycle.

But the pretty ballerina didn't need one. She floats across the 144-foot stage as effortlessly as thistledown.

"Dancing across that stage is like running from 49th to 50th street," says the prima ballerina. "I thought at first I'd never make it. You think you'll need a bicycle but you get used to it."

WANTS MORE

She's used to it—four shows a day, seven days a week for the last three weeks. And she wants more: "We're hoping the picture (The Bridges at Toko-Ri) will run four weeks. It looks as though it will."

At Radio City, home of the famous Rockettes, the stage shows change when the picture does. Some movies at the music hall have run more than two months.

Dancing on the great stage is a new experience for the petite, green-eyed dancer who received her first ballet lessons as a Christmas present when she was five years old.

QUIET REQUIRED

"You feel like you're in a hotel, don't you? It's so comfortable, So quiet."

"This windup before each show and collapsing afterward is difficult," she says, and she remembers times she's danced three full ballets in one evening.

Before she glides out over the Music Hall stage with partner George Zoritch she limbers up for half an hour. Then they go on. By the time the curtain drops four minutes later, she's exhausted; although from the audience you'd never know it.

MRS. SERGE ISMAILOFF

After the last show each night, Miss Thomas walks a block east to Fifth avenue and catches an uptown bus home to her husband, and Anthony Bruce, her five-year-old son. Until she leaves about noon next day, she's Mrs. Serge Ismailoff.

She married Serge, a former dancer and now a teacher of ballet, in Vancouver in 1948.

"And a month later I had to leave and go on tour for nine months."

She joined the Ballet Russe at Seattle in 1940 and stayed with it 4½ years. Later she did a season with the Ballet International in New York, then two more with the Ballet Russe, followed by two seasons at the Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires.

"That was in 1945. I've been trying to get rid of it ever since. When I came to the Music Hall, they asked me how I wanted to be billed. That was my chance. I told them "Audree Thomas.""

Budgie Replaces Canary As Chirping Pet

TORONTO (CP)—In kitchen or living-room, the budgie seems to be replacing the canary as a cheerful chirping pet.

Enthusiasts estimate there are more than 50,000 budgies in homes throughout Ontario. The name covers a variety known variously as budgerigars, grass parakeets or Australian love birds.

One Toronto budgie owner says his bird does the highland fling. Another two - ounce specimen bested a mouse in battle when the rodent tried to do him in.

FEATHERED RIVALS

One story concerns the jealous budgie who was carried into a room where a canary was in full song. When the singer suddenly stopped, the budgie cocked an eye scornfully and commented, "Thank you. Thank you very much."

The budgerigar, native to Australia, is green in the wild state. But cross-breeding has produced birds in yellow, aqua, blue and even mauve shades.

Curious budgies when freed from the cage to fly around the house have been known to scald themselves in hot water and fly into washing machines. One bird made a newspaper item by dying of shock when jet planes broke the sound barrier overhead.

Another, lost, chattered his name and address to rescuers.

PREMIER FROST

"The whole investigation into the revamping of administration and the incidentals thereto was started and carried on entirely at the instance of the government," the premier said.

"All the investigating agencies employed, including the select committee of the House, have functioned without the slightest interference from me or my government."

WILL AGREE

He said his government would agree to the presentation of a minority report by three opposition members of the committee, who walked angrily from a committee and boycotted later meetings because of a dispute on the calling of witnesses.

The walkout was headed by Mr. Oliver. Other members were W.J. Grummett, CCF member for Cochrane South, and Albert Wren, Liberal-Labor member for Kenora.

Premier Frost said the province, by statute, for more than 30 years had trained engineers in a system in which preliminary engineering and estimating were not of primary importance. The system minimized the point.

In October, 1952, the government started out to correct the situation, he said.

SITUATION PREVIOUSLY

The premier's prepared statement said that in 1938, when the Liberal party was in power in Ontario, the average difference in highway contract estimates and contracts plus overpayments was 66 per cent. The average between 1937 and 1941 was 40.5 per cent. In 1952 the average excess was 14 per cent.

The premier explained that under previous laws the minister of highways was not bound by estimates passed by the House, but was authorized by statute to make settlement of contracts. The necessity of accurate estimating did not exist and expenditures were not subject to question upon filing of the necessary certificates that the work was done.

In 1950 it was apparent that work on highways would have to be greatly extended and the treasury board was satisfied that the Highway Improvement Act was not designed to meet modern requirements, the premier said.

The plan of the act was completely changed in 1952 and work was started to determine the amount of contract work approved in excess of that stated in the contract.

OVERRUNS REDUCED

Emphasis was later placed on preliminary engineering and percentage of overruns was reduced, he said.

Mr. Frost said he felt "impelled" to make a statement on the highways situation after reading speeches made by Mr. Oliver throughout the province.

The premier's statement was the first official reply of the provincial government to Opposition criticism of the highways department.

In reference to toll roads, the premier said the Opposition leader had made contradictory statements about his attitude toward such a system—against and in favor.

"When toll roads are built in this province it will be for the convenience of the people of Ontario," Mr. Frost said.

MUNICIPALITIES QUESTION

He commented on a statement by Mr. Oliver that the government had fallen short of its responsibility to municipalities. He said the province this year will pay 52.5 cents for each dollar spent by the municipality, compared to the high of 18 cents paid by the Liberal government of which Mr. Oliver was a member.

Mr. Oliver said in his 70-minute speech that the legislature should appoint a select committee to consider health insurance and hospitalization because the province was "lagging far behind in its health measures."

The province in the last six years had used only $15,000,000 of $23,900,000 the federal government made available in grants.

Mr. Oliver said the provincial government's plan to set up a select committee to study farm marketing "was another attempt to ease out of a difficult situation.'

He said there was some discontent among farmers in the province who feared a falling-off in produce prices spearheaded a depression.

Mr. Oliver suggested a committee similar to that dealing with people giving up their homes in the St. Lawrence seaway power development area be set up to handle similar cases in other parts of the province.

MARMORA

Dr. W.A. Harding, Department Mines, Opens Prospectors' Classes

MARMORA.— Dr. W. D. Harding of the Department of Mines, in opening the prospectors' classes he is conducting at St. Paul's parish hall, this week, on Monday afternoon faced the gratifying attendance of 34 which included one lady.

The one attending from the farthest point was a photographer from New York. Others came from Belleville, Tweed, Madoc, Stirling and Rawdon township to augment the local attendance of ten.

Dr. Harding, as he opened the class, said in his informal way, that "we would make use of language understood by laymen." Afternoon classes throughout the course which ends on Friday of this week, would be from two to four o'clock, with lectures at night concluding with films being from 8 to 9.30 p.m.

He then reminded some hearers and enlightened others that the first prospectors class to be held in Ontario was held in Marmora town hall in 1894, with 17 in attendance. It was held on the suggestion of Professor William Hamilton Merritt, of Queen's, who came from Merritton.

Thus Marmora was famous in the history of mining. He pointed out that finding a mine that would be productive was one of the hardest problems. A record number of claims were staked last year but it is not possible to say what mines will develop from them because as he remarked "Nature hides minerals most efficiently". He hoped to assist those taking the full course to identify samples of 48 minerals and 22 rocks.

IDENTIFICATION OF MINERALS

He divided the remainder of his talk into two headings: What minerals are made of and how to identify minerals. He also passed to each one present, a sample of Pyrites; another of Bornite, and a third of Chalcopyrite, with explanatory remarks in each case.

Several questions were asked with answers proving most enlightening.

Over 60 attended the evening lecture on "Igneous Rocks" which was illustrated by slides in its delivery followed by films relating to the same subject. Subsequent lectures will be given in the following order: "Sedimentary Rocks"; "Uranium"; "History of Mineral Finds"; "Geophysical Prospecting," culminating with "Staking Laws of Ontario", to be given on Saturday.

Marmora

MARMORA — Mrs. Pearl Mills of Toronto, is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Edward Broad and Mr. Broad.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lee of Madoc township, at Mrs. J. R. Barker's nursing home, on Monday, February 7th.

HOUSE POLICY

"In fact, such a policy will increase opportunities for employment in the long run."

The flow of immigrants had fallen from 194,000 in 1951 to slightly more than 150,000 last year. It likely would not be higher in 1955.

Immigration Minister Pickersgill did not enter the immigration debate, although he made some brief comments during other members' speeches.

BLAMES HARRIS

Mr. Fulton said former immigration minister Harris, who became finance minister July 1 last, is to blame for the "mess" in the immigration department.

Mr. Harris had taken no action to correct immigration matters which had been repeatedly criticized.

Mr. Fulton criticized "underemphasis" on getting immigrants from the United Kingdom.

Cabinet ministers apparently did not agree on how much immigration there should be. News reports of two speeches on the same day quoted Agriculture Minister Gardiner as favoring all-out immigration while Mr. Pickersgill favored "caution and selection."

More immigrants brought more purchasing power. Additional buying power brought to Canada by immigrants in 1953 was about $75,000,000. Too, immigrants helped create jobs by opening up new business.

350 NEW FIRMS

In Ontario alone, 350 new firms were opened by immigrants between 1949 and 1954. One firm employed 4,000 people and many others hired more than 100 workers.

Rev. Dan McIvor (L—Fort William) said more miners, railroaders and woodsmen should be brought to Canada.

Wallace Nesbitt (PC — Oxford) said he heard a "shocking" story which he believes may be true. He said he was told that more than three years ago a group of Estonians paid $190 each for passage to Canada aboard the ship Beaverbrae.

Men had been kept in one hold, women in another. The men had been forced to scrub decks and passageways, the women to clean out toilets. The meals were bad.

Mr. Nesbitt said he also was told that the crew, on the ship's arrival in Canada, ordered the immigrants to say nothing about the passage or they would be sent back home.

AMAZED BY EFFICIENCY

Henry Hosking (L — Wellington South) said he was at a Montreal pier when a shipload of immigrants arrived last summer and was amazed by the efficiency displayed in handling the movement of the newcomers.

He had been told by immigrants that they "never had better food in their lives" than the meals served aboard the ship. He did not identify the vessel.

Harry O. White (PC—Middlesex East) said the government should be responsible for immigrants' medical and hospital bills for a period of five years—the time it takes to obtain citizenship papers—instead of only one year.

Mr. Pickersgill interrupted at one point when Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) said the government should tell Canadians that immigration will not disturb the present population ratio.

The minister replied that this has been a government policy since 1947.

STIRLING

King George H.S. Holds 'At Home'

STIRLING— King George High School, Stirling, held its annual "At Home" on Friday evening with a large attendance of students, parents, ex-students and friends.

Guests were in attendance from Trenton, Belleville, Frankford and Peterborough.

The school gymnasium was decorated in a color scheme to represent the South Sea islands. There were Hula-hula scenes, monkeys, parrots, a typical island home. There was also a false ceiling of streamers in cloud effect. The lighting made a gorgeous picture and enhanced the beauty of the scenes.

Peter Battman's orchestra of Campbellford furnished excellent dance music and were highly complimented for their efforts.

Delicious food was prepared in the home economics room under the leadership of Miss Laura Lee, and the students of grade IX and grade X did the serving. The event was a financial success, and it was probably the largest crowd that has ever attended any of the At Homes.

Canada's Post Office This Year Observes 200th Anniversary But Lacks Birth Certificate

By GERALD FREEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

HALIFAX (CP)—Canada's post office this year observes the 200th—or 201st—anniversary of its obscure birth. It lacks a birth certificate.

But a commemorative stamp may be issued if the postmaster-general acts on requests for one by the Nova Scotia Historical Society.

Two centuries have changed the post office from a haphazard venture that made postmasters rich to an efficient government service that ranks with the best in the world.

RECORD OF PROGRESS

A nickel will speed a letter from Black Diamond, Alta., to Cape Town, South Africa, in less time than it once took a special delivery to get the 200 miles from Halifax to Louisbourg, N.S., and it used to cost many times as much.

The full-sailed ships that crossed the Atlantic in a month or more gave way to steamers that did it in days, and now fast ships are giving way to planes that do it in hours.

Hard-riding postal couriers have long since hung up their spurs in favor of snorting locomotives.

The local post office in Canada may be a complex big-city operation or the back room of a village general store, but everywhere it's taken as much for granted as coffee for breakfast.

The Canadian post office was born in Halifax and the closest thing it has to a birth certificate is an announcement clipped from a Boston paper of April 17, 1755. It was inserted by the post office at Boston, and said simply that mails could be sent from and received at Halifax.

This has been taken as official. But a year earlier an advertisement in the same paper said one Benjamin Leigh had opened a "bureau of intelligence and outward post office" at Halifax. That would make Canada's post office 201 years old.

PLAQUE RECORD

"In 1755 a line of packets was placed on the route between Falmouth and New York. This was part of a general scheme for closer and more regular connections between the colonies and the mother country. Those packets called at Halifax. In that year and in this city was established the first post office in the Dominion of Canada as now constituted."

The plaque was erected by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada, but the historical society claims the facts are twisted.

It says the packets probably didn't call at Halifax at all.

More likely they sailed directly to New York, the society says, and sent the mail by post to Boston. From there it came to Halifax on trading ships. Overseas mail wasn't brought to Halifax by a regular monthly service until 1812.

SECOND POST OFFICE

Canada's second post office was opened at Quebec in 1763. Mail came down the St. Lawrence river by canoe or river boat and was taken across the Bay of Fundy by barque. Then horsemen brought it to Halifax, establishing a regular mail route through the Annapolis valley.

Later an overland route was chosen from Saint John, N.B. via Moncton and Truro to Halifax.

People not on postal routes were quite happy because the couriers had a monopoly, and it cost one shilling and sixpence to send a one-ounce letter from Halifax to Yarmouth, N.S. Now it costs five cents.

Newspaper publishers made special deals with the deputy post master-general for their province. Deputy postmaster-general Stayner of Nova Scotia is reputed to have made a £500 salary, £2,103 on the side from newspaper delivery, and another £450 on other deals.

Big changes in the post office came in the middle 1800s. In 1838 the Great Western ship Sirius, a sidewheeler, crossed the Atlantic under steam and the next year a contract was let for fortnightly steamship mail service to Halifax.

In 1848 post office accounts were abolished between the provinces, rates were equalized, and in 1851 postage stamps were adopted.

Woman Admits Husband Had 'Bad Temper'

SARNIA (CP) — Mrs. Joseph Alonzo Lee Tuesday described a family quarrel the night her husband was stabbed to death last fall. She testified at the trial of her brother George Albert Lehtonen, 23, charged with the murder.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Hugh Garrett, Mrs. Lee admitted her husband had a "bad temper" and sometimes struck her in fits of temper.

Mrs. Lee said she left her husband and came to live with her mother on Oct. 10, her first wedding anniversary, because Lee had struck her in an argument the previous night. Lehtonen was also living at his mother's house.

MET HUSBAND

She testified that on the night of the stabbing, Oct. 12, she met her husband and agreed to return home. She was waiting for her husband to pick her up in his car when Lehtonen entered the room. He told her not to go.

She said she joined her husband a few minutes later. She said her brother followed her down the stairs and when he got to the street, called to Lee: "Stop beating up Anja."

She said a dispute arose. Lee got out of the car. She saw "a blade" in Lehtonen's hand and began to scream.

She got between the two men, but her husband pushed her aside. She said she saw her brother lift a knife but didn't realize her husband had been stabbed.

The trial is continuing.

PEEP AT LEGS COSTLY

ROME (Reuters)—The legs of glamorous Italian movie star Sophia Loren cost an Italian magazine editor $130 today. Gualtiero Jactpetti, editor of the weekly Cronache, was fined that sum plus costs, for publishing a picture of Sophia which, according to the judge, "offended good taste." It showed Sophia lifting her evening dress to show her long, well-formed legs.

New Publisher Globe and Mail Gives Interview

MONTREAL (CP) — The new owner of the Toronto Globe and Mail said Tuesday he hopes to see the newspaper "continue to contribute very much to the growth of Canada."

R. Howard Webster, bachelor-millionaire making his first venture into the newspaper business, said in an interview:

"Newspapers can do a wonderful amount of good and a certain amount of harm too.

"We hope The Globe and Mail will continue to contribute very much to the growth of Canada."

A six-footer of sturdy build, Mr. Webster laughed heartily at a reporter's remark that he had earned a reputation as a "mysterious figure" since his successful bid for The Globe and Mail was announced last Friday night.

MUCH TO DO

"The fact is that I've had much to do in the last number of days," said Mr. Webster. "There are the various arrangements in connection with the purchase itself, and my other work must also be taken care of as usual."

The 45-year-old business man gave the interview in the offices of the Imperial Trust Company.

Asked whether he now will divide his time between his Montreal business headquarters and Toronto, Mr. Webster said this is one of the things he has yet to decide. He plans to visit Toronto Friday for a luncheon meeting with the present publisher, Harry G. Kimber, and others.

Mr. Webster said he does not contemplate entering the editorial side of newspaper work, but will confine himself to business affairs. He already has informed the newspaper staff in a statement that "I have no intention of any changes. I hope . . . that together we will make a real success of it."

Senate Divorce Expert Would Widen Grounds for Divorce

OTTAWA (CP) — A senator-family man with 21 years' experience in handling divorces has introduced legislation to widen the grounds for dissolution of marriage in Canadian courts.

But at the same time his measure, given first reading in the Senate Tuesday night, proposes that no divorce actions be allowed to start until at least three years after marriage, except in special circumstances. Adultery would be ground for a divorce action anytime.

Sponsor of the bill is Senator William Aseltine, 68-year-old Progressive Conservative from Saskatchewan. He is married and has four children. For 21 years he has been a member of the Senate divorce committee, which handles petitions from Quebec and Newfoundland. He was committee chairman for 10 years before stepping down in 1953.

At present, except in Nova Scotia, adultery is the sole ground for divorce in those provinces which have divorce courts. In Nova Scotia there is the additional ground of cruelty. Quebec and Newfoundland divorces are handled by Parliament.

Senator Aseltine's bill would include as divorce grounds in provincial courts: Adultery, desertion for three years, cruelty and insanity. In addition, a wife could launch a divorce petition on the ground her husband was guilty of rape, sodomy or bestiality.

The bill is similar to one which received Senate endorsation in 1938 but failed to get beyond second reading—approval in principle—in the Commons. That measure was proposed by the late Conservative Senator Lendrum McMeans of Winnipeg and was seconded by Senator Aseltine.

Parliamentary observers suggest the new bill may suffer a similar fate. They say it probably won't get government support because it is proposed by a member of the seven-man Progressive Conservative Opposition in the 102-seat Senate.

Senator Aseltine's measure is designed to supplement rather than replace any divorce powers now held by provincial courts and would not disturb the basis on which their jurisdiction rests.

A number of the provincial courts operate on the old law of England, going back as far as 1870. The new bill would bring Canada's divorce statute into line with the law of England on divorce as revised in 1937.

It would not affect the practice of parliament's handling divorce petitions from Newfoundland and Quebec, only provinces which haven't their own divorce courts.

Board Forced To Change Dates For Local Fair

PICTON — Prince Edward County Fair at Picton will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 8-9-10, directors were told yesterday by President Willis Sills. Reporting on the annual convention of Ontario Agricultural Societies held in Toronto last week, Mr. Sills stated that it had been found necessary to change the dates from those previously decided upon for August. One of the factors entering into the picture was the securing of a midway and none was available for an earlier date. "Every possible avenue was explored to prevent a change of dates being made, but in the end the delegates to the convention were forced to accept September dates", said the president.

Plans for the Fair were discussed by directors with some new attractions to be investigated. The Board is planning an active campaign to raise funds to complete the interior of the Agricultural Centre which was erected last year at a cost of $34,000.

SUFFERS BROKEN LEG

Garnet Kempers, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kempers, R.R. 8 Picton, suffered a broken leg in an unusual accident. He was playing with a pair of buggy wheels on the country road after dusk. Noticing a car coming, he sought safety in the ditch. The car struck the wheels and they were hurled into the ditch, striking the boy. The car overturned but the driver, Charles Way, 22, a soldier from Camp Borden, escaped injury.

CAR TAKES 50-FOOT FALL

William Carr, 22, a member of the RCSA, Picton, miraculously escaped serious inury when the car he was driving plunged fifty feet down an embankment on the Bay of Quinte shore, five miles northeast of Picton. The accident occurred on the High Shore road. Carr was alone at the time and stated that he lost control of the car when he was attempting to close a door which was not properly shut. The steep bank was rock strewn and the car ended up against some trees.

ALLEGE FAULTY CONSTRUCTION

The Hon. Mr. Justice Moorehouse of Toronto is presiding at Supreme Court sittings here. The town is asking damages of $100,000. for alleged faulty construction of the new filtration plant. Defendants, Cornish Construction Co. is represented by A. W. S. Greer, Q.C.; Phoenix Assurance Co. by the firm of Hughes, Agar, Steen and Bassel; James F. MacLaren Associates by J. J. Robinette, Q.C. The town is represented by its solicitor, R. E. Nourse, Q.C. and Picton Public Utilities by Walter Williston. All except Mr. Nourse are from Toronto. The action is expected to last several days. Mr. Nourse has entered 89 exhibits.

Marysville

MARYSVILLE. —Mr. Harrison Fahey, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Morris, Toronto, spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Fahey.

Sympathy is extended to the family of the late William J. O'Sullivan, who passed away so suddenly on Monday last.

The community was shocked, when Mr. Arnold Portt met with a tragic accident on Saturday, while cutting wood. The bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Masterson, Belleville, spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. McAuley.

The euchre party held in the parish hall on Sunday evening was well attended.

Twenty-one tables were played. Ladies' first prize went to Donald Brennan; second to Mrs. Fred Farrell, third to Bernard Walsh; men, Richard Kennedy, Rev. I. F. Donoghue, and Dave Gartland.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brickley, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Brickley, Mr. Bernard Brickley, Mr. Cyril Williams and Mr. Frank Williams of Detroit, Michigan attended the funeral of their uncle, the late Mr. W. J. O'Sullivan.

PICTON

Chief of Police, Burton Biddle, Dies Suddenly

PICTON — Chief of Police Burton T. Biddle died suddenly at his Mary street home here, Tuesday morning. He had marked his 77th birthday on Saturday. Two years ago he suffered a stroke and was forced to give up active police work but remained as chief of the local force. Though not in good health, the end came suddenly as he was seated in a chair.

Chief Biddle had held that office since July 1918 and few residents were better known or more highly esteemed. He was one of the town's most familiar figures as for many years he stood at the corner of Main and Elizabeth Sts. three times a day to guide the children across the street to the school. He was a great lover of children and hundreds looked on him as a real friend.

Another great interest was the interests of war veterans. Without remuneration he beautified Memorial Park and when needed lowered the flag to half staff. It was many little deeds which won him great esteem.

He was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where the funeral is being held at two o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Born in Kingston, he was orphaned when a young boy and came to Picton to live with an uncle. He was employed by a seed firm when the position of police chief became open and his application was accepted.

Tweed

TWEED — Mr. P. C. (Claude) Barnett is a patient in the General Hospital, Kingston, where he underwent an operation on Saturday morning. His condition is reported as favorable.

Arrangements had all been completed for a trip to Florida by motor car and plane by Misses Annie and Alice Thompson of Tweed, starting on Tuesday morning this week. On Saturday morning Miss Annie Thompson, who in a few weeks will be 94 years old, was stricken with a severe stroke, and has been unconscious ever since. Miss Thompson came to Tweed from Ottawa less than a year ago, and she and her niece, Alice, have been occupying an apartment on Colborne Street. An elderly sister of Miss Thompson's died just a year ago, suddenly, in Ottawa. Mrs. Harry Letch of Tweed is also a niece of Miss Thompson.

Miss Frances Harris spent the week-end visiting friends in Peterborough.

Claire Spratt, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Spratt of Tweed, left on Friday for St. John's where he will receive his initial training with the RCAF, following about three months of preliminary instructions there, he will be posted to another station. He has been employed at the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation in Belleville for the past three and a half years.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sandercock attended the 50th wedding anniversary "At Home" for Mr. and Mrs. George Brooker of 96 Crown St., Trenton, on Tuesday. Mrs. Sandercock was happy to be able to attend as Mr. and Mrs. Brooker are her mother's and father's youngest sister and brother.

Mr. Jack Glydon, Debbie and Dana were Wednesday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. Westover.

The ladies of Centenary, White's and Wesley met at Wesley Church on Monday afternoon for discussion and a social time together.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Young visited friends in Trenton on Tuesday afternoon.

The ladies of the Bay of Quinte Institute attended a quilting at the home of Mrs. Frank Sandercock, on Wednesday. In the afternoon, president Mrs. Ross Stickle conducted the February meeting.

WOULD YOU
LIKE TO KNOW WHAT HAPPENS
WHEN YOU DIAL A NUMBER?

Come and SEE how it works!

Belleville's telephone system will be changed to "dial" in April, and if you'd like to see what actually happens when you dial a number, drop in for a demonstration at 75 Bridge St. (the new telephone building).

By means of an ingenious miniature dial system you can actually watch a number travel from one telephone to another, ringing the bell of the second telephone.

A demonstrator is on hand to explain how it works — from 8.30 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, starting tomorrow.

Wellington

WELLINGTON — Mrs. Tom Smith and Mrs. Laura Wight spent a recent afternoon with Mrs. Annie Jones in Hillier, and also called on Mrs. Sherwin who has been confined to the house for quite a while.

Sympathy is extended to Miss Vera Pyne in the death of her father, who passed away in Kingston hospital Saturday.

Mrs. W. H. Craig, who has been staying for several weeks with her cousin, Mrs. Sherwin, of Hillier, was a dinner guest on Tuesday of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Marvin. Mrs. Craig is leaving on Friday to visit relatives in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Way were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ogivly and Donnie.

Mrs. Clare Newman, Toronto, was a week-end guest of her brother, Mr. Bob Stevenson and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry, The Gore, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Parliament and family, of Belleville, were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yandt.

Mr. Morris Campbell is a patient in Trenton Memorial Hospital having undergone an operation on his knee. Hope he soon will be around again.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gair are entertaining a number of guests on Saturday at a dinner party in honor of their daughater, Joan's birthday. Guests will include friends from Kingston and Toronto. In the evening they will all attend the Ice Follies in the Wellington arena.

PERSONAL SHOWER

Mrs. M. E. Taylor and Mrs. Arnold Post were co-hostesses at a personal shower held on Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Taylor, the guest of honor being Mrs. Jean Wallace, a bride of the near future. Spring flowers made lovely decorations in the rooms. Contests formed the evening's amusement. After the gifts were opened refreshments were served. The hostesses were assisted by Mrs. Clifford Raynor, Mrs. Elliott Shannon and Beverly Wallace. Out-of-town guests were Mrs. George Noble and Mrs. R. W. Vandervoort, of Stirling; Mrs. William Daniels, of Campbellford and Mrs. Alexander of Bloomfield.

W.C.S. ASSEMBLY

On Friday the students of the W.C.S. held an assembly with Colleen Yandt, first vice-president presiding. The Scripture was read by Barbara Dick. The business part of the meeting followed, which in turn was followed by the program, with a lively sing-song led by Carley Cleave, John Skratt and Wayne Tripp. Grade 12 presented its play for competition, "Oh Say Can You Sing?" The cast consisted of Carley Cleave, Sally East, Shirley Reed, Joyce Dick, Bill McKenzie and Ted Foster, with Marilyn Callow as announcer and Colleen Yandt as prompter. No one enjoyed the play any more than the players, even though they kept the prompter busy most of the time.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — The play, "The Meddlesome Maid," sponsored by the CGIT of Thomasburg, and played recently by the "Endeavors Class," of West Huntingdon in the IOOF hall, was a decided success. The entire cast acted their parts well and kept the capacity audience amused throughout. Mr. Fred Porter supplied instrumental music during the intermissions.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bateman and Ruby and Mrs. H. B. Richardson visited on Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Richardson, Errol and Shirley at Hilton. It was made into a happy celebration when with cake and lighted candles, all sang "Happy Birthday" to grandmother Bateman. Enroute home Mrs. Bateman stopped at her daughter's, Mrs. C. E. Richardson's home in Stirling, intending to visit for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Richardson and small sons of Belleville, were Sunday callers at their mother's home.

The Woman's Guild of Christ Church are holding a card party in the IOOF hall on Wednesday evening, February 16th.

Services were held on Sunday in Christ church in the afternoon and in the United Church in the evening. Attendance was only fair.

The Sunday School seemed to be influenced by the weather, too. A difference of 20 in attendance under the previous Sunday record. This is rather discouraging for the Sunday School teachers who are really trying to make the sessions interesting and an influence for good to all.

Messrs. Harold and Earl Morton attended a business conference in Toronto last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Adams and Lewis were recent Toronto visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Freeborn of Marlbank, were recent callers at the Earl Morton home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Martin, Empey Hill, visited last week with Mr. and Mrs. W. Martin. While here they also visited Mr. and Mrs. Albert Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Albert McTaggart, Tweed.

Bringing Up Baby

Hints Collected by Mrs. Dan Gerber
(Mother of 5)

Time really travels at high speed during baby's first year. Seems only a couple of yesterdays away that baby was completely dependent upon you. Now independence is the order of the day for your self-styled explorer. Such fun, finding out what feet are for—that little hands can suddenly direct a spoon—or that a coo actually comes out as a word. All part of the business of growing up; of learning coordination, control, self-confidence.

• • •

Toy talk. Wonderful day when a toddler discovers the joys of "personality" toys. Dolls, teddy bears and all manner of animals suddenly become playmates, not just playthings. They become friends to love, cuddle, share secrets with.

• • •

Your baby will love the new, exclusive GERBER BABY DOLL. A $3.75 value for only $2.00 and 12 Gerber's Baby Food labels. All the charm of the famous Gerber Baby, captured in a 12 in., life-like baby doll. Completely safe, with soft, vinyl plastic head, rubber body. It drinks, wets, sits up, has movable arms and legs. Comes with diaper, bib, nurser, Gerber's Cereal play boxes, cereal dish and spoon.

Mail 12 labels or cereal box tops and $2.00 to Gerber-Ogilvie Baby Foods, Limited, Box 68, Toronto 18, Canada. Offer good only in Canada. Expires Dec. 31, 1955.

• • •

• • •

Part and parcel of a toddler's growing-up experience—menus that include more grown-up foods. Gerber's Junior Foods fill baby's new need nicely. For they have the tender, evenly-minced texture that tykes with a few teeth can handle easily. To say nothing of the appetizing true-to-nature colors, the naturally good, true flavors that make for high chair meal appeal.

Lonsdale

LONSDALE — Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Blair and family, of Maberly, were week-end guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Gartland.

Mr. George McLellan spent the week-end at his home here. George is now working at Havelock.

The community was shocked to hear of the tragic accident on Saturday which caused the death of Mr. Arnold Portt, Shannonville. Mr. Portt was well liked in the surrounding communities and sincere sympathy is extended to the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Jenkinson and family were Sunday callers at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Reid.

Sorry to hear the Ruttan children are home sick with the 'flu.

Mr. Harold Fox, Strathcona, was a week-end caller at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Macdonald. Dennis and Noel are visiting with Edward Ruttan.

Quite a number of the young people attended the bingo and dance in Read on Friday night, it being the last before Lent.

Hastings County Farm Forum

Four forums reported meeting on January 7; Brookdale (16) at Frank Phillips', Foxboro (10) at Berson Mitts', Hazzards (22) at Walter Wannamaker's and River Valley (12) at Glenn Bush's. The topic was "Public Relations".

1. (a) All four forums agreed that ignorance is the cause of misunderstanding. There should be an exchange of viewpoints and discussions between rural and urban groups to enlighten each concerning the other's difficulties. Personal contact is often far more important than group contact. When groups (rural and urban) meet, if both groups are given a chance to tell their story it will help to clear up ugly suspicions. Discussions should be confined to facts. "Half truths" and the "I think ideas", are most damaging to good understanding.

(b) Newspapers and radio have a wonderful opportunity and a huge responsibility to do a good public relations job. Editors who write editorials on problems of agriculture and labor and base their arguments on half-truths to embarrass a political opponent, do little but create misunderstanding and ill-will. The radio station, CJBQ, Belleville, and the local newspapers are doing wonderful jobs of public relations for agriculture. Information concerning coming events should be forwarded to both radio station and newspapers.

COMPULSORY FEES

2. The majority of the forums thought a compulsory instead of voluntary system of fees should be instituted, River Valley says, "because the guy who doesn't pay gets the benefit of the ones who pay". Hazzard's says: "Yes, anything worth having is worth paying for. We think that the foundation of our hopes for better farm organizations, better agricultural industry, better communities; a better Canada, and a better world is understanding. Good public relations and not guns is the price we must pay for understanding".

BUS TRIP VISITS GENERAL MOTORS, OSHAWA

On February 1st a bus load of 33 farm forum friends embarked from Foxboro and Frankford. On arrival at General Motors, Oshawa at 10 a.m. they were taken on a tour of the plant (newly opened, in October, 1954). They followed the assembly line seeing at first hand the construction of a car. Each man had his own tools and his own job, which he performed as his work came to him; then it passed on to his neighbor.

General Motors employs approximately 10,000 workers, of these 1,399 have worked 25 years or more. There are two separate assembly lines, one for Chevrolet and Pontiac, the other for Buick and Oldsmobile. The best way to understand how cars are assembled is to arrange a tour and see for oneself.

The farm forum was then taken to Toronto, After lunch they toured the Parliament Buildings, and Museum. After dinner the Ice Fol- Since the trip there has been time for reflection and thought.

Wings Start Big Drive For League Title With 3-2 Win Over Chicago

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

THE SOUP SIMMERS!

The steaming senior "B" hockey pot bubbled merrily today as another ingredient was tossed into the stock. The Clinton Comets handed the Kingston Goodyears a 7-4 defeat in Clinton and injected themselves into the playoff bisque with a possibility. The surging Brockville Magedomas, battling desperately to oust the Memos or any club laying claim to that fourth playoff berth, racked up their third win in four starts (the other was a tie) by defeating the Cornwall Colts 4-1 on Brockville ice.

The Magedomas' victory again brought them to within six points of the Memos with both clubs having five games to play. This means Brockville must needs win three and tie one of the five to get into the charmed circle, providing, of course, the Memos lose all of the quintet. Clinton can amass 48 points by winning its remaining five games and mathematically tie the Memos for fourth spot. The Comets are here Friday night against the Memos and like the rest of the clashes from here in, it reeks with importance.

The speed at which the flying Magedomas are travelling since their stretch-run for a berth means the Memos cannot afford to let up a single ounce. And next Tuesday night's game between the Magedomas and Memos at Brockville could very well be the battle of the season and the turning point for one club or the other. It is a four-pointer whichever way you look at it.

POINT ANNE - CAMPBELLFORD

Point Anne and Campbellford of the Trent Valley Hockey League go to the hockey mat tonight in Memorial Arena under new jurisdiction. The clubs clash in the first game of an Ontario Hockey Association intermediate "C" round robin which includes the Marmora entry. The Poiziters, who respect the ability of the Campbellford Club are taking no chances and will ice their full strength in the initial tilt. The three teams play four games each in the robin and the two finishing on top of the heap earn the right to enter the OHA playdowns.

The Ontario Hotelkeepers' Association, an organization whose interests reach far and beyond the confines of their own administration and well-being, have earned another feather for a well-decorated hat of achievement.

Sportsmen of the province under the aegis of the Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association, and in conjunction with them, will contribute a generous amount to the Ontario Crippled Children's Association at the Celebrities Dinner slated for the Royal York tomorrow night.

Some 800 sportsmen will attend the dinner (at $25 per plate) and this amount, augmented by donations, etc., will amount to something like $20,000, not a bad addition to the crippled kiddies' exchequer.

But here's where the Hotelmen come in... They have generously offered to pick up the tab for the dinner which will amount to something in the neighborhood of $5,000, plus assuring that the entire proceeds from the dinner will go to the kiddies.

Jack Yanover, proprietor of the New Queen's Hotel here, and vice-president of the Ontario Hotelkeepers' Association, said today that the donation of the "dinner tab" is not confined to the executive of his organization. Every member, regardless of location, will be contributing his share.

If efforts of the seven members of the Belleville branch is a criterion, then the association is doing yeoman service in province-wide community work. They have generously donated to welfare, and other projects, sports, etc., here. Trophies bear their name while many unpublicized efforts are in their books.

HUB WAS HAPPY!

Sergeant Hub Smith, matchmaker at the forthcoming boxing show at Station Trenton RCAF, in aid of the Trenton Community Centre campaign was elated this morning.

The ex-boxer and man-about-rings, who knows more than a passing share of fight answers, learned that one of his star attractions had won his bout in the Toronto Newsboys' 32nd annual boxing show in Toronto.

He is Corporal Don Spears, an army fighter from Kingston, who is matched with Paul Keeney, starry Barrie clouter in one of the special five-round bouts at the Trenton show. Spears won a decision over Paul Heise, Toronto, in one of the best fights of the night. Hence Sarge Hub's elation.

Meanwhile, we are informed the "grudge" battle between Eddie Schamerhorn of Belleville and Roy DeShane, Trenton, is rounding out into what should be the fistic furore of many a year. Both boys are training hard and it is reliably reported, there is no love lost between the rival camps, and that makes for a bruising battle. It could steal the show and interest in both Belleville and Trenton is mounting steadily over this set-to.

The Schamerhorn-DeShane fight will follow the top-billed scrap between Don Wallace, hard-hitting welter of Barrie and Gunner Ernie Durelle, of the Royal School of Artillery, Picton. Both boys come highly rated and should easily furnish one of the main attractions of the evening.

The special attraction, the "Battle of the B's", between Mayor John Both, of Belleville, and Mayor Ross Burtt, of Trenton, is also causing considerable excitement in the district. The show is scheduled for the station sports hangar, Monday, February 28.

Vault Habs for First Place As Reibel Fires Home Winner; Terry Sawchuk Returns to Net

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit Red Wings were back in first place in the National Hockey League today in what may be their big drive to clinch a seventh straight league championship.

The Detroiters nudged Montreal Canadiens out of the lead Tuesday night with a 3-2 victory over the last - place Chicago Black Hawks. It gave them a total of 73 points, one up on Canadiens with only 13 games left in the gruelling 1954-55 campaign.

The Red Wings, who have made a habit of winning championships but blowing some Stanley Cups, have one thing against them, though. They have played two more games than the Montrealers and meet Canadiens in three more engagements before the post-season playoffs.

REIBEL DID IT

Reibel's 10-foot screened hot crashed into the cage behind goaltender Hank Bassen at 19:02 of the final period, dumping Hawks for their 34th defeat of the season. It was Reibel's 17th goal of the campaign.

Glen Skov tallied his 13th goal of the season at 4:24 of the second and defenceman Red Kelly got his ninth at 6:57 of the same period to round out the Detroit scoring.

Red Sullivan and Jack McIntyre scored for the Hawks, Sullivan sending them into a 1-0 lead in the first period and McIntyre deadlocking it at 2-2 in the second.

Bassen had to stop 42 Detroit blasts. Terry Sawchuk, 25-year-old netminder who was out for two games for a rest, made his return a victorious one. He stopped 22 Chicago shots.

Mercs Blank Dutchies, Bulldogs Tie In Hot Battle for Second Place

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The battle for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League was anything but settled Tuesday night. And it won't be decided until the last game of the season.

Owen Sound Mercurys, defending league champions, moved into a second-place tie with the Windsor Bulldogs, blanking the title-holding Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen 2-0 in Owen Sound, after the Bulldogs only managed to squeeze out a 3-3 tie with the last-place Niagara Falls Cataracts in Niagara Falls.

Both Windsor and Owen Sound now are in second place with 56 points, eight behind the leading Dutchies and four ahead of the Stratford Indians. Chatham Maroons with 35 points and the Cataracts with 27 trail the league.

Mercurys' goaltender Bob Gillson was the hero in the Owen Sound victory as he wracked up his third shutout and helped in keeping alive Mercurys' chances of finishing second. He turned away 25 shots, 15 in the third period.

Windsor Bulldogs had to come from behind to take an overtime tie with Niagara Falls before 1,100 Cataract fans.

Cataracts' Gord Harley and Windsor's Reg Abbot made it 3-2 in the second but Frank Bathgate tied it up at 9:13 of the third period while Niagara Falls was a man short. The overtime period was scoreless.

Owen Sound and Windsor each have one more game before the schedule ends. Windsor will play the Cataracts in the final game Feb. 20.

Toronto Rink Favored To Retain Trophy

TORONTO (CP) — Verne Matthewman today appeared a favorite to retain the Royal York Trophy as the Ontario bonspiel entered its third day of competition.

Matthewman's rink from the Toronto Granite Club went into the Royal York fourth round with an 11-3 victory Tuesday over D. B. Carlyle of Toronto. Carlyle's rink last year won the Seagram's Trophy.

The curlers are shooting for six trophies in the five-day bonspiel which began Monday. Play was interrupted Tuesday night when the nearly 500 curlers attended the Ontario Curling Association's annual banquet.

OTHER TROPHIES

Third- and fourth-round competition for the Birks Trophy was scheduled today. Also cheduled were the second and third rounds of the North American Life Trophy, the first and second rounds of Seagrams and first round of the Parker Trophy.

A. C. McCartney of Peterborough, W. M. Lickley of New Liskeard and Earl Ross of Agincourt advanced Tuesday to the fourth round of the Royal York.

McCartney eliminated Earl Smith of Toronto 12-6; Lickley defeated J. H. Curtis of Fenelon Falls 13-9; and Ross defeated G. P. Thompson of Toronto 7-6.

R. E. Dallyn of Brockville moved into the third round of the Birks with a 12-3 victory over W.J. Hawkins of Toronto. Also advancing were E. N. Gregory of Lindsay, with an 11-5 win over Don Stewart of Orillia; and Hamilton's Stan Jones with an 8-7 win over C. N. Sedgewick of Toronto.

Charles Bibby of Sudbury defeated Dr. J. A. Wright of London 7-6 in first-round play for the North American. A. J. Parkhill, Oshawa, advanced with a 7-6 victory over Gordon Russell of Brampton and A. L. McPhie of Kingston defeated M. Butcher of Orillia 9-4.

Eleven of the 32 first-round games in the Seagrams were played. Harry Sifton of London eliminated P. B. Coulton, Toronto, 9-6.

Also in Seagrams, P. Canning of Oshawa defeated Mac Butcher, Orillia, 8-6 and Gord Russell of Brampton defeated R. W. Carr of Toronto 8-4.

North Bay Rink Wins Northern Title

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — Rudy Steski of North Bay Tuesday night won the right to represent northern Ontario in the Canadian curling championships by crushing the Les Redford rink of the McIntyre Curling Club 14-6.

The victory, in the last regulation game of a three-rink double round-robin series, gave North Bay, Northern Ontario Curling Association champions, a record of three wins against one defeat.

The McIntyre foursome, Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Curling Association representatives, managed only one victory in four games to finish behind the Jimmy Guy Rink of Kenora, northwestern Ontario champions, who broke even in the tournament.

Steski earlier in the day took the lead from Guy by turning back the Kenora contingent in a 13-end thriller. A victory for Guy would have meant the title for northwestern Ontario.

HOT AND COLD

Both rinks blew hot and cold Tuesday night before Steski laid in a four on the ninth end for a 13-6 lead. The match ended an end later, with North Bay lying still another rock.

In its early stages, the match had all the earmarks of a romp for Steski, who piled up a 7-0 lead on the first three ends. But Redford steadied to counter with a double and a triple on the next two ends to fight back into contention.

But Steski, a master with the draw, made it tough the rest of the way and after yielding a single on the seventh, got it back on the eighth and broke the game wide open on the ninth.

Two critical misses on takeouts by Pat Hamilton, third, and Redford helped cement Steski's big end.

With Steski are Bob Wyatt, third, Owen Staples, second, and Ed McCormick, lead.

Teepees, Bilts Maintain Pace With Victories

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ontario Hockey Association Junior A's league - leaders kept abreast of each other in the standings by posting victories over the league's two bottom teams Tuesday night. But both had to work for it, even though they had the advantage of home ice.

Guelph Biltmores and St. Catharines TeePees, who share first place in the standings, had to come from behind before earning victories over Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks and Barrie Flyers.

In Guelph, where the Biltmores edged the Canucks 3-2, the home team spotted Kitchener a two-goal lead before bouncing back with three consecutive tallies.

At St. Catharines the Flyers matched the TeePees for 2½ periods before succumbing to a four-goal upsurge that resulted in an 8-5 victory for St. Catharines.

TIED IT UP

Ike Scott's goal midway through the third period topped the Biltmore comeback and gave them the victory. John Gillis and Bill Sweeney tied it up for Guelph in the second period after Irv Spencer and Whitey Youngberg had given the Canucks a two-goal spread.

The Flyers took a 2-1 lead against St. Catharines in the first period and then went ahead again 5-4 in the third before the TeePees exploded.

Frances Dafoe, Norris Bowden Retain World Skating Crown

VIENNA (CP) — Skating brilliantly despite wind, snow and below-zero temperatures, Frances Dafoe and Norris Bowden retained the world pairs title for Canada Tuesday before a sellout crowd of 6,500 Viennese.

The Toronto skaters, winners of this year's Canadian pairs title, nosed out Sissy Schwarz and Kurt Oppelt of Austria by .05 scoring points to retain possession of the world championship they won last year at Oslo.

SNELLING 8TH

Seventeen-year-old Charles Snelling of Toronto, Canadian senior men's champion the last two years, placed eighth in the men's singles, one position below his showing at Oslo last year. Snelling, who weighs only 135 pounds, appeared to have difficulty bucking the wind.

Miss Dafoe and Bowden, skating partners for six years now, ran into unexpectedly strong competition from the Austrian pair, who equalled them in placements with 17.5 and ended with 10.83 in point scoring compared with the Canadians' 10.88.

Marianne and Laszlo Nagy, the Hungarian couple who were touted as serious threats to the Canadians' supremacy after winning the European title, finished third among the 12 pairs from seven countries.

AUSTRIAN FELL

A spill also marred the performance of Canada's Wagner-Paul entry. Miss Wagner, at 16 a year younger than her partner, slipped and fell during the closing seconds of their routine. Up to that point, they had skated well.

Today will be devoted to the women's compulsory figures in the afternoon and the men's free skating at night.

Kitchener Club Will Operate In Intercounty

KITCHENER (CP) — Kitchener Panthers said Tuesday they wil operate in the senior Intercounty Baseba Leaguel this season.

The announcement was made in a statement folowing a meeting Tuesday at which the club said it hopes to make arrangements with the Kitchener park board for use of Victoria Park for home games.

The club said earlier it would not operate unless the park board changed its park rental terms within a 24-hour period. The period expired last Friday without the board announcing any changes in its terms.

The statement added that the club's obligations with the Canadian Legion which holds the franchise, are fully paid up to Dec. 1, 1955.

Lower Bracket Gridiron Committees To Discuss Senior Control of Clubs

TORONTO (CP)—A request for control of Canadian junior and intermediate football players by senior teams will be discussed this weekend at the annual meetings of the Canadian Rugby Union's junior and intermediate committees.

The committees meet here Friday and Saturday and the main item on the agenda is the senior clubs' request.

Under present CRU registration rules any senior teams which signs a junior or intermediate player must pay the player's club $250. But a sponsoring team has no first call privilege.

Senior teams want the rule changed so they have first call on any players with a team they sponsor.

NOT OWNERSHIP

CRU officials said outright ownership of players is not involved.

"There'll be no ownership of players like they have in hockey," said Jess Fitton, CRU junior secretary-registrar.

"The senior clubs feel they would like some protection for their investment in junior and intermediate teams," Fitton said. "And some measure of protection is needed. But we don't want to tie down the junior and intermediates as they do in hockey."

The committees are expected to come up with some such plan as this:

If a senior club sponsors a junior or intermediate team, the sponsoring club will have first call on any of the sponsored team's players until a certain date, likely in April or May. If the sponsoring club doesn't sign a player by that date then other senior clubs are free to bid for his services.

WOULD HELP

Quite a number of players will be affected by a new ruling, if any is made, said Fitton. Thirty-five per cent of the players who played in last year's Grey Cup game came up from junior ranks, he said.

The request is expected to produce some heated argument before anything definite is worked out.

Fitton said the junior committee will also discuss ways and means of further promoting junior football in non-football towns. He issued an invitation to any towns, service clubs, or other organizations interested in sponsoring a team to get in touch with him.

Purple Eagles Whip Varsity

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP)—Niagara's Purple Eagles, buoyed by a bid to the national invitational tournament in New York this week, overpowered the University of Toronto basketball squad Tuesday night, 98-61.

Niagara jumped into an early 12-0 lead and from then on widened the gap steadily. At the half Niagara was out front 45-30. The Purple Eagles regulars played only the first 10 minutes of the first half, and about five minutes after intermission.

Mantle Signs With Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Mantle, New York Yankees' Golden Boy who has failed to reach the potential predicted for him, has agreed to 1955 baseball terms, thus helping reduce the weighty list of unsigned players in major league ball.

Yankee officials were buoyed not so much by Mickey's signature as by the medical report which showed the 23-year-old flychaser in excellent health.

Mantle has had a siege of ailments since he hurt his leg in the 1951 world series against the Giants—his first year.

Walls Fights Parker Mar. 7

TORONTO (CP)—Earl Walls of Toronto will defend his Canadian heavyweight boxing championship against James J. Parker March 7, matchmaker Deacon Allen said Tuesday night. It will go 12 rounds.

Walls, ranked fifth among the world contenders for champion Rocky Marciano's crown, has been in training for the last week. Parker, the native of Barrie who fights out of Patterson, N.J., is training at Chatham, N.J.

It will be the first meeting between the two.

'Bobo' Olson 4-1 Favorite Over Tiger Jones

CHICAGO (AP)—Ralph (Tiger) Jones, upsetter of Sugar Ray Robinson a month ago, unflinchingly challenges middleweight champion Bobo Olson in a non-title 10-rounder tonight at Chicago Stadium.

The confident Yonkers, N.Y., Negro has been installed a 4-1 underdog against the finely-conditioned San Francisco titleholder who is unbeaten in his last 18 starts and has lost only six times in 66 bouts.

The fight will be televised nationally (CBS) starting at 10 p.m. EST and is expected to attract 7,500 fans. Illinois uses the point system of scoring, with a maximum of 10 points a round.

It should be an interesting affair with Jones, once the third-ranked middleweight contender, trying to swarm over Olson for a showing—that could set him up for a shot at Bobo's crown later.

"I see a short cut to the title," said the 26-year-old Jones. "I know he'll trade blows with me on the inside and that's what I like. There won't be any chasing around the ring like I had to do to catch Robinson."

Turpin Returns With Victory

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP)—Randy Turpin, former world middleweight champion, returned to the ring Tuesday night after a nine-month layoff and won in eight rounds when Ray Schmitt, Luxembourg's light heavyweight champion, was disqualified for holding.

Turpin, making his first bid in the light heavy division, weighed 171, and Schmitt 175¾. It was a scheduled 10-rounder.

Star Tackles Jump Redskins For Stampeders

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two star tackles who formerly played at the University of Maryland jumped Washington Redskins Tuesday and signed contracts with Calgary Stampeders.

Bernard Nordlinger, counsel for the Redskins, said a $50,000 suit will be filed today against Calgary coach Jack Hennemier "for interfering with existing contracts and enticing away the services of an employee."

George Preston Marshall, the Redskins owner, said he hadn't decided yet whether or not to bring any legal action against the players, Dick (Little Mo) Modzelewski and Bob Morgan.

Modzelewski said in a telephone interview that "we will get much more than what we've been getting." He declined to say how much more.

NEW ROUND

Their departure opened a new round in the feud that has simmered despite peace talks between the National Football League and some Canadian clubs.

Marshall said "these peace talks aren't just a lot of talk. Six of the nine Canadian clubs are well organized and financially sound. They're trying to whip this thing into line."

He added that the other three clubs—he listed them as Calgary, Vancouver and Toronto — "are bucking the other six in their efforts to see to it that contracts are not violated."

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—Failure of the National Football League to make a "no raiding" peace with the Canadian professionals is a great bit of news for United States college players who expect to make a career of the money game. Competition between the two leagues has made the contracts come much higher for several years now.

For many years the pros played for coolie wages, with $2,000 salaries common for the playing season and only an occasional backfield star, such as Sammy Baugh, getting into five figures. Although it did not last long, the All-America Conference improved matters greatly, forcing the old-established National League to go much higher for the stars it wanted and probably doubling the average club payroll.

With the absorption of the All-America by the older circuit this competition ceased. Then the Canadians came along with financial lures both to players and coaches that for several years now have brought tears to the eyes of American owners. Baltimore Colts, for recent example, were reported to have gone to $25,000 to sign Alan Ameche, Wisconsin's all-American fullback.

The players will be the big losers if the Canadians ever call it quits.

CARDS SIGN TWO

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Two young St. Louis Cardinal outfielders who won minor league batting championships last season have signed their 1955 contracts with the Cardinals, the club announced Tuesday. They are Harry Elliott, whose .350 batting average with San Diego was the best in the Pacific Coast League, and Bill Virdon, who topped all hitters in the International League with .333 at Rochester.

Will Ease Hazards Of Aintree Course

AINTREE, England (AP)—Mrs. Mirabel Topham, boss of Aintree race track, agreed Tuesday to ease slightly the hazards of the four-mile, 856-yard Grand National—world's toughest steeplechase.

An outcry for alterations in the course arose after the deaths of four horses in last year's race. That figure brought the deaths in the National to eight in five years. The National will be run March 26 this year.

Mrs. Topham said Becher's brook—the course's toughest obstacle — has been raised and graded to prevent horses being trapped while jumping and a "run out" has been made so that fallen horses can get clear of the water.

The fence following Becher's has been lowered six inches to bring it to the minimum of four feet six inches allowed under British national hunt rules. That change reduces the effort needed by horses after they have negotiated the difficulties of Becher's brook.

Other jumps and hazards will not be changed.

Marlene, Pal Advance To Second Round

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Favorites, among them Marlene Stewart, won as expected Tuesday in the 20th annual mixed foursomes two-ball amateur golf tournament at the Everglades Club with three of the former winners advancing to the second round.

Miss Stewart, of Fonthill, Ont., and Hobart Manley, Jr., Savannah, Ga., 1953 winners, defeated Marilyn Klumb, West Bend, Wis., and the Rev. James Durkin, Palm Beach, 5 and 4.

Five teams had tied for medalist honors with 71s at the opening of the tournament Monday and a matching of cards gave the honors to Polly Riley, Fort Worth, Tex., and J. Walcott Brown, Manasquam, N.J.

Today, Miss Stewart and Manley meet Marjorie Burns of Greensboro, N.C. and Les Handt of Tampa.

Rocky's 'Golden Beak' in Shape, Will Fight Don Cockell in Frisco

GROSSINGER, N.Y. (AP)—England's pudgy Don Cockell will get the first chance to put heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano's battered and valuable nose to supreme test in a title fight in May. The site probably will be San Francisco.

After watching his heavily-protected meal ticket box three rounds with sparmate Keene Simmons Tuesday, manager Al Weill said he was satisfied with the condition of the champ's schnozzola. No blood was shed. Al immediately pronounced Rocky fit for duty and announced that Cockell, the 26-year-old British Empire king, would be the opponent.

Weill said he had been assured by San Francisco Jimmy Murray, who would co-promote with Jim Norris of the International Boxing Club, that the fight could draw Cockell, a stocky, thick-necked blacksmith, has been undefeated since he was flattened in 11 round by Randy Turpin for the Britis Empire 175-pound title 2½ year ago. Grown to 200-plus, the Brito numbers Harry (Kid) Matthew and Roland La Starza among hi victims.

Cockell ranks as the No. 2 con tender behind Cuba's Nino Valdes

Asked about Valdes and ligh heavyweight Archie Moore, wh have been clamoring for a crack at the title, Weill snapped "They'l get their turn when we're ready. Rocky never ducked no one an he'll flatten 'em all in time."

FOGOLIN OUT

DETROIT (AP) — Lee Fogolin, defenceman with Chicago Blac Hawks of the National Hockey League, Tuesday was declared ou of action for the rest of the season due to a broken arm he suffered Nov. 20. Doctors told him not t play any more this season.

Granger Has No Particular Ambitions to Be Movie Star

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Farley Granger is a fellow who doesn't want to be a movie star.

Sounds screwy, doesn't it? But the handsome actor puts action behind his words. He's here now doing "The Brass Ring," his first Hollywood film in two years.

It's not that he couldn't have done other pictures here. When he left he had a solid fan following and plenty of offers from the studios. But he turned his back on Hollywood. He made his home in New York, studied acting, performed in summer theatres and made a film in Italy.

When I asked him whether such an absence didn't endanger his movie career, he replied:

"I have no particular ambitions to be a movie star, as such. I think the age of the film personality is passing. It had its heyday when MGM built up its vast stable of stars.

"But I think we now are entering the age of the actor. The time is coming when the top actors will not be just film stars, but devote their talents to all mediums—the stage, TV and films. And the better an actor is, the more chance he'll have to prosper.

"That's why I left Hollywood. I thought I needed to know more about acting. So I went East to learn."

The investment has paid off, he said. He has received handsome offers for stage plays, both straight and musicals, TV as well as films. Right now he's playing a heavy hunk of acting—the role of a New York punk who ends up in the electric chair.

"Sam told me I'd be ruined if I left him," Granger smiled. "I'm not worried. He said the same thing when Gary Cooper left him."

AT THE McCARTHY

Maugham Story is a Technicolor Triumph for Newton

And here in the title role is Robert Newton, filmdom's most exciting character. It is a part in which he can truly revel . . . the drunken outcast of a wealthy family living for his monthly remittance on a South Sea island. The carefree, violent, moody "Honourable Ted," a man of swift passions and lovable humour, Newton makes it his finest screen role, lighting the film with his superb portrayal.

He is partnered in his return to British films by lovely Glynis Johns and handsome Donald Sinden. Miss Johns brings a demure, yet sturdy quality to her part of a missionary's sister. She is the prim girl who finally reveals a warm, welcoming heart beneath her cold exterior. In her scenes with Newton — particularly the tense sequences when they are about to face the ordeal of sacrifice — she shows a rich human emotion that adds enormously to the picture's atmosphere.

Sinden, who is now one of Britain's top leading men, collects further laurels as the island's Resident. His smooth sense of comedy is allowed to peep through even during the film's most dynamic moments.

For all three "The Beachcomber" brings triumph of the first water.

Of the strong supporting cast, Paul Rogers as the missionary, and Donald Pleasence as a native clerk stand out. Their characterisations enrich the production and help its slick speed.

Well photographed, and excellently directed by Muriel Box, "The Beachcomber" proves once again how eminently suitable is Maugham's material for the screen. It proves too that Britain's studios are on the top rungs in the international world of film entertainment.

Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis Provide Best Show of Careers

NEW YORK (AP)—Sometimes Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis go through a television show with all the enthusiasm of small boys picking up their toys at bedtime.

But once in a while they pull out the stops and give it everything they have. That's what happened in their Comedy Hour appearance last Sunday.

Some comedians start with reality and exaggerate to the ridiculous. Martin and Lewis begin with the ridiculous and proceed to absolute absurdity, sheer nonsense undiluted and unspoiled by any trace of reality.

When he's trying, as he was in his latest appearance, Lewis is one of the best clowns of the era. He lacks the finesse of the accomplished comic who achieves laughs by well-timed quips and situations. It's pure buffoonery by a naturally funny guy.

It's too bad Dean and Jerry sometimes seem to give their TV shows the brush-off treatment, because they can be tops when they try. And their latest show should provide balm for some of the bruises Comedy Hour has been taking from the rival Ed Sullivan show in recent weeks.

There seldom has been a more distinguished list of guests who could not be there than for the Academy Awards nominations telecast out of Hollywood Saturday night.

The production required 200 technicians and 18 cameras, largest concentration of cameras for any live telecast up to now. Never were so many assembled to telecast so few.

The televasts of the actual awards have depended for appeal mainly on the glittering array of stars. It's to be hoped they'll be back for this year's distribution of Oscars March 30. The nominations, televised nationally for the first time, provided a poor substitute for George Gobel.

* * *

The filmed TV version of the Ranger was given special one-hour 22nd anniversary televasts on both CBS and ABC last weekend. The film went back to the origin of the Lone Ranger legend and why he wears a mask, but omitted one of the principal reasons—so it can go almost without notice when actors are changed in the lead role.

Many fathers who were Lone Ranger radio fans as boys now have sons who are fans of the TV version, or of the radio version that's still going strong.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Take a look at the cards in your hand and you have some idea of what you would like to tell your partner. But when your partner makes a bid, what is the picture you get of the cards in his hand?

A few weeks of practice in this is little enough. Take one a day for that long, however, and you will begin taking photographs with your brain. Start as if you deal and had this hand:

♥K 9 4 2
♣9 3

Your opening bid with this south hand is one spade. Suppose a response of one no-trump comes from your partner. What is he telling you? What is he asking you? What do you do next?

The fact that he bid at all shows that he has more than the two tricks you assumed he might have. The fact that he bid no-trump tells you that he has three no-trump tricks; that is, high cards.

Thus, you can picture him with three cards from among the aces and kings and queens that you do not see in your own hand. If he has not three of them he has lied to you.

The fact that he did not first bid a suit shows that he has not a biddable suit in hearts or diamonds or clubs. The fact that he did not assist shows he lacks adequate support for spades.

The fact that he did not bid a new suit or make a jump bid says he does not order you to bid again. Therefore, he tells you that you may pass unless you have something more to show voluntarily.

So, you look to see if you have another voluntary bid. Do you have another biddable suit or is your spade suit rebiddable? No. Then you have no more suit bids as he has not named a suit to assist.

If there is any bid left to you it would be no-trump. To raise in no-trump would show you have more than the four high cards shown in your opening bid. Lacking such, all you can do is pass.

Pass is the zipper for the lips of a player who does not bid again.

REVERSE DECISION

MONTREAL (CP)—The policy-making city executive committee Tuesday reversed an earlier decision and allotted $500,000 for charitable organizations in the 1955-56 budget. Mayor Jean Drapeau, who announced the allotment, said it was not "a recognition of any obligation."

AT THE CAPITOL — Olympic god, the great Bob Mathias stars in the dramatic story of his own life life in Allied Artists' "The Bob Mathias Story" starting Thursday at the Capitol depicting his own true life story.

AT THE CAPITOL — Jane Powell and Vic Damone are the singing sweethearts of MGM's melody-filled Technicolor musical "Rich, Young and Pretty" opening Thursday at the Capitol Theatre. Damone, America's Hit Parade Headliner, makes his screen debut in the new production with the big cast also starring Danielle Darrieux, Wendell Corey and Fernando Lamas. On the same program the true life story of Bob Mathias in which he stars "The Bob Mathias Story."

AT THE BELLE —Gene Kelly as the Navy lieutenant who risks his life in dangerous experiments on a British project to develop a new undersea explosive, in "Crest of the Wave", a suspense-packed drama now playing at the Belle Theatre. The other attraction on the same program is "Prisoner of War", a vital expose of life in P.O.W. camps.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars,

For Thursday, February 17, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Whatever your schedule, self-control is a "must." If you allow [illegible] to be too upset (though perhaps rightly provoked at times), don't look for good results or as friendly cooperation.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Generally similar configurations to Aries; follow same advice. You are keen, don't antagonize, or make over-important the lesser things. Keep your best personality on top.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Some restrictions; don't think because you "got away with it" once you can again, if it isn't the thing to do. Tend to vulnerable issue. thoroughly. Have some healthy fun: get proper rest.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Fortunate aspects for a fine outlook and big things to be done if you start early, keep pushing forward in sane, intelligent manner, and reach for right benefits.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Excellent influences. Benefic rays for all honest things and activities well handled. But your better self must dominate. Allocate your action to cover important requisites first.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Industry, trades, manufacturing, building, engineering, maritime interests, home duties among most favored. Workers, management should be of one cooperative mind to achieve lasting rewards.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Opportune period for your ingenuity and usual sturdy way of handling affairs. Offer help where help is needed. Expect assistance, perhaps unexpectedly fine advantages.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Don't countenance unnecessary oppression, nor provoke difficult situations. Be thoughtful in act, speech. Offer aid, where it is needed, but avoid contention, and don't strain.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—A. M. not all encouraging for other than known or routine business, undertakings. Cooperating where you should can solve many matters that could be annoying. Be not brusque.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Employer, employe, professional, student, each can move forward with relative gains under proper effort. Each can match his opponent if keeping up to par and with right objectives.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Some restrictions in personal matters, affairs not thoroughly studied. Day is generally for healthy energy, intelligent thinking; you can turn in creditable returns.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Give work the intuitive touch and initiative it needs. Pisces can excel in science, mechanics; has patience, but often lacks confidence. Here is a chance to strike out for new achievement.

YOU BORN TODAY: Usually unexcitable, mostly practical, perhaps undemonstrative. Many talents. Properly develop, guide them. Seek recourse to religion for strength. Be meticulous choosing companions; keep conscience tuned to the upright, where you are happiest. You are versatile. Inertia can be a handicap. Don't get into any ruts. Be sensible about diet, don't overindulge anything. Get out for yourself occasionally, in business, profession, or just opinion. You can achieve greater things than you realize. Birthdate of: Charles, Duke of Bourbon, France; Margaret Truman, singer.

Little Benny's Notebook

I was walking home from school with Puds Simkins, and he said, Hay, if I tell you something, will you promise to keep it a secret?

Sure, I wont tell anybody. What? I said, and Puds said, Dopey Shorty Judge is going to be allowed to have a berthday party, only he's not telling anybody till he gets the invitations all printed on his imitation typewriter.

Oh boy, who told you? I said, and Puds said, You dont think I'm going to tell you that, do you? It was told to me strictly private, he said.

And after a while I rang Glasses Magee's frunt bell to see if he was home, which he was, and I said, Hay, Glasses, do you want to know something?

Sure, what? Glasses said, and I said, It's a secret.

Well heck, I'm not gong to tell anybody, Glasses said, and I said, Shorty Judge is going to have a berthday party, but nobody knows it yet. Hay, here he comes now, dont let on anything, I said.

Which just then Shorty came up, and we said, High, Dopey.

Saying it exter cordial, and Glasses said, What's new, Dopey?

Oh, nuthing, Shorty said, and I said, My berthday is coming pritty soon, in a few munths, and maybe I'm going to be allowed to have a party.

G, I wish I was, Shorty said, and Glasses said, Well heck, aint you?

No, if I even mention having a party again, I wont even get any berthday presents, Shorty said, and me and Glasses said, Aw heck.

That's what I say, Dopey Shorty said.

Proving beware of secrets.

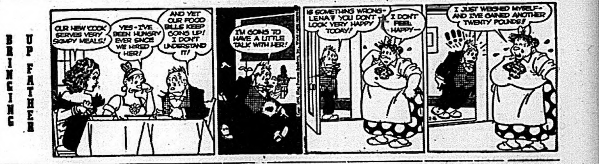
RUSTY RILEY
CAL! CAL!
HE CAN'T HEAR YOU NOW. COME AWAY. IF HE ASKS FOR YOU AGAIN, I'LL CALL YOU.
A MOMENT LATER, OUTSIDE THE SICK ROOM...
YOU HEARD HIM? HE SAID "GENTLE GEORGE!" IT WAS VERY CLEAR!
YES, I HEARD HIM.
SO YOU SEE? HE WAS ACCUSING GENTLE GEORGE! MILES, THAT HORSE HAS GOT TO PAY THE PENALTY!



BRINGING UP FATHER
OUR NEW COOK SERVES VERY SKIMPY MEALS!
YES - I'VE BEEN HUNGRY EVER SINCE WE HIRED HER!
AND YET OUR FOOD BILLS KEEP GOING UP! I DON'T UNDERSTAND IT!
I'M GOING TO HAVE A LITTLE TALK WITH HER!
IS SOMETHING WRONG - LENA? YOU DON'T LOOK VERY HAPPY TODAY!
I DON'T FEEL HAPPY—
I JUST WEIGHED MYSELF - AND I'VE GAINED ANOTHER TWENTY POUNDS!

Montreal Man Wins World Toboggan Title

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (CP)—Douglas W. Connor, 36-year-old Montreal businessman, won the world "skeleton" light toboggan championship on ice-coated Cresta run here today.

The Canadian had an aggregate time of 308.8 seconds for six runs, three from the downhill junction Tuesday and three from the top of the run today.

Gottfried Kaegi of Switzerland, on his final run today, shattered the American-made record for the hazardous 1,320-yard course which has stood since 1938.

Kaegi skimmed down the icy runway in 58.5 seconds, .2 seconds faster than the time of the late William Fiske, a pilot in the American RAF Eagle squadron who died in the Battle of Britain.

Sport in Brief

TO REPLACE CLAIR

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four Football Union said Tuesday night they have had contract talks with Bill Swiacki, former end coach with New York Giants of the National Football League, in an effort to replace head coach Frank Clair.

Argo team manager Harry Sonshine said he talked to Swiacki this week about the head coaching job. No contract has yet been signed.

Clair resigned last week to take over as line coach with the University of Cincinnati. He had been with Argonauts for five seasons.

Swiacki, 32-year-old native of Southbridge, Mass., joined the Giants last season. In 1953 he was an end coach with Detroit Lions after playing end for four years.

GET TOP SEEDING

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Trabert of Cincinnati, who paired with Vic Seixas to bring the Davis Cup back to the United States last December, was seeded No. 1 Tuesday in the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association indoor championships which open here Friday. Seixas did not enter the singles competition, which drew 32 players, but will team with Trabert in the doubles in which they'll be top seeded.

NAMED OLYMPIC COACH

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Johnny Mariucci, hockey coach at Minnesota and once a Chicago Black Hawk defenceman, Tuesday was named coach of the 1956 U.S. Olympic hockey team. In two seasons at Minnesota, Mariucci won two Western Intercollegiate League championships.

MONTREALER LEADS

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland (AP) Douglas W. Connor of Montreal held a 2½-second lead after the first day of the world skeleton championships on the Cresta sled run here Tuesday. He skimmed down the run three times in a total of 136.3 seconds. His second run of 44.9 seconds was the best single run of any of the 19 competitors from six countries taking part.

PICKED AS REFEREE

OTTAWA (CP)—FO. Louis Lecompte of Ottawa has been picked by the International Ice Hockey Federation as a referee at the forthcoming world hockey championships in Duesseldorf, Germany Feb. 25 to March 6.

Lecompte was a member of the RCAF Flyers team which won the world championships in 1948 and will be the first Canadian referee at the tournament since 1949.

Hockey Meeting Breaks Up In Disagreement

BANCROFT — After announcing that their two teams would play off the league finals alone, representatives of the Tamworth and Bancroft Pontiacs hockey teams walked out of a meeting of the Hastings-Addington league executive held at Madoc on Sunday afternoon.

The meeting, with league president Lloyd Blue in the chair, was called to consider player listings, and the Madoc-Tweed combines' manager renewed a protest that Bancroft were using two illegal players. The protest apparently referred to the Pontiacs' top scorer, Shala, and Lentz, who both reside out of town. Madoc then registered a request that Bancroft drop these two players, or alternatively, that Madoc be permitted to import players.

Tamworth and Bancroft managers, Harold Davidson and Bernie Shapiro, disagreed with this request, arguing that it would be unfair if any one team was permitted to sign new players when the semi-finals playoffs were due to begin the next day. The two Bancroft players were signed up at the beginning of the season when Madoc had the same opportunity to obtain additional men had they so wished.

The Madoc representatives then made a proposal that the first round of the semi-finals, scheduled to be played in Bancroft on Monday, be an exhibition game only. The meeting dragged on from 2.30 p.m. until after 8 p.m. without any decision being reached when the Tamworth and Bancroft managers decided to go home.

Four Teams In NOHA Playoffs

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds will meet Sault, Michigan, Indians in the semi-final playoffs of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior southern group.

Pembroke Lumber Kings will go against North Bay Trappers. Sudbury Wolves, fifth team in the loop, were eliminated.

Greyhound coach Johnny O'Flaherty was given his choice of semi-final opponent when the Canadian Sault, league champions, defeated the Indians 3-1 Tuesday night. This was the first year the pick-your-opponent system was in operation in the league.

Carabins Trim Redmen 4-2

VERDUN, Que. (CP)—University of Montreal Carabins fired home two third-period goals to defeat McGill Redmen 4-2 Tuesday night and take over second place in the senior Intercollegiate Hockey League.

Vic Marchessault and Andre Roy provided the deciding markers in the hard-fought contest, marked by 17 penalties, including three misconducts.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

England's first Olympic hockey championship was assured at the winter games 19 years ago today at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, when Canada edged out a 1-0 victory over the United States. The English team, bolstered by six Canadians, had beaten Canada and tied with the Americans. In the final standing Canada was second and the U.S. third.

Premier Bennett Called 'Stupid' By B.C. Member

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An opposition member of the British Columbia legislature called Premier Bennet "stupid" Tuesday, and got away with it.

Gordon Gibson (L—Lillooet) was criticising the Social Credit government's forest management policy. His target was the government's failure to make a decision on a forest management licence conditionally approved for a company in the Squamish area.

At one stage he read remarks of the premier which he said were in the verbatim report of an appeal against the licence.

"By God," he said, "I wouldn't want a man working for me that is that stupid."

PREMIER ABSENT

The premier was out of the House and no other government member objected to the remark.

In Manitoba, a Progressive Conservative plan for universal hospital insurance for the province was outlined in the legislature by opposition leader Duff Roblin. He estimated it would cost the province $1,990,000 a year.

Liberal leader A. H. McDonald, speaking in the Saskatchewan legislature, accused the CCF government of forgetting the farmers. He promised new policies in the interests of the farm population if his party forms the next administration.

He said, however, his party would support the government if it "goes far enough" in increased assistance for market roads, education and the aged as outlined in the speech from the throne.

In Quebec, Gerard Cournoyer (L—Richelieu) said the roads department program was guided by electoral motives.

During the 1948 election year the Union Nationale government spent $34,200,000 for roads while during 1951, it spent $16,104,000. Salaries of road workers increased in election years.

Roads Minister Antonio Talbot said government policy on the contrary was to build roads every year.

Sessions have not yet started in Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Alberta.

In the New Brunswick legislature, Liberal opposition leader Austin C. Taylor urged the federal government to consider a policy of financial aid for provincial power developments in Canada.

He suggested the matter be discussed at the next federal-provincial conference.

WILL TAKE 100 YEARS

BONN, Germany (Reuters)—The prime minister of Ceylon, Sir John Kotelawala, said Tuesday he is convinced Communist China never will attack Formosa "because it would take her 100 years to make the necessary preparations." "One bomb would sink all the junks Chou En-lai could produce," he told reporters here.

WILL ADD CONTRIBUTION

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government plans to add $500,000 to its contributions towards the United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency, the external affairs department said Tuesday.

Stirling

STIRLING — Dr. Ralph Vandervoort of St. Paul's United Church conducted the special service at Carmel, on Sunday evening. The choir rendered an anthem and Mr. Grant Richardson contributed a solo. Jack Bush read the lesson and George Carlisle voiced greetings.

The pastor gave the message and the ladies of Carmel W. A. served refreshments during the fellowship hour at the close in Jubilee Hall.

EXTEND RENT CONTROLS

WINDSOR (CP) — City council decided Tuesday night to extend city rent controls for another six months. The controls, imposed a year ago, were scheduled to expire March 1.

Britain To Develop And Produce Hydrogen Bomb

Proposed Defence Budget Shows Slight Reduction

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain tonight announced she will develop and produce the hydrogen bomb.

The announcement came in an official statement on defence along with the proposed defence budget which called for a slight reduction in expenditure for the 1955-56 year.

Declaring Britain had the ability to produce thermonuclear weapons, the announcement said:

"After fully considering all the implications of this step, the government have thought it their duty to proceed with their development and production."

Britain exploded her first atomic bomb off the west Australian coast Oct. 3, 1952, and has since tested other atomic weapons. But today's announcement was the first indication the nation is going into hydrogen weapons.

PROGRESS REVIEWED

The statement, reviewing defence progress of the last year, said the emergence of the thermonuclear bomb had overshadowed all else.

"New and revolutionary problems are posed, requiring courage and imagination for their solution," the report said.

"Nevertheless our problem is still fundamentally a dual one. We have to prepare against the risk of a world war and so prevent it."

The budget announcement said the government plans to spend £1,537,200,000 on defence in the coming financial year, starting in April. This is a drop of £102,700,000 compared with the estimated cost of the current year.

The statement said the over-all strength of Britain's three fighting services for the coming year will be about 788,000—a decrease of 35,300 men from the current year.

Blinding Storm Cripples Road, Rail Traffic

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP)—A blinding snowstorm swept Scotland today, cutting off highland villages and crippling road and rail traffic.

Freezing winter weather blanketed all the British Isles and near Arctic conditions prevailed as far south as the English midlands.

Almost every road in northern Scotland was blocked. The snow closed 17 main highways in central and southern Scotland and the north of England.

Northerly gusts reaching up to 75 miles an hour isolated the Orkney and Shetland islands. Some of the western Scottish isles also were cut off.

TRAIN MAROONED

For these islands and the Scottish highlands it was the second bitter weather lashing in a month. During January storms Royal Navy and RAF helicopters and planes flew in food and medical supplies to isolated communities.

The winddriven snow marooned a freight train on the Inverness-Perth line. A rescue train with a group of workers left here to try to clear the tracks.

English Electric Given Contract For 16 Turbines

TORONTO (CP) — The English Electric Company of Canada, Toronto, has been awarded a contract for 16 turbines and governors to be installed in the Canadian section of the St. Lawrence powerhouse, the Ontario hydro-electric power commission announced Wednesday.

Hydro officials said the approximately $7,500,000 contract calls for deliveries to commence in March, 1956.

Phillips Gives Fluoridation Cautious Backing

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Health Minister Phillips Wednesday gave cautious approval to fluoridation of water supplies in the province.

"We feel that enough careful observations have been made to indicate that prolonged use of water containing one part in 1,000,000 of fluoride is safe," the minister said.

But, he said, fluoridation does not replace the need for normal oral hygiene and nutrition standards. Neither was it a substitute for dental treatment once a cavity was established.

Seek One-Armed Man

TORONTO (CP)—Police said today they are seeking a one-armed man in connection with a two-car collision Wednesday night in which a motorist was left injured on the road.

Harold Bran, 32, of Oshawa, was thrown from his car when a second automobile careered through a red traffic light, police said. Bran suffered shoulder injuries.

A witness said he saw a one-armed man leave the second car and disappear after saying he was going to call the police.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: While sunny cold weather continued across northern Ontario Wednesday, wet snow and occasional rain again fell over southern regions. By this morning the snow has moved out of the province and skies are beginning to clear. A new disturbance moving across the prairies will bring increasing cloudiness tonight and Friday. There will be milder weather throughout the province and light snow in northern regions.

Broad Problems Of Conservation Take Back Seat

OTTAWA (CP)—The broad problems of resources conservation took a back seat to hurricane Hazel for a time Wednesday in an almost-empty Commons.

The terror that struck Ontario's Humber river valley the night of Oct. 15 was recalled for about 40 members in the House at the time.

Speakers from the Toronto area spoke of the 1,400 homes and business establishments flooded, the 85 lives lost and the millions in damage.

Those who lived and fought through the flood were described as "magnificent" by Margaret Aitken (PC—York Humber), whose constituency suffered from the flood which followed the hurricane.

The Commons was discussing a CCF proposal for a federal-provincial conference on resources conservation when John B. Hamilton (PC—York West) asked whether the government had learned a lesson from hurricane Hazel.

ASKED FLOOD CONTROL

He said no time should be lost in implementing plans of the Humber valley conservation authority, which proposes a $14,740,000 flood control project.

The plan was that the federal and Ontario governments each should bear 37½ per cent of the project costs, the municipalities concerned 25 per cent.

However, Mr. Hamilton said 25 per cent is too large a share for the municipalities to pay out of present revenue sources.

SWISS REFUSE TO EXTRADITE FOUR ANTI-REDS

Switzerland Will Try Raiders for Murder

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The Swiss government declared today the four anti-Communists who invaded the Romanian legation and killed a chauffeur will stand trial before the Swiss courts.

A government statement said that "under no circumstances" will the four be extradited, as demanded in notes to Bern from the Communist regime in Bucharest.

The statement asserted that the legation is situated on Swiss soil and despite its extraterritorial status the men will be tried here instead of Romania for the slaying. Maximum sentence in Switzerland for murder is life, with paroles usually granted after 20 years.

NO TREATY

Switzerland has never concluded an extradition agreement with Romania, the government statement added, so there can "under no circumstances be any obligation for extradition in this case."

Three of the men gave up their arms and left the legation Wednesday after holding it for nearly two days in the face of a show of force by Swiss police and troops. A fourth had been arrested early Tuesday when he tried to slip out. Police said they refused to give their names.

The surrender heightened the international dispute that has strained relations between Romania and long-neutral Switzerland. Some observers predict a diplomatic break might result.

Man Convicted On Reduced Count Of Manslaughter

SARNIA (CP) — George Albert Lehtonen, 23, will be sentenced Friday morning for manslaughter in the Oct. 12 stabbing death of his brother-in-law, Joseph Alonzo Lee.

Originally charged with murder, Lehtonen was convicted on the reduced charge Wednesday night by a jury that deliberated three hours and 15 minutes.

Lehtonen testified in his own defence during the two-day trial. He admitted he held a paring knife in his hand during a quarrel with Lee the night of the stabbing but denied any intent of using the weapon.

Mrs. Joseph Lee, sister of the accused and widow of the victim, told the court the quarrel started because Lehtonen didn't want her to return to her husband. She said it took place outside the house where she had been staying with her mother.

Lehtonen said he went outside only "to talk" with Lee and tell him "not to beat up my sister any more." He carried the knife, he said, because his hand was recently broken and he wanted to avoid trouble.

SAID LEE GRABBED ARM

He testified that Lee "lunged at me and grabbed my arm" as they argued. He said he was holding the knife by his side when Lee lunged.

"Then he seemed to stumble," Lehtonen said. "I stepped back and he stepped back and grabbed his left elbow with his right hand."

Lee then walked across the street and got into a taxi. He died in hospital later. Lehtonen said he did not realize his brother-in-law was fatally wounded, or even seriously hurt in the encounter.

Lehtonen's mother also testified that Lee had beaten her daughter several times and that she often had to call police for her daughter's protection.

Entire Argentine City Is Quarantined As Disease-Ridden Seek 'Miracle' Girl

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters) — Trucks filled with disease-ridden and disappointed pilgrims were bumping back home across central Argentina today after having been turned back by a police cordon round the home of a 14-year-old girl "miracle healer."

Only those with special passes were allowed past the tight police ring round San Cayetano, where the girl, Emilia de Calle Leyva, lives in a humble cottage.

The city's entire population of 200,000 was put in quarantine because 20,000 pilgrims, many suffering from leprosy, typhus and tuberculosis, flocked there to touch the hands of the girl, believing that she had had contact with the Virgin Mary in the form of a dove.

Wednesday night one truckload of pilgrims clashed with police in a fist fight. Emilia's father was reported arrested and Emilia herself was smuggled out of the house, which threatened to collapse under pressure from vast crowds.

Police said they had confiscated 130,000 pesos (about $10,000), thought to have been given by those who believe in her powers.

Kremlin Power Struggle May Help to Ease World Tension --Dulles

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dulles says a power struggle in Moscow eventually may produce Russian leaders with whom the United States can make "practical agreements" to ease world tensions.

Dulles also says the Formosa crisis can be settled if Red China will renounce the use of force to capture Nationalist-held islands.

Diplomats here noted that the secretary's speech Wednesday night to the Foreign Policy Association in New York a condensed version of which was carried by radio and television — was calm and peaceful in tone but firm against the spread of communism in any important new areas of Asia.

As for the Formosa problem, Dulles said the U.S. "has no commitment and no purpose" to defend such islands as the Quemoys and Matsus "as such." But made clear that the Americans might well fight over Quemoy and Matsu should any Communist attack on them be aimed at the conquest of Chiang Kai-shek's Formosa.

Discussing the Russian situation, Dulles said a distinction must always be made between the Soviet government and the Communist party.

"The time may come—I believe it will come—when Russians of stature will patriotically put first their national security and the welfare of their people.

"They will be unwilling to have that security and that welfare subordinated to the world-wide ambitions of international communism.

"If their point of view should prevail, then indeed there could be a basis for worthwhile negotiation and practical agreement between the United States and the new Russia."

British Aristocrat Escapes From French Foreign Legion

LONDON (Reuters) — A plot hatched in London by two young British aristocrats has added an odd new chapter to the stranger-than-fiction chronicles of the French Foreign Legion.

And a handsome blade of the Mayfair social set, sprung from a North African desert fortress by his friends, is reflecting amidst more familiar surrounding on his brief career as a Legionnaire.

Michael Richard West de Wend-Fenton, 28, regretting the impulse that made him sign up for a five-year hitch, succeeded in a daring getaway from one of the world's toughest services.

It was in search of adventure that Michael joined the Legion, at a time when Indochina was still the centre of the world's attention. London newspapers exulted in the idea of an Eton-educated Legionnaire.

Instead of the Far East, however, the young Briton found himself assigned to an African desert outpost. Instead of adventure he found boredom, routine, and fierce discipline.

He chose them well. One was Michael Alexander, 34-year-old relative of Earl Alexander and author of a best-selling book on war prisoners. The other, dark-haired Lady Marye Rous, had already at the age of 24 worked her way to Australia and back on a dare, ridden a motorcycle to Greece and then hit newspaper gossip columns by working as a waitress in a fashionable London restaurant.

Lady Marye and Alexander hastened to North Africa. There they found, in liberal chunks, the adventure that had eluded the young Legionnaire.

In the next month the two criss-crossed North Africa, alternating trips to desert fortresses with information-gathering nights in the drinking dens of the hot Mediterranean cities. Several times the trail seemed to grow warm, and each time Fenton was moved to a new station.

As the pace began to tell on Lady Marye, Alexander continued to quest alone. She returned to London shortly before he located Fenton and arranged a rendezvous.

Fenton, eluding pursuit, dashed for the car Alexander had waiting for him. Over back routes across the sandy wastes the two men headed for a small port where smugglers were waiting with a small boat.

Diplomatic observers feel there is not likely to be any serious Franco-British breach as a result of the exploit.

100 Aged Women Burned to Death In R.C. Home Fire

By JOHN RANDOLPH

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP)—About 100 aged women died in flaming agony today when a sudden blaze turned a Roman Catholic old ladies' home into a 30-minute inferno before dawn.

There were only 46 survivors, police said, and nearly all of these were burned or injured in jumps from the second floor of their two-storey wooden dormitory. Several are in critical condition.

The Canadian head of the home, operated by the Francisco Missionaries of Mary, escaped. She is Sister Superior Marie St. Longin du Sacre Coeur, the former Claire Cloutier of St. Narcisse de Champlain, Que. (The sister superior at the order's Quebec convent did not know how many other Canadian nuns were in the Tokyo home.)

The inmates were mainly pitiful old Japanese women without families. Their ages ranged from 60 to 96.

RETURNED TO BUILDING

Sister Umeko Sugiyama, 42, a nun, died when she dashed back into the burning building to carry out another of her charges.

Welfare ministry officials in Yokohama said the building had been declared a fire menace in 1953.

Yokohama police said the blaze apparently started with defective wiring at 4:30 a.m.

"We were awakened—only to see flames and smoke all around.

"Okuni-san looked about her and said, 'I am old enough to die.'

"Then she held up her bed quilt to keep the flames back and let the others escape."

Pineau Completes Cabinet Lineup; Wants Approval

By HARVEY HUDSON

PARIS (AP)—Christian Pineau, seeking approval as France's first Socialist premier in seven years, today finished piecing together a cabinet he hopes will satisfy the balky National Assembly.

Pineau plans to go before the deputies for approval Friday, but the most favorable estimates give him less than 320 supporting votes in the 627-member chamber. With likely abstentions, that could assure his confirmation but would promise a shaky government with a brief life expectancy.

Pineau was called in by President Rene Coty Monday to try to form France's 21st post-liberation cabinet—a task in which both Antoine Pinay, Conservative Independent, and Pierre Pflimlin of the Catholic Mouvezment Republicain Populaire had failed.

If Pineau wins assembly approval he will be the first Socialist premier since Paul Ramadier's government resigned in November, 1947. Since the 1951 elections the Socialists have even refused to serve in any cabinet because of their adamant stand for a program completely in line with party principles.

Princess Sails For Jamaica

The royal yacht Britannia steamed out of St. Kitts Wednesday night and is due in Jamaica Saturday. Jamaica is the only stop on Princess Margaret's itinerary which the Queen visited on her royal tour last year.

ELEVEN KILLED AS FIRE SWEEPS MONTREAL HOUSE

Firemen Rescue Score Frenzied Men, Women

By MEL MORRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—Eleven persons were killed Wednesday night and at least a dozen injured when fire whipped through the top floors of an old brick apartment building in the heart of Montreal.

Firemen, scrambling up ladders in a heavy, wet snow, rescued a score of screaming, frenzied men and women from wooden balconies and window ledges.

The 11 victims died trying to fight their way through flame-and-smoke-filled halls and stairways of the four-storey Salaberry Apartments at the corner of Sherbrooke street east and St. Denis streets.

At least four panic-stricken apartmnt dwellers gambled on leaps from the fourth floor. Two women were in serious condition in hospital.

PROBE RUINS

Firemen still probing the upper-floor ruins early today said there was "only a very slim possibility" that any bodies were left inside.

The fire was the worst in Montreal since 1951, when 37 pensioners died in a fire which destroyed the Ste. Cunegonde home for the aged.

Two of the victims—an elderly man and his wife—were found just a few feet from their bed. Another man had struggled to within inches of a first-floor window.

Residents said the building had two fire escapes, both leading to an enclosed inner courtyard. From there, the fleeing residents had to pass through ground-floor apartments to safety.

Higher Tariffs On Vegetables, Fruits, Sought

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Horticultural Council will ask the federal government to boost tariffs on fruit and vegetables, particularly potatoes.

A resolution passed at the council's annual meeting Wednesday said a "complete overhaul" of the tariff was necessary to combat "unfair and unreasonable" competition from United States producers.

Growers said American producers harvest their fruit and vegetable crops earlier than Canadian producers, and flood Canadian markets with "left over" produce when Canadian producers are beginning their harvest.

BENDIX HAS OPERATION

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor William Bendix was reported in good condition today at good Samaritan Hospital after a stomach ulcer operation. His doctor said Bendix, 49, had been bothered by the ailment for eight years.

Say Britain May Sue Canadian Banks For Fortune of 'Dark Lady of Cammo'

She is dead. And in death she attracted the limelight she shunned in life.

Five banks scattered through Canada Wednesday drew attention to her by publicly announcing plans for transferring the inactive cash, $270,000, to the Bank of Canada for safe-keeping until she wanted it.

Inquiries disclosed Mrs. Margaret L. Maitland-Tennent, 95, was buried two weeks ago in secret beneath the lawn of her Cammo House mansion, four miles from here, where she had lived as a recluse for 35 years.

Mrs. Maitland-Tennent became known as the "dark lady of Cammo" after she shut herself off from the world following the First World War. No outsiders knew exactly why.

Five years ago, the treasury brought an action under exchange control regulations to recover her dollar fortune in North America but the banks refused to surrender the money.

Mrs. Maitland-Tennent inherited a fortune from her father who was a sheep farmer in New Zealand.

Canadian finance department officials, who have been intrigued for years with the lone-handed battle of the "dark lady" against British foreign exchange control, said the Canadian banks will pay over the money to her legal heir or heirs.

The United Kingdom government has never brought suit in this country to get Mrs. Maitland-Tennent's dollars into the U. K. However, officials here have had the idea that it might sue Canadian banks directly after her death.

This could be avoided by the heir or heirs taking the dollars back to the U. K. and exchanging them for pounds. If this were not done, a British government suit might be entered in Canada, in the belief of officials here.

Committee Blames 'Bad Practices' For Road Frauds

Thinks That Poor Methods Confined to Two Divisions

TORONTO (CP) — Falsification of records in some highway construction contracts resulted from bad practices and disregard of sound rules or honest calculations, the Ontario legislature was told today.

A 200-page report of the committee investigating the highways department and irregularities in contracts was tabled in the legislature by A. Kelso Roberts, committee chairman and Progressive Conservative member for Toronto St. Patrick.

"It is abundantly clear that there were in existence very bad practices which resulted in falsification of records," the report said.

No indication was given of how much money the province may have lost as a result of the "bad practices."

REVIEWED BACKGROUND

The report reviewed the history of the investigation, which started more than a year ago, including criminal proceedings against persons and contracting companies accused of fraud in connection with highways irregularities.

It said as far as evidence before the committee showed, the practices which resulted in falsification of records were confined to the Fort William and Huntsville divisions.

The practices were carried out with the knowledge or under the instructions of the two divisional engineers who were convicted at earlier criminal proceedings.

However, the report said it had sworn statements from former highways minister Doucett and former deputy minister Millar that they had no knowledge of irregularities until they were disclosed by the investigation undertaken by the provincial auditor and the department comptroller of finances.

SAY DID NOT PROFIT

Both testified they had not profited in any way.

The report said:

"The chief engineer of the department for most of the period under review, C. H. Nelson, died in August, 1954. The evidence at some of the trials and the statements in connection with them, indicate that Mr. Nelson had knowledge of the practices which led to the problems with which this committee has had to deal.

Four Young Men Die in Accident Near Quebec City

GRANDINES, Que. (CP) — Four young men were killed early today in a collision between a car and truck near Grondines, Que., 60 miles west of Quebec, police reported.

A fifth youth was taken to hospital. All were believed to have been occupants of the car.

Further details were not immediately available.

Minority Report Requests Full Scale Probe

TORONTO (CP)—Three opposition members of the Ontario legislature committee investigating the highways department and contract irregularities said today the committee has failed to determine how much frauds amounted to, or who was responsible.

A minority report was presented to the legislature by Ontario Liberal-Labor member for Kenora. Grummett, CCF member for Cochrane South, and Albert Wren, Liberal-Labor mezmber for Kenora.

The report called for appointment of a royal commission "with full powers to find the guilty and to clear the innocent," reorganization of the treasury department and modernization of the government auditor procedures.

The 22-page report also recommended that the department of highways should be completely reorganized by dividing the province into five geographic areas., Consulting engineering firms should be retained to supervise the engineering and payments to contractors in each area. Head office should be relieved of details and direct its attention to co-ordination, overall supervision and long-range planning.

CLAIM FAILURE

The report said a royal commission should be appointed because the committee failed to function as a truly impartial fact-finding body.

"This medium, and only this medium, will establish where the basic faults lie and restore necessary confidence in the minds of the opposition members and the public as to the propriety of turning over hundreds of millions of dollars for highway purposes.

"The evidence before us showed two alarming facts, that there had been overruns on contracts from 1949 to 1952 of $28,332,401, and that a substantial part of these overruns were the result of plans to defraud the government.

"The most important part of our work should have been to unmask everyone who was a party to these frauds."

The opposition members, who boycotted the committee since last month over a dispute on the calling of witnesses, said that at the outset of the investigation they were asked not to ask questions on that issue in order that justice might be done to those on trial.

BUCK SIGHTED AT BELL'S CREEK EAST OF CITY

A lordly buck was sighted this morning on the old No. 2 highway near Bell's Creek, two miles east of the city.

W. J. Reid, a resident for 35 years, sighted the deer this morning and watched it for about five minutes before it moved northward into a woods on his farm.

"It is the first time I have seen a deer so far south," he said this morning.

MAIL CARRIERS ENJOY HOCKEY GAME AT ARENA

If you happen to notice your mail carrier delivering the mail today with a painful sort of a limp, don't waste too much sympathy on him, save a little for the clerks working inside the post office.

This condition was the result of the annual get-together of the inside and outside staffs at the local arena in the wee small hours of Wednesday night which ended in a very tight score of 7 to 6 in favor of the carriers.

After the game, the famous Skippers Gold Trophy was presented and suitable prizes were awarded both teams with the inside staff swearing vengeance in the very near future.

Producers' Right to Market Own Hogs Being Challenged Says Association President

A call for unity on the part of farm people to fight for what he said was their right to market their own product was made Wednesday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Hastings County Hog Producers' Association. The meeting was held at the Stirling Community Hall.

Charles McInnis, president of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association, said that producers' right to market their own hogs was being challenged. A court case to decide the issue was scheduled to be heard at Stratford, possibly in May.

"Producers have the right to market their own product and to direct it to the market where it will return the most money," he said, "but when steps are taken to do so there are people ready to challenge that right.'

The challenge was coming from Theodore Parker, Perth county farmer long opposed to farm organization, but where the money to fight the producers' organization was coming from was anybody's guess.

The speaker reviewed the history of his organization and how following the loss of British export contracts, efforts had been made to negotiate prices with the processors for fixed periods. When this failed the Association had taken advantage of the farm products marketing act to set up their own marketing agency called the United Livestock Sales. This company was under contract with the producers to market all hogs sold for processing.

"We feel it is a good organization and one which has done much to assist the producers," he said.

GET TOP PRICE

He said that the record of the agency for its two years of operation should be examined to show how it had benefited the producer.

Four years before the agency started the top price for B-1 Ontario hogs averaged $1.42 over the Winnipeg market and during its first year of operation the average price was $2.86 over the Winnipeg market. In 1954 the average was $2.79 over the Winnipeg market.

"Therefore in relationship to the Winnipeg market Ontario producers gained about $2 per hog," Mr. McInnis said. "With two million hogs produced this means over $4 million to Ontario producers."

One of the difficulties, however, was that it was not always possible for the agency to get the highest price because it could not get hogs delivered to the packer willing to pay the highest price.

When efforts were made on the part of the agency to have hogs directed to specified packing plants a movement developed opposing the agency and now the right of the farmer to market his goods through his appointed agency and to have his product directed to the packer willing to pay the most money has been challenged.

Mr. McInnis stressed the importance of quality production in hogs, noting that sale for top quality pork products had been found in the United States. He noted that quality had slipped in Ontario since the loss of the English market, possibly due to a feeling on the part of the producers that quality was no longer needed.

In a brief discussion period following Mr. McInnis' talk Association president Irwin McCoy said in his opinion the hog marketing agency should know the number of hogs to be marketed each week. Until this information was available the said farmers would not receive the proper price.

Mr. McInnis suggested that if there were no deliveries direct to the plant, packers would be more active in their bidding for hogs.

W. E. Tummon of Foxboro, director of the Ontario association, reviewed production figures showing that hog production in the West was up 35 per cent.

His reference to hog production was in answer to a complaint from one of the members that hog prices had dropped in recent weeks. Mr. Tummon said that in the first five weeks of this year Canadian hog production had been 593,000 hogs with 322,600 of these hogs produced in the West. Canadian production for the first five weeks was 110,000 over the same period last year.

Many of the Western Canada hogs were being shipped into Ontario, the higher price received in Ontario offsetting freight. Mr. Tummon noted Ontario prices were now running about $3 above the Winnipeg market. If there was a greater difference more Western hogs would be dumped into Ontario.

Despite the fact that the premium on the Canadian dollar was working against the export of hogs, more than 70 million pounds of pork products had been sold in the U.S.A. last year. "However, only top quality pork products could be sold in the States," Mr. Tummon said.

PRESIDENT RE-ELECTED

Irwin McCoy of Marmora township was re-elected president of the county association with Bruce Robinson of Madoc receiving re-election as vice-president and Gordon Bailey of Rawdon as secretary-treasurer.

Directors named were as follows: Sidney — David Hollinger; Thurlow — Harold Tummon, Holloway; Tyendinaga — Mac Lazier; Rawdon — Don Heath; Huntingdon — Barton Haggerty; Hungerford — W. E. Bateman; Marmora — Wilbert Jones; Madoc — Ross Moorecroft.

Fred Campbell and Leslie Finkle of Foxboro were named auditors.

ALBERT BIRD
(Bonarlaw)

BONARLAW — Friends were sorry to hear of the death of Albert Bird, who passed away at the home of his son, Morgan Bird, at Campbellford, Thursday afternoon, following a heart attack. The late Mr. Bird resided for several years at Springbrook; he also farmed at Harold for some years.

He was predeceased by his wife, the former Emma Morgan and one son, Harry Bird, and leaves to mourn his loss one son, Morgan Bird, Campbellford; two daughters, Mrs. Edward (Annie) Bateman, Springbrook; Mrs. Geo. (Hazel) Mason, Stirling, and one sister, Mrs. Martha Morgan, of Springbrook.

The service was conducted at Bennett's Funeral Parlor on Saturday by Rev. Teno of the Pentecostal Church, Campbellford.

The bearers were Burton Bateman, Percy Bateman, Kenneth Thompson, Roy McGee, W. Thain and Don Buchanan.

Interment was in Mount Nebo cemetery.

MRS. EMMA CATHERINE LEE

The funeral of Mrs. Emma Catherine Lee was held from the Funeral Residence of George F. O'Brien to St. Michael's Church for Solemn Requiem Mass this Thursday morning. The mass was celebrated by Very Rev. Dean L. B. Garvin with Rev. J. J. Buckley present in the sanctuary.

There was a large attendance of intimate friends in the church and the wealth of floral and spiritual offerings testified in a small measure to the esteem in which the deceased was held in the community. Entombment was made in St. James' cemetery vault.

The honorary bearers were: Walter Allore, A. B. Collins, Frank Domenico, L. E. McLean, Edwin W. Cooley and Terry Dolan, while the bearers were: Gerald Hurley, Edward Hughes, Joseph Lee, Edward Wooding, Ed. Logan and Carl Casey.

MRS. JOHN GAY

The funeral of Mrs. John Gay was held on Tuesday afternoon and was largely attended by a host of sympathizing friends. Mr. W. E. Belch of Belleville conducted the service and brought a very helpful and comforting message. Mrs. W. D. Grant contributed two solos, "Sweet Hour of Prayer" and "Beyond the Sunset."

Interment took place in the White Lake Cemetery.

One Councillor Unseated In New Election

Ernestown township voters in Lennox and Addington went to the polls this week, returned three councillors and ended one of the most controversial election issues in the township's history.

The election resulted from court ruling by county judge W. S. Lane, following complaints of irregularities in the regular election held earlier. Returned in that election were the three 1954 incumbents, Kennedy Reid and McPherson. In the return bout Babcock, a former assessor, defeated McPherson.

The election was conducted by sheriff H. W. Webster, following the resignation of township clerk W. M. Lewis, who relinquished his position after the court hearing.

The court hearing was an aftermath of a hotly-debated issue in this town which claimed that the original contenders for office had not qualified according to the law.

Festival, Theatrical Dignitaries Given Civic Welcome at Shrine Club

The City of Belleville held a civic reception for officers of the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival and visiting theatrical dignitaries Wednesday noon in the Shrine Club.

His Worship Mayor Jack Both extended greetings to local festival officials and officially welcomed to the city representatives of the Eastern Ontario Drama League and the Dominion Drama Festival.

"I wish you all a cordial well "I wish you all a cordial welcome and hope that your visit is pleasant and your festival successful," said the Mayor.

STIMULATING RECOGNITION

F. Court Miller, chairman of the festival committee termed the civic reception "stimulating and encouraging recognition of the work of theatre guild in Belleville. Players competing in this festival would be less than human if they did not like the recognition which a civic gesture such as this affords," he said.

"We deeply appreciate this gracious gesture."

Mr. Miller introduced executive members of the festival committee and thanked them for their work in making the festival a reality.

Michael Meiklejohn, chairman of the Eastern Ontario Drama League, said that "one of the greatest successes of the League is the rise of the Belleville Theatre Guild."

"I was overjoyed at the tremendous piece of work they did in presenting "Joan of Lorraine", an advanced and difficult play."

Mr. Meiklejohn recalled briefly Belleville's history in drama competition mentioning the Albert College Players "who competed regularly for many years," and the "Belleville Collegiate Drama Club with which Miss Nellie Merry did so much fine work for years."

"Holding the regional festival in Belleville will advance the cause of theatre here, in Ontario and in the country as a whole," he said.

"The presentation of three one-act plays by Canadian playwrights at the Saturday matinee is a record for Ontario and possibly Canada in promoting the work of native dramatists."

E. Guss Porter New President Law Association

E. Guss Porter, Belleville barrister, was elected president of the Prince Edward and Hastings Law Association at the association's annual meeting held recently in the County court house here.

He succeeds J. D. O'Flynn as president of the association and director of legal aid for Hastings County. Members paid tribute to Mr. O'Flynn's efforts on behalf of the association during his term as president.

Other officers elected were: — John H. Lennox, vice president; R. E. Barrett, secretary-treasurer. Trustees appointed were: Col. B. C. Donnan, Q.C., F. L. Ward, Q.C., R. B. McCullough and His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson.

Elected to the library committee were: His Honor Judge J. C. Anderson, G. R. Cameron, D. Bateman and L. Maraskas. R. Smithrim and G. R. Butler were named auditors.

R. A. Pringle reminded listeners that Hastings County was the first county in Ontario to institute a program of legal aid. William Argue gave a detailed address on, "The Legacy of the Magna Carta."

Napanee Council Lifts Assessment By 110 Per Cent

NAPANEE (Special) — Town council here this week halved the town's tax rate to 48 mills on a re-assessment that has boosted its assessment 110 percent and as a result will raise almost $13,000 more than last year.

Council now is budgetting for $220,188, an increase of more than $12,500 over last year's figure of $207,336.

In 1954, when the tax rate stood at 97 mills, the council had a re-assessment of the town carried out, boosting the estimate to its present level. This week it took action on the new assessment by dropping the rate to 48 mills.

Bulkiest expenditure on the budget for 1955 is for education, which sees an allowance of $66,698 to the Napanee Public School Board, up from $54,099 in 1954.

Shriners, Knights Hold Enjoyable Get-Together

Upwards of 150 members of the Belleville Shrine Club and Council 1008, Knights of Columbus, mingled in a highly enjoyable get-together at the well-appointed Shrine Club last night. The Knights were the special guests of the Shriners and will play hosts at a "return engagement" in the near future.

President Jack Bush, of the Shrine Club, informally welcomed the Knights saying: "On behalf of the Nobles and associate members of this club I extend to you a hearty welcome. It gives me a great deal of pleasure to see so many here and I trust you will enjoy the entertainment and facilities of the club to the fullest."

First Grand Knight Paul Mercier, speaking for Grand Knight George O'Brien, who was unable to be present, extended the appreciation of the special guests. He thanked the Shrine and its president for the cordial reception and hospitality "which is non-pareil. We hope in the near future to have you as honored guests of the Knights of Columbus."

Entertainment highlight of the affair was Cy Leonard, a talented ventriloquist and his "stooge" Happy. Mr. Leonard is ranked as one of the best of his profession in Toronto and his performance last night gave weight to the statement. "Happy" was hilarious and had a whale of a time poking fun at various members of his audience. The act, which kept the Knights-Nobles practically in stitches throughout, lasted about 45 minutes and concluded with a tuneful duet sung by Cy and Happy with the humorous "dummy" loathe to leave. He left the stage in his trunk and was mumbling to himself in muffled tones as he was taken from the room.

A delicious buffet luncheon was served at 11.30 by Shrine hostess Mrs. George Woodhouse and her assistants. The rest of the evening was spent in social amenities, games, etc.

Amateur Theatre In Canada Needs Directors

"The lack of qualified directors is the most conspicuous deficiency in amateur theatre in Canada," said Richard MacDonald, executive director of the Dominion Drama Festival, Wednesday in an interview with the Ontario Intelligencer.

"There are any number of enthusiastic and sincere people willing to make a stab at directing," he said. "But there are very few well-trained, qualified, directors. Directors are the key personnel in raising the standard of theatrical production."

Mr. MacDonald was in Belleville to attend the civic reception tendered members of the local festival committeee and regional and national drama dignitaries.

"I think, on the whole, the standard of acting has risen across Canada in the past few years," he continued. "The standard in any one region fluctuates from year to year but overall the general standard has been rising."

Mr. MacDonald stated that the choice of plays in the Eastern Ontario festival being held here "is very good."

"The English plays are excellent," he said. "The French play is vastly amusing."

He dismissed the problem of English-speaking playgoers trying to understand the French play.

"The acting is so incisive, the gestures so expressive, that understanding the play is really very easy. I understand there will be an English synopsis of the play in the program. Understanding it should be really very simple even if one doesn't know French," he said.

Le Theatre du Pont Neuf, the company presenting "Marlbrough S'En Va T'En Guere", was described by Mr. MacDonald as "very capable" and "possessing a very competent director whose brother directed the award-winning play in the Montreal festival which Andre Van Gyseghem, adjudicator, judged last week.

Importing Lumbermen From Quebec Assailed

BEARDMORE (CP) — James Graydon of the Beardmore board of trade said Wednesday pulp and paper companies were responsible for the seasonal unemployment in the district because they hired lumbermen from outside the province.

He said that because of improperly scheduled cutting seasons most of the benefit derived from timber cut on crown lands was going to migratory workers from Quebec.

There is adequate work to keep residents of Ontario steadily employed, he said, but the companies import men by the hundreds with the result that people, in this town 75 miles northeast of Port Arthur, are unemployed for many months of the year.

Expect Congress Will Vote Itself Large Pay Boost

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders predicted today that the United States Senate will follow the lead of the House of Representatives in voting a substantial pay boost for members of Congress and federal judges.

The House voted 283 to 118 Wednesday to give the 96 senators and 435 representatives a $10,000 annual boost to $25,000. Comparable raises are included for the vice-president, the House speaker, all federal judges and U.S. attorneys.

American cabinet members now get $2,500, while judge's salaries vary from about $15,000 to around that figure. The president's salary is $100,000 a year, plus expense allowances totalling $90,000 annually.

EXPECTS APPROVAL

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem. Tenn.), who headed a sub-committee which conducted hearings on the question, told a reporter today he believes the Senate will pass its bill—which calls for a $7,500 increase—"by a substantial margin." He said "at the moment" his plan is to stick to the Senate bill, "then work out our differences in conference."

However, one senator who has backed a pay boost said in an interview that his mail is running heavily against it and that while visiting in his home state last week he found people "bitter" about it. This senator, asking not to be named, indicated he might vote "no."

Fireman Killed, 5 Others Missing,

BALTIMORE (AP) — One fireman was killed and five others, including the chief, were believed trapped and feared dead when the roof of a clothing store collapsed during a nine-alarm fire Wednesday night.

At least 20 firemen were injured in the spectacular blaze which burned more than three hours before being brought under control.

Rescue efforts to reach the five missing men were postponed early today until the weak walls could be shored against possible collapse. Still missing were chief Francis O'Brien and four firemen, believed buried beneath a mass of timbers, masonry and other debris.

Masks Feature Presentation

The papier mache masks, and the characterizations of the animals, were acclaimed "excellent" by festival adjudicator, Andre Van Gyseghem.

Peterborough Little Theatre's production of Andre's Obey's "Noah" drew a flood of critical acclaim Wednesday night from the adjudicator at the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival, which is being held this week in Belleville collegiate. About 500 attended last night's performance.

Andre Văn Gyseghem found it difficult to fault "a play which I like very much and which was beautifully presented."

He lauded most of the cast; was "charmed by the excellent animal masks"; delighted with the scenery and costumes and pleased at the "grasp of the story and its execution."

He liked the pace, simplicity, honesty and sincerity of the characterizations; the movement and grouping of actors; and much of the mime, music and off-stage sounds including the "charming animal noises."

Obey's "Noah" is the story of a simple man, whose complete faith and trust in God is not shared by either the human or animal cargo which he saves with God's guidance. Noah's willingness to place himself in the hand of God contrasts sharply with the attempts by his children to do something "practical" to bring the ark to a safe landing.

The play's timelessness is that its characters portray the continuing human dilemma of faith and lack of faith.

"The play is a difficult one with strong contrasts between the players and the varying moods of the scenes," said Mr. Van Gyseghem. "It is an excellent play and I think it was a good choice of play for this company."

"It is a play that is out of the ordinary," he continued. "But I think it is necessary in the theatre to do something out of the ordinary every once in a while."

"I liked the treatment of the play. It was simple, colorful and effective. The animal masks were admirable. I was particularly devoted to the cow," he said.

COSTUMES GOOD

"The boys' and girls' costumes were good. They established the characters and contributed to the advance of the story."

James Turnbull, as "Noah" turned in "quite an achievement" said Mr. Van Gyseghem. "He had a tremendous responsibility and he shouldered it well. He played it with simplicity, honesty and authority. He had good diction and projection of tone with only an occasional tendency to sing his lines."

"He was not afraid to hold the stage with a pause. He showed excellent moments of tenderness. He played with great sincerity. It was a very considerable performance.

John Winkworth and Bill Carruthers, as two of Noah's sons, were youthful and gay. I liked them."

Don Milburn, as "Ham", Noah's third son, "needed definite improvement. His movements of hands and arms were weak. He doesn't make clean gestures, depending for emphasis on the forcefulness of the lines."

Mildred Bailey, as Noah's wife, had "good lines in her face, and a quality of homeliness and reality that convinced one she was the real mother of a family. I like the way she developed simple puzzlement as the mother of a family swept up by almost unbelievable events."

Jean Leach, as "Ada", a girl who marries one of Noah's sons, was "astonishingly good. She made good use of her body and had a good, flexible voice."

Sylvia Cherney, as "Naomi," wife of another of Noah's sons, "projected her comedy very well, but might have been a little more sensuous."

Those playing the animal parts—bear, lion, monkey, elephant, cow, wolf, lamb and tiger—were lauded for excellent movement and characterization.

"The production showed great taste and a real understanding of the play. The pace was good, entrances and exits were clean, and the mime was extraordinarily real."

"There was only one really bad piece of grouping," he said, "but on the whole the director used his crowds well."

"Ham's revolt was weak. It was the only scene that was untidy."

"This play combined all elements of theatre—acting, mime, dance, a little music, scenery and costumes—in a most effective fashion," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

"The producer (John Londerville) understood well the moving spirit of this play."

Mr. Van Gyseghem's precise, comprehensive adjudication, delivered in flawless English in a minimum amount of time, was one of the highlights of the entire evening.

Tonight the public is invited to attend a general discussion on theatrical arts being held in Pine St. school auditorium at 8.00 p.m. Regional and Dominion drama league officials and Mr. Van Gyseghem will attend the meeting.

The festival continues Friday evening with the performance of "The Moon in the Yellow River" by Ottawa Little Theatre Inc.

The winning play at this festival will be eligible to compete in the Dominion Drama Festival to be held in Regina in May.

MINORITY REPORT

QUESTIONS STOPPED

"When the trials were over, we were stopped from asking about defrauding the government because justice had been done and some evidence had been given in preliminary hearings and on the issuance of sentence."

The report said there have been guilty pleas by three companies but the only persons convicted were two professional engineers. The only other persons who admitted wrong-doing were instrument men at a very low level in the highways department.

"We do not believe that frauds involving millions of dollars are the work of two engineers and a few instrument men. We have not been satisfied that the overpayments are innocent and we are convinced that the persons who profited from these frauds are still unpunished and in many case undetected.

"Perhaps they are clever enough and powerful enough to remain in the shadows, but we say it was the duty of this committee fearlessly to seek them out and to exhaust every means in its power to seek the truth.

"The majority say no and we dissent."

The report said it was evident that the system of operation in the highways department was such that corruption and wrong-doing could flourish without effective check.

WAS THERE PRESSURE?

The opposition members said they wished to have witnesses called before the committee to discover whether pressure was brought to bear on them to plead guilty or to have their corporations plead guilty to charges of fraud and on what terms and conditions.

They said it was obvious the government did not wish evidence submitted at the trials which would emphasize its own blame or negligence.

It was in the interest of both the government and the accused to minimize wrong doing so that it might appear the government received value for money it spent.

"Opposition members find it difficult to see how a company can commit a criminal act except by the actions and volitions of persons representing the corporations.

"They asked, therefore, that officers of convicted companies be subpoenaed before the committee to see why the companies pleaded guilty to charges although the government withdrew similar charges against the individual."

WANTED EVIDENCE

The report said the witnesses could have produced material which was denied the courts, evidence which would have shown how extensive irregularities were and their relation to government policy.

"We are satisfied that witnesses, once the trials were over, would have placed the onus on the government."

The report, signed by the three opposition members, made 16 recommendations.

It said consulting engineers should be retained immediately to draft an overall plan of highway developments; roads and building programs should not be promised to the electorate as political platforms until adequate engineering work has been completed and the costs and merits determined.

Statutes defining duties of department heads, the provincial auditor and the treasury department should be strengthened and modernized. All revenue aspects of the highways department should be transferred to the treasury department and normal safeguards against fraud should be incorporated in the audit procedures of each government department.

Police Blotter

Crime appeared to have been snowed under last night.

City police today reported a quiet night with few incidents of peace-disturbance being reported. However, the sudden, heavy snowfall did result in some automobile accidents.

Six accidents were entered in the police blotter at headquarters during the night—all of them of a minor nature. No one was injured while damage in all cases did not exceed $100.

Provincial police also reported several minor accidents on the district highways during the snowfall. However, no excessive damage was caused in any of the incidents.

Canadian News Woman Writer Dies in U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP)—Mrs. Robert Farquharson, wife of the press counsellor at the Canadian embassy here and a well-known Canadian newspaper woman and writer for many years, died early today in Georgetown Hospital.

Mrs. Farquharson, whose maiden and writing name was Rica McLean, was born in Toronto and educated at Model school and Havergal College.

She began her newspaper career with the old Toronto News and worked on the former Regina Leader, now the Leader-Post. Later, she conducted a movie column for the Toronto Star weekly.

She was married to Farquharson in 1927 and later became associate editor of the Canadian Home Journal.

In 1938, she won the medal of the lieutenant-governor of Ontario for the outstanding play of the year and in 1942 won the award of the Canadian Women's Press Club for the best story of the year.

FORMER EDITOR

Her husband, who survives with one son, formerly was managing editor of the Toronto Globe and Mail and was director of information for NATO before joining the embassy here about six months ago.

The funeral will be held at Toronto Saturday.

QUEBEC'S PADLOCK LAW

The Supreme Court of Canada will shortly be asked rule on the constitutionality of Quebec's "Padlock w."

The Ontario Intelligencer has received a pamphlet, e Padlock Law Threatens You!" written by Paul Nor- ndin, executive secretary of the Civil Liberties Union.

We know nothing about Mr. Normandin nor about Civil Liberties Union. In preparation for writing this torial, we have deliberately refrained from reading Mr. rmandin's pamphlet, lest the views expressed in it may prejudiced and lest these views, in turn, might preju- e the writer.

We have read the "Padlock Law," actually designated n Act to Protect the Province Against Communistic opaganda." Reading the law is all that is necessary form an opinion on it.

The law provides that "it shall be illegal for any per- n, who possesses or occupies a house within the Pro- ce, to use it or allow any person to make use of it to opagate Communism or Bolshevism by any means what- ever."

That is a prohibition regarding the wisdom of which re will be differences of opinion. But the Quebec Leg- ature, which passed the law, is entitled to its opinion. far, so good.

The law provides that "the Attorney General, upon isfactory proof that an infringement of section 3 (quot- above) has been committed, may order the closing of e house against its use for any purpose whatsoever for period of not more than one year."

There is no provision for any trial; no definition of at the Attorney-General shall consider satisfactory oof.

The law does make provision for an appeal to a judge the Superior Court, but this hearing comes after, not fore, the house is padlocked.

The law states that "it shall be unlawful to print, to blish in any manner whatsoever or to distribute in the ovince any newspaper, periodical, pamphlet, circular, cument, or writing whatsoever propogating or tending propogate Communism or Bolshevism."

Punishment for infringements of this section, fortun- ely, requires a conviction under Part I of the Quebec mmary Convictions Act. There does, however, seem to the possibility of a very wide application of this clause. a newspaper which publishes a speech by a leader of the viet Union, praising Russia, guilty of publishing a news- per "propogating or tending to propogate Commun- n or Bolshevism?"

It may be argued that properly administered this law ld be a good law, much more effective than if the ac- sed had recourse to the courts before the police acted.

That statement would be sure to bring a torrent of re- es from opponents of the law who would maintain that is being administered in a harsh and unjust manner.

The point is that no law is a good law, no matter how ective it may be, if it deprives any citizen of his right be tried in public, by a legally constituted court, in- ad of in private, by an official of the government.

One of the primary duties of courts is to protect the blic from the encroachments of governments. Under e "Padlock Law" the courts, in many cases, never get an portunity to perform this function until the govern- ent starts punishing the individual for a crime of which e government has decided he is guilty.

This is a bad law—a very, very bad law.

BEDTIME STORY

The Bowmanville Statesman has us all hot and thered.

According to the Statesman the latest thing in men's jamas is the ladies.

It bases this conclusion on a fashion designer who, reports, claims that 86 per cent of the pyjamas sold day are bought by women.

Now it is just possible that the Statesman has misin- preted the fashion designer's statement. If the de- gner was merely referring to the identities of the pur- asers, there is nothing new here. A shrewd guess is at 86 per cent of almost everything, except chewing to- cco, billiard chalk and shaving cream, is purchased by ladies these days. If, however, the designer meant at 86 per cent of the pyjamas sold are bought by wo- en for women, then a new problem in the equitable dis- ibution of this world's goods stares us in the face.

There are approximately as many men as there are omen. Why should the women require 86 per cent of e nation's pyjama output while an equal number of men e forced to struggle along with only 14 per cent of the untry's pyjama wealth? Can it be that many men sleep nightgowns? Or—horrors—do they repose with their s as bare as their toes? Or do they just make their nderwear do night shift duty after a long, hard day at e office? Are they forced to wear their pyjamas six times long between washings as their wives? Or—and this positively the best light we can put on the matter— their wives keep their husbands adequately supplied th pyjamas by letting them wear their hand-me-downs en the style in pyjamas changes?

Strength for the Day

DO WE EVER LEARN?

Why do we behave as we do? Sometimes if we have made a big mistake, we look back and wonder how we could have been so lacking in intelligence and good judgment.

All about us we see nations making the same mistake over and over again. While history never repeats itself in detail, it does repeat itself in general pattern. Almost every mistake being made in the 20th century can be shown to have been made in some form in the 19th, the 18th, or the 17th. We win a war at the cost of hundreds of thousands of lives, and then within a few months we fall right into the old mistakes which brought on the war just concluded. We pour out endless treasure and shed the blood of regiments of men, and then turn around and utterly disregard the objectives for which we fought.

It is amazing the extent to which we can be fooled, as nations and as individuals. Satan play a trick on us and we are ashamed; but a few days, a few months, a few years pass, and he plays the same trick on us gain. We appear to have learned nothing from our former pain and discomfort. Sometimes we wonder whether humanity can learn anything.

George Bernard Shaw once remarked that there must be people on the other planets because somebody is using our planet as an insane asylum.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

NEVER ACKNOWLEDGE DEFEAT

I wonder what kind of a world this would be if we all got discouraged, after a few trials, and just quit cold? We wouldn't have much of a world!

My friend, the late Don Marquis, was one of the most talented of newspaper men, and at home with the writing of poetry, humor and short stories. He was also an accomplished playwright. He wrote one poem that has stayed with and inspired me for years. He called it "New Beginnings." He said that He was full of New Beginnings, and that there was always one ready to stave off defeat.

Many people fail because they recognize failure and bow to it. Success is so much easier than failure and it has the added inspiration and encouragement that all success has. You keep climbing higher instead of lower. No one wins all the time. We learn valuable lessons from every failure, but we learn most from success because we are affected mentally, spiritually and physically when we are winning.

We ought to keep planting success needs within us so that something good is forever growing for which we are responsible. I cannot accept mere money success, however, as the most genuine kind of success. Money success can be wiped out in a single day, but the success that spreads cheer, hope and encouragement to others can never be lost. People live happily by it all through life.

The true success is that one from which you enjoy the greatest satisfaction. Audubon, the noted artist and writer about American birds, was always happiest when he was in search of new birds to paint and learn about. Every new part of the country was a new Heaven to him —if it had birds to paint. Everything that he depicted in his wanderings is today a treasured item. His was a success greater than that of any warrior.

Going Blind?

(By Andrew Hamilton in The Rotarian)

Arthur Jordan, a highly successful Chicago lawyer, called it his "lucky accident" because it kept him from going blind.

One spring morning while driving to his office he stopped at an intersection, saw no cars coming, swung south. But there was another car. With horrible screeching of tires and a shattering of glass, it smashed into him.

Fortunately nobody was hurt. But Jordan was considerably nettled when a traffic policeman suggested, "You'd better get your eyes looked at, Mister." True, his eyes did blur occasionally and he did get headaches — after a hard day in court. Otherwise his vision seemed to be in good shape.

The eye specialist he consulted three days later made a field-of-vision test, examined the optic nerve with an ophthalmoscope, and measured the pressure inside the eyeball with a tonometer.

"You've got glaucoma," he said bluntly. "And if you neglect it much longer, you'll be blind as a bat."

• • •

Arthur Jordan is one of 800,000 Americans who, according to the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, are losing their sight — without realizing it! And glaucoma is a leading cause of blindness. Like tuberculosis and stomach ulcers, it frequently strikes before you are aware of it. Warning symptoms are slight —sometimes not even noticeable. But if detected early and treated according to your doctor's instructions, most glaucoma can be checked.

Glaucoma, rarely found in childhood or youth, is an affliction of the middle and late years—doing its most deadly work after the age of 40. About 11 per cent of all blind people are victims of this disease. Practically all of them had normal sight during their early years. But some time during their 40's, 50's, and 60's they went blind because of ignorance or neglect.

Sir W. Stewart Duke-Elder, of London, England, eye surgeon to the late King George VI and one of the world's greatest authorities on glaucoma, recommends that everyone past 40 have a yearly eye examination whether he thinks he needs it or not. If glaucoma, like cancer, gets too much of a start, there's nothing that can be done.

Something like 25,000 persons in the United States are stone blind and 150,000 others have lost the use of one eye because of glaucoma. Due to the increasing tempo of modern life and the greater percentage of "senior citizens" in the U.S. population, it is estimated that 800,000 Americans are potential glaucoma victims of the future.

Glaucoma isn't a new disease. Hippocrates, the Greek master of medicine, recognized it four centuries before Christ. He gave it the name "glaucoma," which means "sea green"—the color of the eye after vision has been destroyed. It is supposed to have caused the blindness of the English poet John Milton. In 1830, William McKenzie, the famous Scottish surgeon, wrote a classic description of glaucoma; and in the middle 1880's, Albrecht von Graefe, of Germany, performed the first operation which saved a patient's sight.

• • •

What is glaucoma? Doctors aren't sure. It isn't caused by germs — although a diseased condition in the eye produces glaucoma as a secondary condition. Glaucoma may be partly hereditary, partly due to poor general health or unwise living habits. Some doctors refer to it as "a sick eye in a sick body."

Glaucoma does not refer to one disease entity, but rather to a series of failures within the eye. All of them, however, have one condition in common. Increased pressure inside the eyeball. Normally the eye is as soft and tender as a stewed prune. But glaucoma sometimes causes it to become almost as hard as a glass marble.

It's this increasing hardness which destroys the optic nerve. Most of the time sight is lost slowly, but surely, over a period of years. Yet the disease is practically symptomless and the victime is scarcely aware of what is happening. It seems difficult to believe that a person can gradually lose his sight without being aware of it, but there's a good explanation.

• • •

The human eye—a wondrous mechanism — is composed of tissues. And like other tissues in the body, they are fed by the bloodstream. It wouldn't be practical to have red, sticky blood flowing through the center of the eye. So Nature, in her wisdom, provided the eye with a colorless, watery fluid called aqueous humor. This fluid leaves the bloodstream, flows through the pupil, and back into the bloodstream again through an outlet which is known as Schlemm's ceanal.

In the normal eye this fluid is like a moving stream. But in bases of glaucoma, an obstruction develops and the aqueous humor can no longer escape through Schlemm's canal. As more and more of this fluid is trapped, pressure increases. It's like filling a leather bag with water. The more you put in, the harder it gets. This pressure eventually injures the delicate structures of vision inside the eyeball, including the optic nerve.

• • •

Lawyer Jordan, he of the "lucky accident," had what doctors call "chronic simple glaucoma." It's the most common form; loss of vision is slow. It occurs in about 75 percent of the cases. In Jordan's case the increased pressure in his eyes was just beginning to damage the delicate tissues.

The first parts of the eye to suffer were the nerve fibres that enable a person to see to the side. Glaucoma slowly and steadily narrows this side vision until the victim is like a horse wearing blinders; he can see only straight ahead.

Dr. Peter C. Kronfeld, professor of ophthalmology at the University of Illinois, suggests a simple test that should be taken once a year by everyone middle-aged or over.

"All you need to do," he says, "is to close one eye and take careful note of the range of vision of the open eye—that is, note how wide a space you can see and the objects in that range. Write it all down carefully and do the same with the other eye.

"That's the first part of the test. The second comes a year later. You do exactly the same thing—standing in the same position and observing the same set of objects. Then refer to what you wrote down a year previously. If you can't see as much, that's your warning!" And you'd better see a doctor!

• • •

In the second type of glaucoma, vision is usually destroyed so quickly that the victim must have immediate medical treatment if the eyes are to be saved. This is called "acute glaucoma" and occurs about 25 per cent of the time.

Full fledged accute glaucoma is known to have caused complete blindness within 48 hours. A New York investment banker was stricken on a hunting trip in Canada and, before he could be rushed back to an eye specialist, became stone blind.

Sometimes these acute attacks are preceded by minor seizures that have recognizable symptoms.

The pupil is enlarged, the cornea is hazy; vision becomes blurred and the victim sees red and green halos around lights. He also may have slight headaches and eye pains. The first attacks usually disappear in a short time. But as the disease progresses, they occur more frequently and more severely. At first they may be months apart, then weeks, then days.

• • •

With the sudden onset of a serious, full-fledged attack, which may or may not be preceded by warning symptoms, the victim experiences rapid failure of vision, excruciating head and eye pains, and, in many cases, nausea. The nausea complicates the diagnosis and it is sometimes thought the patient has appendicitis or some other form of abdominal trouble.

Studies show that acute glaucoma attacks are often preceded by an emotional upset or a visit to a dark room. Glaucoma may be a form of hypertension, limited to the eyeball. In fact, some medical men think there may be a relationship between glaucoma and high blood pressure because it has been found that glaucoma sufferers have a tendency to develop high blood pressure.

The only good thing about glaucoma—if it can be called such — is that treatment is easy and successful in a majority of the cases. In simple glaucoma, loss of vision is arrested in 70 per cent of the cases, 20 per cent retain a useful amount of sight, and only 10 per cent fail to respond. In acute glaucoma, the results are less encouraging, but proper surgical attention salvages countless years of sight, impaired though it may be.

• • •

In treating glaucoma, doctors say that first control should be attempted with a group of drugs known as "miotics" such as pilocarpine eserine, physostigmine, and others. When dropped in the eye, these force the pupils to contract, thus clearing a passage for the aqueous humor. One drop is good for several hours.

That is the secret of beating glaucoma; (1) unfailing use of eye drops to relieve the pressure on the eyeball, and (2) regular checkups by an eye doctor. In many cases this represents the difference between good sight and total blindness.

One of the newer drugs used to treat glaucoma is diisipropyl fluorosphate, or DEP for short. During World War II, researchers of the U.S. Army's chemical-warfare branch experimented with it as a nerve gas, but it wasn't much good. One day an engineer who had got a sniff of the stuff looked in a mirror and was astonished to note that his eyes had squeezed down to pin points. Tests on rabbits and dogs showed that a drop, containing only 1/100th of one per cent of DFP in a solution of peanut oil would keep the pupils of healthy eyes contracted for 21 days.

At the University of Pennsylvania Medical School it was found that, whereas pilocarpine and physostigmine controlled tension in about 35 per cent of glaucoma eyes, DFP was successful in about 79 per cent of the cases. And whereas the older drugs had to be dropped into the eyes three and four times a day, DFP could be applied only once every ten days.

DFP, however, is still in the experimental stage and some glaucoma specialists doubt that it is as helpful as first reports indicated.

If the miotics don't bring relief, tension remains high and pain continues, and an operation is called for. An eye specialist delicately lances a new channel for the eye fluid to escape. Such operations are successful in about 80 out of every 100 cases.

• • •

To help glaucoma victims, the U.S. National Safety Society for the Prevention of Blindness has formulated the following seven rules:

1. Consult your eye physician at once if you see rannbow-colored halos around lights, if the eye becomes painful or vision is blurred, or if sight is impaired in any way.
2. Avoid as much as possible excitement, anger, worry, fear, or depression from disappointment.
3. Keep your blood circulation active. If your occupation compels you to sit the entire day, take a long but not too tiring walk before and after work.
4. Avoid tight-fitting clothes.
5. Avoid dark rooms as much as possible. Go to the movies for only one feature and, if possible, choose subjects that are not depressing or upsetting. It is wise to follow similar rules with regard to television.
6. Do not use any eyedrops or eyewashes without consulting your physician: they may be harmful.
7. Have a complete physical examination annually.

• • •

Glaucoma—the disease that can rob you of sight without warning or pain — is what you make of it.

Those who faithfully put miotic drops in their eyes and have regular checkups by eye specialists have been reading books, playing chess, going to the theatre, and watching their grandchildren grow up — some of them for 20 years and more. But there are thousands of others like the Philadelphia businessman who last year decided that glaucoma treatments were "too expensive and too much bother." Today he is completely blind.

BURBANK ROLLED 'EM AT SEVENTY-FIVE

Dr. Brady

Now that the mystery of the new degree has been solved—you know, the degree P. H. D., which I dreamed up, but which no institution has seen fit to grant as yet if any institution has an idea I beg to state that, much as I'd like to be the first to receive the degree I shall not contribute one red cent for the distinction, but I might go as high as $1,000 . . . I'd like to find out which of our readers has longest rolled what I have for years insisted on calling "somersaults" but now, since my favorite grandson came home from college, acknowledge are just plain old forward rolls.

The late great Luther Burbank celebrated his 75th birthday anniversary, about 1924 doing forward rolls on his lawn, as reported in news movies. He turned up his toes two years later. Just what took him I never learned, but anyway 77 is too young to turn up one's toes, unless by execution or accident.

I made it clear, before I proposed the degree P. H. D., that I'd make no contribution, grant or gift, whether I received the degree or not.

Now I beg to announce that I offer no prize or award for the information, but I'll be delighted to hear from readers who have been doing morning rolls years. I'd like to know how long you have practised the silly stunt and effect you think it has had on your health. We had such a symposium here about twenty years ago, and some of the testimonials were so strong I dare not print 'em, lest some readers charge me with faking them.

This time I ask your permission to reveal your identity, in private letter, of course, if necessary to prove your statement is yours and not something conjured out of my imagination. In any case, I never take seriously an unsigned communication, opinion, comment or query. On the other hand I have never revealed the identity of a correspondent without his or her written consent.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A friend of mine, after eight months of determined trying, at last got a job in the big company which it has been his young life's ambition to work for.

As I know one of the very top men of the company—go fishing with him, in fact—I offered, three months ago, to put in a good word for the boy. But on the hot advice of everybody concerned, including the boy himself, I was persuaded not to.

"It would be a bad thing," everybody explained. "Never go over anybody's head, like that. If the manager of the department he wants to work in got word from upstairs to take the boy on his staff, he would be irritated, and the boy would lead a dog's life. Everything that went amiss in the department would be explained to the people upstairs at the boy's expense. If a manager has to take on friends of the big bosses, how can he be held responsible . . . .?"

A week ago, my friend, the high executive of the company, happened to learn casually that the young fellow was a friend of mine.

"He's been dying," I said," to get into your organization. For a year."

"Well, why the Sam Hill didn't you tell me?" demanded my big brass friend.

So I explained about the business of not going over anybody's head.

My friend blew up.

"What nonsense!" he protested. "Our company is full of nepotism. I've got a dozen relatives working in it. So has everybody else. And we all go over everybody's head. If there is anybody I raise the devil over, it is the person who complains about somebody going over his head. My gosh, man, modern business has no time to wste on old theories like that. What has to be done has got to be done in the smartest, quickest and most intelligent way. And if getting it done required going over somebody's head or under somebody's feet, it doesn't matter in the least. And if it's my uncle or my cousin or a nephew by marriage who does it. makes not the slightest difference. The only guy who is in trouble in our company is the one who thinks his job is more important than the work to be done."

New Quinte Secondary School Officially Opened

City and District Residents Crowd Auditorium of New Secondary School for Opening

Residents of the city and immediate district crowded the auditorium of the new Quinte Secondary School on College Street Wednesday evening for the official opening of the new edifice.

And what they saw as they made a tour of inspection following the opening ceremonies indicated that the Bay of Quinte District High School Board had received good value for its money in the construction of a new school second to none in appointments and equipment.

They were assured of this fact by Mr. L. S. Beattie, superintendent of secondary education for the Ontario Department of Education who officially opened the new school.

Mr. Beattie said the new school was functional and cost figures had proven it had been economically built and the building was tangible evidence of the co-operation between urban and rural taxpayers who through larger high school districts had joined together in order to afford their children better educational opportunities.

According to Mr. Beattie there had been two great advances in secondary education in Ontario in the past half century.

The first had occurred in the early 1920's following World War 1 when the school curriculum had been broadened to provide vocational courses. Belleville had been one of the first centres in Ontario to establish vocational classes.

The second advance had been the elimination of the distinction between urban and rural life with parents in the rural areas demanding a better and broader school program than that provided in small high schools. The result had been the move for enlarged high school districts requiring the co-operation of school boards, town, township and county councils.

In this field too, Belleville had shown leadership, it remaining for the school boards in Belleville and in three rural municipalities to set the first example of an enlarged secondary school district including a city and rural municipalities.

"The success of your venture had proved a stimulus to other areas similar to your own which are now moving towards closer co-operation between city and suburban boards," he said.

"This school which we are officially opening tonight is tangible evidence of such co-operation and I wish to commend members of the original boards, as well as citizens of this area, who have contributed to the success of this project.

"Here we have a functional school, well built to serve the needs of secondary education for this district. It is supplementary and complementary to the Belleville Collegiate Institute."

Mr. Beattie reminded, however, that the building and equipment did not make a school. The school consists of teachers and pupils working co-operatively to reach certain planned objectives. Much depended on the competence and inspiring qualities of the staff.

The speaker referred to the wisdom and foresight of Egerton Ryerson, father of our present system of education, who decided that the education of children should be the primary responsibility of a community and that such responsibility should be delegated by the ratepayers to a board of trustees.

FAVORS BASIC PRINCIPLE

"This basic principle established over 100 years ago should be kept in mind every time we are discussing any transfer of our municipal responsibilities to central governments, whether they be provincal or federal," he said.

Mr. Beattie said he was well aware of the heavy incidence of taxation upon local real estate, but he was also aware of the fallacy and danger involved in the theory that education is a national concern and should be largely supported by provincial or even federal grants.

"This fallacy is to be found in the mistaken idea that money received from central governments does not come from the pockets of the individual citizens of the community," he went on.

Provincial grants equalize the opportunity of education by giving support to needy communities, effecting a redistribution of tax income whereby the "haves" help the "have nots."

The danger, however, lay in the relinquishing of responsibilities and hence basic rights. When local tax money went into the erection of a school there was also a local pride.

Since 1945 a tremendous program of school construction had been carried on in the province with 265 high schools or school additions, providing accommodation for 62,000 pupils having been built. Within the next ten years another 75 schools were expected to be built.

"This tremendous building program has been possible and will continue to be possible, only because local communities have assumed responsibility for the provision of school accommodation and because members of school boards have given freely of their time in planning buildings and carrying such plans through to completion.

PAYS BOARD TRIBUTE

In paying tribute to the Bay of Quinte High School District board and to school boards across the province, Mr. Beattie remarked that few taxpayers realized the time and energy given free by members in carrying out a school construction program.

Mr. Beattie was introduced by George Wishart and appreciation was expressed by E. A. Orr, principal of B.C.I. The new school was dedicated by the Rev. E. J. Kersey of Plainfield.

School Board chairman Roy Sills of Thurlow township excelled himself as master of ceremonies for the official opening program. He paid tribute to George Wishart, chairman of last year's board, who, he said, had "done all the work" while he as chairman of this year's board was "getting all the credit."

Last year's vice chairman, Clifford Barber of Ameliasburg, introduced the guests seated on the platform. Among the guests were George Currie of St. Catharines, former principal of Belleville collegiate. Local provincial members at Queen's Park, W. E. Sandercock, Roscoe Robson and Norris Whitney were also seated on the platform.

HANDS OVER KEY

Mr. William Tatham, representing the Tatham Company Ltd., contractors, handed a master key of the school over to H.C. Seldon, chairman of the sites and accommodation committee, who in turn handed the key over to Mr. Leslie Reid, school principal. H. H. Roberts, school architect, was held up by last night's snowstorm and was unable to be present.

Prior to handing over the key to Mr. Reid, Mr. Seldon made brief reference to the advance of high school education in the city, and also broke down the construction costs of the new Quinte Secondary school. He noted that while preliminary estimates for the cost of the school, site and equipment had been $875,000, the actual costs will be $716,500 of which $690,000 is eligible for provincial grant.

TWO FACTORS RESPONSIBLE

One of the reasons for the below estimate cost of the school had been the simple yet excellent plans of the architect and also to the efficiency of the builders.

He expressed the board's gratitude to the contractors in allowing partial use of the school prior to its completion and also to the school principal, his staff, and the students for their inconvenience at the outset of the school year in September.

Special mention was made of the school's fine appointments. The layout of the school was such that an addition could easily be added.

The school master key which he handed over to the principal was, he said, symbolic of the responsibility as head of the school.

"This is the proudest moment of my life," said Mr. Reid as he accepted the key. "It is a significant occasion, a great privilege and a big responsibility."

FORMER PRINCIPAL THANKED

Mr. Reid paid special tribuate to Mr. George Currie, former principal of Belleville Collegiate who had worked hard for the new school, and who had driven from St. Catharines to see the new building opened.

He expressed his thanks to the tax-payers who with the province of Ontario "were paying the cost". In such a fine environment he assured that staff members would give their best towards the education of the students.

"We at Quinte Secondary School are considered a baby high school but we look forward to the day when we can take our place with other seats of learning in the common cause of education."

Staff members at the school along with cafeteria workers and the school secretary, were introduced to the audience.

BIBLE PRESENTED

Rev. J. S. A. Spearman, representing the Belleville Ministerial Association, presented a Bible to the school, while Mr. Norman Smith on behalf of B.C.I.&V.S. presented an auditorium bell made in the shop at the collegiate. A new flag was presented by Mrs. W. N. Ponton and Mrs. Harold Vaughan on behalf of the Argyll Chapter, Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire.

Two other presentations were made to the school. One was the gift of a handsome auditorium stage table with the letters QSS on its front, from the Quinte Secondary School students' council as their first year project. The presentation was made by Bruce Dobbs, of the students' council.

The other presentation was the gift of a lecturn from the Tatham Company Ltd. All presentations were received on behalf of the Board by Mrs. R. B. Morden.

Entertainment during the program was provided by the school Glee Club under the direction of music teacher Mr. Wright and by James Phillips who favored with trumpet solos accompanied by Miss Helen Burkitt at the piano.

Visitors were invited by Chairman Sills to make an inspection tour of the new school and also were urged to remain for coffee and refreshments served in the school cafeteria.

Members Used Planes

OTTAWA (CP)—Cabinet members used seven government planes for travel in the 1953 general election campaign, the government said Wednesday.

They paid $8,304 for the use of the aircraft, it was reported in a parliamentary return tabled in the Commons for C. W Hodgson (PC—Victoria, Ont.)

Payments were by cheque in favor of the receiver general for which department receipts were issued Oct. 27, 1953. The cheques were deposited into the consolidated revenue.

PULLED FROM BAY

TORONTO (CP) — Gordon Mills, 53, was hauled aboard an island tug Wednesday after he fell from the craft into the bay, about 100 yards off shore. Other passengers who saw Mills fall, shouted to the captain. He turned the boat around and the passengers managed to haul Mills aboard.

Albert Factory Made 117,639 Pounds Cheese

The average yield for the year was given as 10.96 pounds of milk per pound of cheese while farmers received an average $2.17 per hundredweight for milk and 66.6 cents a pound for butterfat.

Rawdon

RAWDON — Mrs. Ervin Bateman, Thomasburgh, is spending a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Ed. Richardson and family. On Feb. 13, Mrs. Bateman accompanied Mr. Richardson to Holloway Street United Church, Belleville, where they attended a baptismal service for the former's grandson.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharpe were supper guests Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McKeown.

Messrs. Earl McAdam, Ernest White, Harold White, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jeffs were among those from Mount Pleasant who attended the funeral of Mr. William Hagerman Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Richardson and Mr. Orno Sharp of Mount Pleasant Sunday School, attended the Leadership Training Course at Marmora Free Methodist Church Wednesday evening.

On Thursday evening February 10 an enjoyable evening was spent at Mount Pleasant Church hall when the Two-by-Two Club entertained Campbellford Young Adults. Approximately 70 people attended which included members, visitors and children. The hall was gaily decorated in a plastic color scheme. Mr. Ed. Richardson, president, welcomed the visitors.

An impressive devotional period was followed by an interesting program. The recreation was in charge of Mrs. Will McAdam and Mrs. Harvey Couch.

Mrs. M. Tugnett Heads Women's PC Association

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Women's Progressive Conservative Association on Monday night, Mrs. H. Rollins conducted the election of officers for the coming year with the following results: Honorary presidents, Mrs. J. W. Kinnear, Mrs. G. Stokes, Mrs. H. Rollins, Mrs. W. E. Sandercock, Mrs. W. B. Weese, Mrs. Charlotte Clarke, Mrs. R. D. Arnott; past president, Mrs. C. Hyde; president, Mrs. M. Tugnett; 1st vice-president, Mrs. C. Ostrom; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. W. Tice; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. H. Yorke; 4th vice-president, Mrs. G. Little; secretary, Mrs. E. M. Kellar; treasurer, Mrs. Ada Young, finance convener, Miss Lottie Warham; membership convener, Mrs. W. Tice; card convener, Miss Rita Denard; pianist, Mrs. Rose Jordan, Mrs. H. Rollins. Chairladies for the wards: Foster, Mrs. J. McKenna; Samson, Mrs. J. Chapman; Baldwin, Mrs. W. Broad; Bleecker, Mrs. C. Ostrom; Coleman, Mrs. Rose Jordan; Murney, Mrs. H. Yorke; and Ketcheson to be elected later.

The annual yearly reports were read and approved showing a substantial bank balance. A lively sing song preceded the business meeting. It was decided to purchase card tables to donate to the Senior Citizens' club.

The speaker for the evening was Mr. Ray Gunsolus who gave a detailed report from National President George Hees of his trip across Canada. The report stressed the importance of organization plans, and of making a special survey of the field to find suitable candidates, who should be nominated early. Mr. Hees approved having home meetings in each poll, and advised telling the people what the Conservative party had done for Canada.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of Foster Ward who were hostesses for the evening.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W. M. S.

CAMPBELLFORD—The members of the St. Andrew's W.M.S. gathered for their regular meeting on Tuesday, with Mrs. G. G. Stephens as hostess. Owing to the absence of the President, Mrs. Hazel Storie presided.

The call to worship followed by a prayer opened the meeting, following which two minutes silence was observed in memory of the late Mrs. Reg. C. McCulloch.

Mrs. M. G. Beeler was appointed secretary for the meeting and to fill this position for the remainder of the year.

Ward 1 group was in charge of the program. Mrs. Locke read the Scripture and Mrs. J. Allan gave the prayer. The Study Book dealing with India was given, with Mrs. G. G. Stephens, Mrs. H. Storie and Mrs. W. Ellis taking part.

The World's Day of Prayer, to be held in the Glad Tidings Tabernacle on Feb. 25 was announced.

St. Andrew's Auxiliary will be hostess at the Semi-annual presbyterial meeting to be held here in May. Ward 2 group will be in charge of the March program.

SALEM W.A.

The February meeting of Salem W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. J. B. Hagerman and Mrs. Lorne Hagerman, Thursday of last week in the form of a pot-luck dinner and quilting. Approximately 50 members, visitors and men sat down to well filled tables.

During the afternoon, Mrs. Holden, the president, called the meeting to order and read a suitable poem.

Mrs. Tom Clements gave the treasurer's report. Several "thank-you" notes were read. The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. Albert Twiddy. Mrs. Orval Jackson read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. Will Johnston gave a reading entitled "St. Valentine". Mrs. Vene Hagerman gave a piano solo. Mrs. Francis Jeffrey sang a solo which was much enjoyed. Mrs. Mayo read a poem entitled "Friendship", and Mrs. Tom Clements gave a well prepared topic on "Friendship", which was the theme of the service, also of the Scripture lesson which had been read. Mrs. Arnold Ray also gave a reading.

Mrs. Murney Johnston voiced appreciation to the hostesses and all who helped with the success of the day.

UNITED CHURCH W.A.

FRANKFORD — Thursday afternoon the W.A. members of Frankford United Church met in the Rose Lowery Hall with Mrs. Frank Rabel presiding.

Mrs. Rabel conducted the worship service. The theme, taken from Mathew, 6:1-13. The Lord's Prayer was commented upon by Mrs. Rabel.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. W. Morrow. Various committees gave their reports and roll call showed 22 members and nine visitors present. The January talent money was then collected.

A short business period was conducted and the W.A. will sponsor a play given by West Huntingdon Young People on Wednesday, March 2.

Mrs. J. A. Lott gave a talk on benefits of belonging to a W.A. Presbytery.

Mrs. Rabel presented Mrs. Morris with a birthday gift for February. A vocal solo by Mrs. Grills, "Have You Been in the Garden With Jesus?" followed. Mrs. F. Charlesworth gave a reading on "Going to Church" and Mrs. Ada Bush one on "One Kindly Deed."

Refreshments were served by Mrs. P. E. Bonisteel, Mrs. W. C. Scott and Mrs. D. Mallory.

Film Council Holds Meeting

Tuesday evening, Dr. Arthur C. Locke was the guest speaker for the Belleville and District Film Council. Dr. Locke spoke on the topic of "Glaucoma".

Glaucoma is a disease of the eye which affects both adults, infants and young children.

Early diagnosis and treatment of simple cases can prevent chronic conditions. Modern surgery can prevent eventual blindness if arrested in time, Dr. Locke said.

But in acute inflammation of the eye, which results in excruciating pain suffered by the patients, removed of the eye is recommended as in most cases sight has been impaired completely.

Early symptoms are bilious attacks with headache upon arising in the morning. Mistiness of vision, seeing rainbows around street lights, frequent changing of eye glasses and a gradual narrowing of vision resulting in clumsiness in reaching for articles.

MANY CLINICS

Dr. Locke stated that there are quite a number of glaucoma clinics with the best of scientific equipment to detect all possible data on the condition of the disease.

After fully explaining a drawing of the eye and the course of the disease, Dr. Locke advised at least a two year examination of the eye as a prevention against glaucoma.

An excellent film, "Hold Back the Night", portraying all stages and treatment of glaucoma was shown, followed by a discussion period.

Women's Institute

ROSLIN W.I.

ROSLIN.— The February meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Walter Chisholm with 21 ladies present.

The president, Mrs. A. Bates, presided.

Several items of business were dealt with.

The leader, Mrs. Slingerland, gave a paper on the motto "Hats off to the past: coats off to the future."

Mrs. W. Bates gave a reading "Mathematics of the Past."

Miss I. Bates read an address which had been given by Mrs. Alice Berry, president of A.C.W.W. An article on "Public Relations" was given by Miss A. Wilson.

Valentines were exchanged.

The topic "Roslin Past, Present and Future" from the Tweedsmuir History book, was given by Mrs. H. Sayers and Mrs. W. Chisholm.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social time enjoyed.

Fathers and Fun Prevalent At Home, School Meeting

The February meeting of the Queen Victoria and Sir Winston Churchill Home and School Association was held Monday evening, at Queen Victoria school. The theme of the evening was "Fathers" and the program, arranged by Mrs. A. A. Wilson, surprised and delighted the parents with its easy informality and moments of high hilarity.

The meeting was opened with all present reading "A Parents' Code of Ethics" and "The Home and School Prayer." Mrs. N. O'Neil, president, welcomed everyone with a special welcome given to the fathers. Minutes were read by Mrs. C. Powell. An announcement was made of the "Children's St. Patrick's Fair" to be held on March 18. Parents were asked to especially support this fair as it is the one opportunity to raise funds for the year. It was also announced a meeting will be held Monday, February 21, at Queen Alexandra school, Ann Street, for all association members to discuss the formation of a Home and School Council for Belleville and surrounding district. Mrs. C. V. Coombs, Lakefield, Ontario, district chairman will be the speaker and lead in a discussion. Another item of local interest is the Home and School broadcast over CJBQ the evening of February 23, under the direction of the Queen Victoria and Sir Winston Churchill Association and convened by Mrs. J. Trainer. Volunteers were asked to attend, as delegates, the Home and School convention during Easter week in Toronto.

The attendance count was won by Mrs. Otto's Grade II class and Mr. Dyer's Grade V class.

INTERESTING TALK

Mrs. Wilson then introduced Mr. R. P. Cooper, who gave an interesting talk on "Founder's Day." Mr. Cooper gave much credit to the noble part women have played throughout history naming Madame Curie, Florence Nightingale, Edith Cavell and others to lead up to the founding of the first Home and School Council in Toronto in 1916, by a woman, namely Mrs. A. C. Courtice. Within three years this association had spread from city to city and in 1919 a provincial federation was formed. The Home and School Association is now a strongly organized and powerful voice in many local communities. In 1948 an Association was formed at Queen Victoria school and this has continued to grow in members and provides interesting and educational programs for parents.

A group of young men from Mr. E. S. Fairman's class, Grade VII, entertained the audience by showing great agility of mind in establishing with an average of twelve questions, correct answers to four different queries in the game of Twenty Questions. Giving full support to this were Messrs. Jack MacKeen, Bob Weese, Jim Davis, J. Morton and Bill Dewberry.

A panel of five fathers, J. MacKeen, Sgt. W. Bennett, R. P. Cooper, G. A. Bradford and E. H. Randell completely tickled the audience in their endeavors to establish the identity of a ham sandwich and Bo-Peep's Sheep.

THANKED FOR TALK

Sgt. Bennett thanked Mr. Cooper for his talk and also the boys and fathers for their participation in the games. He then introduced Mr. F. Dyer.

Mr. Dyer mentioned how Canadian Folk Dancing had become a source of pleasure to him and of his association with Mr. Wm. Workman, director of Recreation for Trenton.

Mr. Workman successfully led sixty-four adults, many of whom were strangers to each other, into a relaxed, happy group, starting out with a large circle which ciation was formed Queen Vicmarched singly, then paired under hands, round and about and finally in groups of eight enthusiastically danced to recorded Hi Di Ho music.

DIFFICULT TASK

A rather difficult part of the education of parents was undertaken in the planning of Fathers' night. The job of effectively mixing people who are not too well acquainted socially in an evening of play is a difficult task and if accomplished successfully points out to the parents the very wonderful part recreation and fellowship play in the life of an individual. There should be time for work, play and good wholesome companionship in the lives of both children and adults. Better social relations in your own community lead to better social relations with other communities and so on from village to city to nation to the world at large. This is certainly education on a broad scale. The success of the evening was apparent by the opinions expressed by many who participated.

Coffee and doughnuts were served by Mrs. W. Soule and her committee.

Kinettes-Kinsmen Enjoy Evening

Tuesday night the Kinette club entertained their Kinsmen husbands at a social evening in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

President Mary Lang welcomed the guests while master of ceremonies for the evening, was Bob Farquharson. Music was supplied by Evelyn Warham's orchestra. A buffet supper was served at the end of the evening, the event being made particularly enjoyable for attending Kinsmen when the ladies were obligated to pay for their husbands in "Sadie Hawkins" style.

NO TIME FOR THIEVES

BALTIMORE (AP) — Burglars smashed the window of a downtown jewelry store Wednesday night and took three watches, but they still may not know what time it is. The watches had no works. They were for window display only.

Centre St. Church Holds Tea Party

A Valentine tea was held recently at Centre Street United church, Sunday school rooms, by the Sunday school and choir.

The tables were decorated with hearts and daffodils. Tea was served by Mrs. Grace Eggleton and Mrs. Evelyn Henry, Mrs. Pat Schammerhorn and Mrs. Dorothy Schammerhorn. The trays were replenished by Mrs. Sally Reddick, Mrs. Dorothy Hodgen and Mrs. Mabel Lucas, while Mrs. Catherine Reddick, Mrs. W. Way and Mrs. V. Belch poured. Miss Barbara Peirson and Miss Cathie Reddick sold candy.

The home cooking table was supervised by Miss Jean Reddick and Mrs. B. W. Besley and Mrs. Ann St. Dennis was treasurer for the afternoon and reported $22.76 received.

BLEM—the new professional finish-restoring compound

JOHNSON'S BLEM

Rubs out burns, scratches, scars
no furniture polish can touch!

Use BLEM to treat furniture for damage like this

Burns: To repair burns, just dab on BLEM and rub the burned spot vigorously. BLEM removes charred edges, helps restore color to exposed wood, greatly minimizes the damage. Let dry. Rub BLEM off. Then apply Pride to the entire surface.

White Marks: Marks from hot liquids and containers can be rubbed out with BLEM. Not a "hiding agent," not a polish, BLEM actually recompounds the surface the way a professional refinisher would. Then Pride restores the gleaming wax lustre.

Scratches: BLEM rubs out scratches as no other household product can. It smooths down sharp edges ... reduces gouge damage ... helps restore color to bare wood! An application of Pride completes the transformation.

Other Stubborn Mars: Most blemishes and blotches caused by nail polish, polish remover, milk, alcohol, etc., can be rubbed out or greatly minimized with BLEM. And if BLEM doesn't repair the damage, nothing short of professional refinishing will.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BE FIRM WITH THIS BOY: ALSO, MIND YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Nearly a year ago, a boy two years older than I asked me to go steady with him, and against my better judgment, I agreed.

Last month I broke off with him, and ever since he has been calling my aunts and going over to the homes of my married sister and my friends every night, bothering them. My sister gets hollered at by my parents, because this boy has been on parole and is going with bad company.

One of the wrong things he has done was to introduce a married boy he knows, whose wife is expecting a baby, to a girl I know. I know this boy's wife, who is only 18 or 19 years old while the boy is 20, and I would like to know if I should tell her about this girl or just let him keep on running around with other girls when she is about to have his child?

I would also like to know how to tell the first boy to keep away from me and my friends and relatives. Ive told him, and so have my friends, that I dont want any part of him. Yet he keeps hanging around, and has even threatened to hurt any boy friend I have. He has also threatened to spread stories about me that are untrue, if I don't go back with him. I am what most people call a very good girl, and they say that any nice boy would like me.—Lynne.

Dear Lynne:

First let me say that the young man who is being disloyal to his wife by paying attention to another girl is not your problem, and you should not concern yourself with it. Don't go to his wife under any circumstances, but keep out of the matter entirely.

As for your own problem, what you should do is to tell this boy that if he does not keep away from you and your family and friends, you will report him to the police. If he is on parole, the parole officer should know when he is not behaving properly.

Pay no attention to any of his threats. If people feel toward you as you say they do, they are not going to pay any attention to anything he says about you, either. Also, you can warn any boy friends you have that this chap may try to make things unpleasant for them and let them take care of themselves. I doubt very much, however, that a boy on parole would be likely to run the risk of getting into more trouble, and if he did do anything, the police should be informed and he would be taken care of.

My advice to you is to tell this boy what I have suggested—that you will report him if he keeps on annoying you or anyone else and then go about your business as though he didn't exist. And, of course, make good on what you said you would do, if it should be necessary.

WOOL SHIPMENT BURNED

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (AP)—Fire tonight destroyed nearly £1,000,000 worth of wool awaiting shipment on the Wellington waterfront. All available fire-fighting equipment was being used to check the blaze which at one time threatened the whole waterfront.

More Oven Meals

By Mary Moore

Since Jane R.'s automatic oven menus and recipes appeared here early in January requests for copies of them have been pouring in every day and I've run out.

So I decided to wind up my rundown mind and demand that it bring forth some different oven and automatic oven dishes that go together like a kiss goes with a squeeze—since the whole idea was popular. I hope Jane R. sees this for it will be a small "thank you" from me in return for the help she gave me.

OVEN AND AUTOMATIC OVEN MEALS

No. 1 Oven Beef Stew and Baked Rice Pudding. Oven Temp. 300 deg. Fahr. for about 3 hours.

OVEN BEEF STEW

Cut into cubes 2 lbs. (or a little more) chuck beef and put in large casserole with perfect-fitting cover and add 1 tablespoon each vinegar, salt and quick-cooking tapioca, 1-2 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons fine bread or cracker crumbs, 2 onions sliced thinly. Cover with hot water, put on cover and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. 3 to 3 1-2 hours.

BAKED RICE PUDDING

Wash 1 cup long grain rice and put in buttered 1 1-2 quart pudding dish with 1 quart whole milk ,2-3 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt and grated rind 1-2 lemon. Bake uncovered at 300 deg. Fahr. for 3 hours or until rice is tender. This pudding should be stirred during first hour of baking if at all possible.

No. 2: Baked Stuffed Spareribs and Eggplant and Spanish Onion Casserole. Oven Temperature 325 deg. Fahr. for 2 hours.

BAKED STUFFED SPARERIBS

Season two matching sides of spareribs with salt and pepper, place together with stuffing between: Stuffing— 8 slices fresh white bread with crusts on cut into small cubes with very sharp knife. Gently saute 1 chopped onion and 1 chopped pared apple (Spy) in 2 tablespoons butter for about three minutes. Add to diced bread with 1-2 teaspoon each MSG, salt and poultry dressing. Mix. When ribs are stuffed tie securely with string to hold stuffing in. Roast uncovered in large pan at 325 deg. Fahr. until tender —about 2 hours. (If eggplant casserole is not used these are good served on bed of sauerkraut. Men love it.)

EGGPLANT AND SPANISH ONION CASSEROLE

Pare and thinly slice 1 eggplant and put into 1 1-2 quart casserole in alternate layers with 1 large sliced Spanish onion, sprinkling with salt and pepper between layers. Pour over 1 20-oz. tin tomato juice. Cover and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 2 hours.

No. 3 —Chicken Pilaf, Baked Squash, New Apple Crisp. Oven temperature 300 deg. Fahr. for 1 1-2 hours.

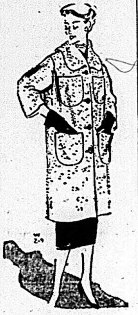
CHICKEN PILAF

To serve 6 buy 6 quarters of broilers (3 breast quarters and 3 leg and thigh quarters are good). Lightly brown in 1-4 cup butter. Lift from pan and to pan add 1 1-4 cups raw but washed and drained long grain rice and stir over low heat until it absorbs butter and is pale gold. Turn it into very large casserole. Sprinkle over it 1 cup chopped celery, 1-4 cup chopped onion, 1 tablespoon parsley, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper. Pour over 2 1-4 cups boiling water. Arrange sauteed chicken pieces on top, skin side up and pressing down into rice slightly. Pour over 1 cup sour cream (fresh from the milkman), cover and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for 1 1-2 hours. Cut 2 medium small squashes in thirds, scoop out seeds, dot with butter, salt and pepper and bake at same time.

NEW APPLE CRISP

In medium size casserole slice 6 apples and sprinkle with 1-2 cup brown sugar. Spread over top this mixture: 1-2 cup whole wheat flour, 1-2 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-8 teaspoon salt, and 1-4 cup brown sugar, 1-3 cup quick-cooking rolled oats and 1-4 cup butter (cut into the dry mix). Bake at 300 deg. Fahr. for 1 1-2 hours. This may be cooked at higher temperature for a shorter time. Serve with pouring cream.

COAT NEWS



By VERA WINSTON

A good travel ticket, a nice choice for town or country wear is this three-quarter length coat fashioned in off-white oatmeal tweed. It is very much of the modes which means that it makes last year's coat look obsolete—and that's just what fashion folk plan for. Straight yet boxy, it has just enough fullness to permit wearing it over a slim suit. Four curved patch pockets add to the line interest and there are four novely white and gold buttons below the gracefully curved collar.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

FLOWERS NOT BEST MANS RESPONSIBILITY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We have been told by several people that the best man furnishes the flowers. I would like to know if this is correct? —B.

This is not correct. The status of the best man at the wedding is an honorary one . . . not a financial one. The only two "financial' responsibilities of the best man are: (1) to provide the attire designated by the groom, to be worn at the wedding, and (2) to send a wedding present to the bride-to-be.

HER REPLY WHEN CO-WORKERS GIVE HER WEDDING GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

. I am to be married soon, and it is the custom of our office for the boss to present the gift from the co-workers to the girl who is being married. I've heard so many girls 'stammer and stutter their thanks, but I'd ike to be able to say something nice and friendly and then add my thanks. Will you please give me some suggestions as to what to say?

2. At the reception we are serving sandwiches, fancy cookies, wedding cake and so forth. When is the wine served? — B.

. This is a wise and helpful resolution of yours . . . to do some home-work on your words-of-thanks, and so to be able to say them with the grace this occasion deserves. For example: "Thank your, so very much, Mr. Carter (looking at him) . . . and my deepest thanks too to every one of you dear friends (your smile of appreciation including every one in the group.) How good and kind of you to make such a wonderful plan for my happiness, for each to contribute so graciously and generously to buying me such a grand gift. The pair of crystal candlesticks are beauties . . . just what Bob and I were longing to have for our table, an he'll be as grateful as I am. We hope you'll all come soon to our new home to see the lovely light they will shed. I shall cherish your gift particularly because it will always mean the precious friendship of my co-workers in these happy years. Thank you . . . thank you all!

2. Since, as I judge, it is not to be a sit-down service, you may have the wine served as soon as some of the guests have been received in the reception-line . . . or you may wait to have it served when you cut the cake.

HOW TO PLACE THE INDIVIDUAL BUTTER KNIVES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just acquired the butter spreaders to match my flat silver. Will you please tell me the correct way to place the butter spreader on the bread-and-butter plate? — Reader

Place the individual butter knife across the edge of the bread-and-butter plate, either parallel with the silver-pieces at the sides of the place plate, or parallel with the edge of the table. Either of these right-angle positions is better than placing the knife diagonally on the bread-and-butter plate. The butter knife should rest on the edge of the plate . . . the tip of the knife should not be in the center part of the plate. (And, incidentally, it's better to refer to these small knives as "butter knives" or individual butter knives," rather than by the commercial name of butter spreaders.")

Beauty

STAYING BEAUTIFUL

It is a shame so many women actually create their own beauty problems. They worry lines into their faces. They carry their bodies without spirit, so their figures assume poses and movements that make them appear older than their years.

Beauty and youthful lines could be theirs if they would but seek the means of restoring them.

Much of the trouble lies in their shoulders. Thrown forward, they send the entire body out of alignment. Poised, proudly lifted, easy-swinging shoulders are youthful. If you doubt that statement, stand in front of a full-length mirror and slump. With chest flat, arms forward, you'll look and feel ten years older.

When shoulders are held high, the body is given a lift that immediately accents the best lines of the silhouette. The chest looks broader, waist smaller, abdomen flatter.

In these days, of styles in fashion make pretty shoulders essential to loveliness. If you feel yours are a bit rigid, that your arms lack grace and flexibility of movement, here is what you should do: Raise your shoulders to the ear lobs, hold your chin and head back till your body slightly forward from the waist, then drop your shoulders and shake yourself free of stiffness. Do this several times a day.

If your shoulders tend to roundness, try a swinging routine, which should be practiced in an upright position, feet twelve inches apart. Lift your arms high, swing them from side to side. Keep the body tall, chest high, tummy tucked in and upward. After several swings, relax, drop your hands, take several deep breaths, then repeat.

Tree Demolishes House by Falling Wrong Way

CAMPBELLVILLE (CP)—A tree fell the wrong way and demolished a house Wednesday in this village 10 miles north of Hamilton.

Mr. and Mrs. William Turner were watching their nephew, Alfred, cut at the giant 100-foot ash tree in front of their house.

Suddenly the tree started to sway because of the heavy wind. A block and tackle held it momentarily. Then down it came, tilting towards the house.

Mr. Turner turned and, pushing his wife ahead of him, rushed towards the back of the house. They made it to the kitchen at the back of the house as the tree came crashing through the roof.

The five-room stucco bungalow was wrecked. Only the kitchen, added to the back of the house, remained standing. Mr. and Mrs. Turner were not injured.

The tree was being cut down to make way for a hydro line.

COMMITTEE

"The provincial auditor, the independent auditing firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Company and the firm of J. D. Woods and Gordon have made very extensive examinations and investigations over considerable periods of time and have informed the committee that, in their opinions, no useful purpose will be served by pursuing our investigations further.

"We are satisfied their examinations and investigations have been carried on in an expert and exhaustive manner, and with complete impartiality."

GOT GOOD VALUE

The presiding judges at trials of three contracting companies found guilty on fraud charges stated in their judgments that in the cases before them the province obtained good value for its money, the committee reported.

"Our investigations have also led us to the conclusion that the people of Ontario have obtained, by and large, good value for the road building done in the post-war years under review.

"While overruns were considerable they were due chiefly to lack of adequate pre-engineering and changes in design leading to greater quantities of materials used and moved and the consequent higher costs than were originally estimated and without rewriting the contracts."

The committee recommended three lines of action for the future to restore confidence and eliminate the possibility of a repetition of any of the improper practices;

Adequate pre-engineering, coupled with realistic bidding and the handling of bids in such a way that no possible leaks can occur and no partiality can be shown;

CONTRACT ASSURANCE

Assurances that there will be responsibility on the part of every contractor obtaining a contract from the department to carry out the terms of the contract, both from a financial and a capacity-to-perform point of view;

Clear-cut contracts, with adequate bonding requirements, to ensure performance and the payment of materials and wages, with the bonding companies alive to their responsibilities and to the type of business required, with respect to both the contractor and the department.

In a "preamble" to the report the committee said the department grew steadily in an orderly manner until the end of the Second World War. Since 1945 development was much more rapid, with a mounting demand for new highways and improvements to existing highways.

"There has been a noticeable shortage of qualified engineers and undoubtedly this shortage has been a contributing factor to the number of the troubles which the department has encountered."

LACKED PLANNING

The committee agreed with a report of J. D. Woods and Gordon Limited, a management consultant firm, that many of the difficulties under which the department has been operating resulted from a lack of adequate and systematic planning and insufficient preliminary work prior to the calling of tenders.

The report gave a detailed record of criminal proceedings against the Tomlinson Company, Standard Paving Company and the Bergmann Construction Company, including excerpts from evidence taken at the preliminary hearings and trials, particularly that on falsification of records with confirmation from company books.

The Tomlinson Company was fined $100,000, the Bergmann company $65,000 and Standard Paving $50,000.

The report dealt with a charge by Albert Wren, Liberal - Labor member for Kenora and a committee member, against the former highways minister. Mr. Wren charged that Mr. Doucett had certain employees of a contractor working on his farm without paying them.

The committee found that there was no case against Mr. Doucett.

PROPOSES FIVE DISTRICTS

The report quoted a recommendation of W. A. Clark, department of highways chief engineer, that the province be divided into five districts similar to procedure taken in the state of New York.

Each would have a district manager or district engineer with a key staff such as an auditor, a soils engineer, a land buyer, a land surveyer and a municipal engineer to direct operation under head office policy.

Proposed districts would be:

The northern district, including the Blind River, New Liskeard, Sudbury, North Bay and Hunsville divisions;

The southwestern district, including Chatham, London, Stratford and Owen Sound districts;

The central district, including the Hamilton, Toronto and Port Hope districts;

The eastern district, including Kingston, Bancroft and Ottawa districts.

Driver Using Flashlight To Show Road

WHITBY, Ont. (CP)—A mother whose four-month-old son was drowned when a car turned on its side in a water-filled ditch said in court yesterday the automobile's path was being lighted with a flashlight instead of headlights. Nine persons were in the car at the time.

She was testifying at the manslaughter trial of Charles Ray Gibbs, 40, of Oshawa. Gibbs has pleaded not guilty. The trial is continuing.

Mrs. Shirley Wilson, 32, of Oshawa, said she was sitting in the rear seat of the car with her son, Randall, on her knees when the car turned over on its side in the ditch.

Police said Gibbs admitted drinking four pints of beer prior to the accident. They quoted him as saying he was holding the flashlight in his left hand when he came to a washout.

Ottawa Company Buys Mosquitos For Air Mapping

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The Mosquito, often described as the most versatile aircraft of the Second World War, will be seen again in Canadian skies.

Spartan Air Services Ltd. of Ottawa says it has purchased 10 Mosquitos from Britain for high-altitude photography. The firm does mapping in the North for the government.

The first of the 10 will be ferried to Canada in the next two weeks, but company officials said modifications will have to be made on them and they will have to be thoroughly tested before being put into general use.

LONGER RANGE

The Mosquitos have a longer range than the American Lightnings now used by the company. They will have pressurized cockpits so the crews can work at 35,000 feet.

Company officials said the planes will not be ready in time for use in aerial survey work on the DEW (distant early warning) radar line in Canada's Far North. Construction of the line is scheduled to tart with the spring break-up.

The RCAF stopped using the twin-engine fighter - bomber soon after the Second World War. Its successor in the air force is the CF-100 all-weather jet interceptor.

ELEVEN KILLED

Survivors said the lights went out in the building shortly after the fire started, adding to the panic.

When firemen arrived, the residents were standing on window ledges and balconies, screaming for help.

"We rescued as many as we could," said one firemen. "But we didn't have much time."

Early today the cause of the fire had not been established.

FIREMEN INJURED

The first alarm was turned in shortly before 9 p.m. EST, but by the time firemen reached the scene flames were shooting through the roof.

Among the 12 persons taken to hospital, three were firemen who were cut and burned. The others were suffering from injuries received in their jumps and one from shock.

Antonio Talbot, who lived near the apartment house, said he first knew of the fire when he heard people screaming.

"Then the flames started to spout out the windows," he said. "I remained frozen for I don't know how long, until someone bumped me, and we both raced to the building.

"We weren't able to get very deep inside because of the smoke. We saw one man hang a woolen blanket from a window, hold it while his wife slid down, then jump the remaining two storeys.

"HORRIBLE" SCREAM

"One elderly woman appeared briefly at a window, and started tossing out clothing. Then she let out a horrible scream and disappeared."

Another man told of climbing down the wall of the inner courtyard of the building by clutching an electrical wire. He got firemen to rescue two women from a fourth-floor balcony just before flames demolished the structure.

"My wife is still inside," one man screamed as firemen carried him from the building.

An estimated 200 persons lived in the building but many were out when the fire broke out. Few were in bed.

Corona Enjoys Leisure Time In Cosy Stall

OTTAWA (CP) — Corona, as years ago, is an old horse, but he's still as frisky as a colt.

That good health and his distinction as the last of the RCMP horses that accompanied the contingent of mounties to the 1937 coronation of King George VI are the chief reasons for his present position: The only RCMP mount on pension.

For Corona is 27. Reckoning a year in a horse's life as equivalent to 3½ in a human's, he'd be close to 95.

But Cpl. W. E. Gardiner, riding instructor at RCMP headquarters in suburban Rockcliffe, where Corona has enjoyed his leisure in a cosy stall since 1951, says the retired mount can still lead his keepers a merry chase around the exercise ring.

Corona joined the force in 1934 when he was six. He was trained at Regina, travelled widely with the RCMP Musical Ride in addition to his coronation duties and wound up in Rockcliffe in 1949, two years before retirement.

A little grey around the head and neck, where he used to be brown, old Corona winters in the stable, exercising regularly in the riding ring, and summers on pasture.

MPs PLEASE NOTE

LONDON (Reuters)—A unique system to curb long-winded after-dinner speakers was launched here Monday night. A miniature traffic light set on the table flashed green to start, switched to amber as a polite notice it was time to wind up, and turned red if the speaker overran his time. Lord Hollenden, 70, worked the signals as master-of-ceremonies at a banquet.

MINTO

St. Thomas' W.A. Elects New Officers

MINTO—The St. Thomas' W.A. held its annual meeting at the home of Mrs. Lindsay Tanner, on Tuesday afternoon with eight members present. The meeting was opened by the president.

Roll call was answered with a Scripture verse and payment of dues.

Mrs. Tanner welcomed everyone and gave a summary of the year's work expressing thanks and appreciation to all members and friends for their loyal support and co-operation during the past year.

The secretary, Mrs. Colden, gave a concise account of the activities of the branch during the past year.

The treasurer, Miss Edna Tanner, presented her report which showed a balance of $216 on hand. Miss Tanner also reported five subscriptions to the "Living Message."

OFFICERS ELECTED

He then conducted the election of officers which were, president, Mrs. Ted Preston; vice-president, Mrs. Percy Ray; secretary, Mrs. Ed. Colden; treasurer, Miss Edna Tanner; Dorcas secretary, Mrs. Percy Ray; delegate to Annual, Mrs. Lindsay Tanner.

Mrs. Preston took the chair and several items of new business were discussed.

The next meeting is to be at the home of Mrs. W. J. Tanner.

Canon Brownlie closed the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. Tanner served refreshments.

Big Users of Commercial Music Ask End to Charges For Performance Copyright Music

OTTAWA (CP)—Two big commercial users of recorded music have asked for abolition of charges for performance of copyrighted musical works.

The request was made Wednesday at a hearing of the Ilsley royal commission on copyright by the Auditorium Owners and Operators Association and the Associated Broadcasting Co. Ltd.

A third organization, the Canadian Hotel Association, did not go as far but asked that performance fees on records and sheet music its member hotels use for entertainment be collected at the manufacturing level instead of from users of the works.

At the same time, all three urged the commission to investigate the internal financial workings of the performing rights societies which collect fees for public performances of copyrighted works.

Chief Justice J. L. Ilsley of Nova Scotia, commission chairman, indicated he believes there is little need for this.

He asked how the commission would be influenced by an inquiry into the private business of these private organizations. Their membership of authors and composers, for whom they collected fees, had not complained about their returns.

A spokesman for the hotel association, auditorium owners and the broadcasting company replied that last year the Composers, Authors and Publishers Association of Canada—one of the performing rights societies — collected $1,000,000 in Canada. But only $13.000 went to Canadians and there had been no statement on the remainder.

Dalton Caswell of Sundridge, executive chairman of the hotel association, said he does not think composers and authors get the bulk of the collections. If they did, he would be satisfied.

The auditorium owners, an Ontario group mainly embracing dance pavilions, said CAPAC does not insist on data as to the number, type and name of the music used so long as its fee is paid. But without such data CAPAC could not possibly make a fair distribution among originators of the music.

Predicts Canada to Produce More of Own Frozen Foods

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP)—Increased cash crops for Canadian farmers and lower-priced foods for Canadian housewives are predicted by Hugh Paton, one of a group which has bought a substantial piece of the Canadian frozen-food industry.

At present, said Mr. Paton at a press conference here Wednesday, Canada buys 65 per cent of its frozen food from the United States and pays duty and freight on it.

The Canadian housewife, when she picks up her frozen-food packages takes home chicken from Delaware, strawberries from California and American - grown French-fried potatoes.

This, says Mr. Paton, a native of Prince Edward Island, a potato-growing and mixed-farming province, doesn't make sense.

He, as head of Paton Corporation, Ltd., Toronto investment company, and a group including Hugh S. Jennings, president of National Almond Products Corporation, New York, have bought Birds Eye (Canada) Ltd., and, Mr. Paton states, intend to establish production plants across Canada—with immediate objectives in the Maritimes, Ontario and British Columbia.

He predicts that Canadian frozen - food sales, now running around $15,000,000 a year will, within five years, reach between $85,000,000 and $100,000,000, with $150,000 for a further goal.

Purchase of the Canadian Birds Eye Company was made from Unilever, Ltd. (Lever Brothers) of London, who sold the American Birds Eye rights to General Foods Corporation for $22,000,000 in 1929, and retain world rights except in the United States and Canada.

BREAKS EVEN

TORONTO (CP) — University of Toronto finished the financial year June 30, 1954, with neither a surplus nor a deficit, W. Eric Phillips, chairman of the board of governors, said Wednesday in his annual report to the legislature. Many projects which would improve the facilities of the university and renew outdated equipment were deferred. Gross revenue for the year was $11,053,389.

Accused Given Year Term On Driving Charge

WHITBY (CP) — Charles Raymond Gibbs, 40, of Oshawa Wednesday was sentenced here to one year in jail on a charge of dangerous driving. The charge was reduced from manslaughter.

Evidence was that Gibbs was driving by the light of a flashlight held by his nine-year-old daughter because the car headlights were out of order. The child was standing in the rear seat.

Among the nine passengers were Shirley Cousineau, 32, of Oshawa who was holding her son Randall.

Can Have Snow Removed From Walks at Price

TORONTO (CP) — Any homeowner in this city can have snow removed from his sidewalk by asking the works department to do it and having 1.6 cents a running foot added to his tax bill.

The works committee was told of this Wednesday by Alderman May Robinson, who said the regulation had been in force for many years but few people were taking advantage of it.

"If it is correct, we are going to be confronted with cleaning every sidewalk in the city,' said Controller Ford Brand.

Department engineer Clem Edwards said the rule was in effect and at present the service was used mainly by people who, through age or illness, are unable to shovel snow themselves.

Fly to Convention

LINDSAY (CP)—More than 100 private planes will fly to nearby Gil-Mar lodge on Sturgeon lake this Sunday for a flying club convention.

The Oshawa Flying Club will be host to members of the Royal Canadian Flying Clubs Association which has members throughout Ontario.

Delegates will fly in from as far afield as Ottawa, Kingston, Hamilton and London for breakfast and a social gathering. A runway was plowed on lake ice for landing and a large crowd of spectators is expected to watch the show.

Trying to Cure Canadians Of 'Get-Rich-Quick' Fever

By GEORGE LINTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Financial doctors are hard at work these days. They are trying to cure Canadians of "get-rich-quick" fever.

During the last three months, along with some of the heaviest stock market trading in history, have come a spate of warnings from long-established investment firms.

"Investigate before you invest," is the theme. It's aimed at a new crop of speculators — stenographers, salesgirls, white-collar and factory workers — whom some brokers here feel gave the extra push that carried January trading on the Bay street market to 148,057,000 shares, a monthly record.

Valuable mining strikes, in base metals and the magic metal uranium, have been reported frequently. Prices of industrial and mining stocks have soared. Uranium stock quotations at Toronto during the last seven months have climbed an average of about 70 per cent.

Rumors of big profits are legion. Word spreads around many Toronto offices that a fellow-worker made $500 or so profit on blank mines and as a result other employees buy, knowing little about the stock.

A few brokers are having a field day, reaping commissions on such sales, and promotional material on penny mines is widely distributed. But most brokerage houses, including the long-established ones, decry the trend.

They say from experience that should a reversal come, speculators would howl loudest and tend to discredit the whole brokerage business, including firms that lean over backward to convince people the market is not a one-way street to riches.

"Some people don't seem to realize that prices can drop as well as climb," says A. P. Fisher of Walwyn, Fisher and Co., Toronto.

"We and other brokers are getting up to a dozen calls a day from average-income citizens who have heard of big money being made on a speculative mine and who want to climb on the gravy train.

"There's also an increasing number of calls from 'pushers'—shady operators who want to buy a lot of cheap stock, boost its price by publicizing misleading claims, then sell out.

"More people are inquiring about buying penny stocks on margin, another indication that the desire to speculate is increasing."

Would-be margin buyers, however, get little satisfaction. Full price must be paid on stocks selling under $1 and at least 50 per cent must be put down for higher-priced issues.

Many investment firms have issued letters outlining the basic facts of the current mining stock situation.

Says Greenshields and Co., Montreal, in a recent letter: "Many so-called uranium companies have nothing more than moose pasture upon which they base all kinds of claims to entice the public to buy stock."

Telephone Act Amendments Given Study

Two government bills designed to improve rural telephone service were introduced Wednesday by Hydro commissioner George H. Challies.

The bills would provide for establishment of a provincial telephone authority and amend the Telephone Act to allow the authority to unite rural telephone systems under the authority.

Utimate goal would be a complete rural telephone system comparable to the rural Hydro service.

Mr. Grummett, speaking on the debate on the speech from the throne, said about 25 per cent of the personnel of the Ontario Provincial Police leave each year because they cannot live on salaries paid by the province.

He suggested their salaries might be raised to keep good men from leaving the force and going to municipal police departments which paid more money.

He referred to education costs, which, he said, are a problem the municipalities can no longer meet.

If education was taken over by the province it would lower the burden on municipalities.

Robert MacAulay, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto Riverdale, said payments to the unsatisfied judgment fund should be lower for motorists fully covered by insurance than for those who do not have such coverage.

Mr. MacAulay, urging unemployment relief, suggested the provincial government consider recruiting labor for new construction projects from areas where unemployment is greatest.

Stirling

STIRLING — On Monday evening, February 14th, the "Home and School Association" convened at the public school with a fair attendance. Mr. W. C. Brown presided and the program was centred around two films, "The History of the Early Days of Canada" and "The Main Industries of the Gaspe Peninsula."

River Valley 4-H Sewing Club is busy with its costume planning. The Garden Club girls, who have enrolled are: Grace Heasman Ann Zuidema, Janice Coombes, Marilyn Reid, Greta DeJong, Marilyn Conley, Sally Coombes and Emmy Zuidema.

Born—at the Belleville General Hospital, on Tuesday, February 15, 1955, to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hanna (nee Marie Montgomery), Stirling, Ontario, a son.

High Freight Rates Hurt Flow of Goods

SEIGNIORY CLUB, Que. (CP)—A Toronto food retailer said Wednesday high Canadian freight rates are hurting the flow of goods in Canada.

J. O Elton of the Red and White Corporation told the annual meeting of the Canadian Food Processors Association that at present "cars of canned goods go from San Francisco to Edmonton cheaper than from Ontario to the same city."

Turning to advertising, Mr. Elton said that for local markets newspaper advertisements seem to get the best results. When a manufacturer wanted to cover the entire country, newspapers, radio, television and magazines were all good. But for local sales, manufacturers got best results from newspaper advertisements in co-operation with chain and group stores.

TO HEAD SURVEYORS

TORONTO (CP) — J. E. Jackson of Toronto Wednesday was elected president of the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors at the conclusion of its annual meeting here. Vice-president is W. J. Baird of Toronto and secretary-treasurer V. A. Davies, Toronto.

Housing Loan Interest Cut By .25 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP)—A cut of one-quarter per cent in interest rates on National Housing Act mortgages takes effect today, reflecting the current situation of easier money on the country's lending market.

The reduction to 5¼ per cent from 5½ on mortgages insured by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation was announced in the Commons Wednesday by Works Minister Winters. It applies to loan applications approved from today on.

A CMHC official said it will mean a saving of 14 cents a month for every $1,000 of mortgage. On a $10,000 loan this would be $1.40 a month—a total of $504 on a 30-year mortgage.

The reduction does not affect terms of existing NHA mortgages.

Mr. Winters said the mortgage rate cannot be fixed at higher than the government rate plus 2¼ per cent. The interest rate on government borrowing has dropped by .28 per cent to 3.1 per cent since the NHA figure was set last year.

The reduction, he said, will apply to all types of loans under the housing act.

Besides loans on new homes, the new 5¼ rate applies to home improvement, home extension and defence worker loans. The rate for low-rental housing by limited dividend companies is lowered to 3½ per cent from 3¾, and for loans granted to primary industries for house construction to 4½ from 4¾.

The reduction follows the decision Monday by the Bank of Canada to reduce its interest rate on loans to chartered banks to 1½ per cent from two.

CAMPBELLFORD

Dance and Card Party Staged By Liberals

CAMPBELLFORD—The Campbellford and Seymour Liberal Association entertained the Northumberland Liberal Association at a dance and card party in the Masonic Temple here on Friday evening.

Mrs. Fred Phillips, president of the Campbellford Women's Liberal Association convened the evening with the help of the Seymour Liberals. Jimmy Baker and his orchestra provided music for the dancing and prizes were given both for the dancing and for the winners of the card party, which was held in the basement of the hall.

Out-of-town guests included: Dr. Fred G. Robertson (Liberal, North), Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Upper, of Colborne; J. C. M. German, of Cobourg; Mrs. N. Craig, of Brighton; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Price, of Cobourg, and Mr. Frank Mangus, also of Cobourg. About 200 persons attended.

Marsh Hill

MARSH HILL.— Miss Marilyn Finkle returned home from Belleville Hospital on Sunday but will be confined to her bed for some time.

A number from here attended the Federation of Agriculture banquet, Friday night at Stirling, when Prof. Ralph Campbell of Guelph, was guest speaker.

Marsh Hill public school was broken into on Sunday night. The intruder forced his way into the building, but nothing was taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Campbell and Prof. Ralph Campbell of Guelph, were supper guests Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw of Ivanhoe.

FUNERAL HELD

Steel Demand Never So High

NEW YORK (AP)—Demand for steel in the United States is so high that many users are having a hard time building up inventories to a safe point, Iron Age, the national metal-working weekly, says.

Smart producers are preparing for a March demand which they think will make a record since the highs of 1953, it adds, reporting as follows:

Steel consumers are trying to build up their stocks as a hedge against increased business, wage and price increases or a sudden international emergency.

But they're running into difficulties because low inventories have been the rule for a long time and many consumers now have decided to build up stocks. This has lengthened delivery time on many items and made a quick build-up of steel stocks impossible so far.

RYLESTONE — Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Heath and Carol; Mr. and Mrs. Walt Reid and Gordie, and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Mumby, Tommie and Ronnie were supper guests on Friday night with Mr. and Mrs. Verney Heath of Ridge Road, Stirling. Don Heath has been spending some time with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Verney Heath.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mumby and Suzanne and Mr. Robert Mumby were Friday supper guests with Mrs. Minnie Morton, and the Petherick family.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Thomson and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordie Sutherland and family of Stirling were supper guests on Tuesday night with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Anderson and Mrs. Lizzie Thomson.

VALENTINE PARTY

The pupils of the Union School and their teacher, Mrs. Cora Reid, held their Junior Red Cross meeting and Valentine party, on Friday afternoon, at the school. The president of the Junior Red Cross, Malyn Jones, was in charge of the following program: nursery rhymes by the Juniors; vocal solo by Carol Milne, accompanied at the piano by Miriam Rutherford; piano solo, "My Blue Heaven," by Patsy Spencer; Juniors songs, "Happy Faces," and "The Candy Shop"; piano solo, "Long Long Ago," by Agnes McKeown; piano solo by Carol Milne; reading by Fred Spencer; story, "Bobbie and the Frog," read by Mrs. Reid; secretary's report; Valentine post-office.

Cake, cookies and candy were served at the close of the program. Some little visitors to the party were Ross Finch, Carl Akins, Brian Thomson and Dennis Finch.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Spencer and family and Mrs. Ellis Jones, were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Husband of Napanee. Mr. and Mrs. Husband, (nee Gladys Spencer), celebrated their silver wedding anniversary recently.

Miss Ruth White of Coe Hill, was a visitor with the Petherick sisters over the week-end.

The teacher (Mrs. Murray Meiklejohn) and pupils of the 9th Line School held their Junior Red Cross meeting and Valentine party at the school on Monday afternoon. The Junior Red Cross Society president, Glen Stewart, had charge of the meeting and Donna Morton, secretary, gave her report of the previous meeting. After a short program, games and contests were played and all enjoyed refreshments of wieners and buns.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Petherick, Stanwood; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stevens, also Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Sherman, all of Campbellford, were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Petherick and family. It was the celebration of the birthdays of both Mr. Dan Petherick and his granddaughter Marian, whose birthdays occur on Saturday and Monday. All wish them "many happy returns."

Duplessis Asks Supporters Avoid Attacking Ottawa

QUEBEC (CP)—With an eye on the forthcoming federal-provincial conference in Ottawa Premier Duplessis has asked his Union Nationale party supporters to avoid outbursts against federal authorities.

The political chieftain, who will b. 65 April 20, told his supporters to adopt a new policy of "patience." He said he would set the example by curbing a "natural bent" to go on the warpath in federal-provincial matters.

Mr. Duplessis made the statement during a speech at a sumptuous, candle-lit birthday party in the legislature cafeteria. The party is held annually during the session of the legislature.

Quebec, the only province in Canada not to sign postwar taxation agreements, has been wrangling over fiscal matters with federal authorities for 10 years. Last October, Mr. Duplessis and Prime Minister St. Laurent arranged a temporary settlement.

NOT ENOUGH

Wednesday night, however, Mr. Duplessis made it plain he does not feel the settlement meets Quebec's claims in full. The province, he said, needs financial independence. Repeating views he has expressed through the past 10 years, he said the chief question today for Quebec is whether it will survive. Its natural wealth ensured material survival, but without survival of fundamental values the former was worthless.

Mr. Duplessis said, however, there are indications of understanding on the national horizon. "I ask for patience for the sake of obtaining our rights.

PATIENCE FIRST

"I ask members of the Union Nationale party to realize the gravity of the current situation and to find their inspiration in a policy of patience, a policy, however, that has nothing to do with abandonment of prerogatives."

If patience was not successful, he said, Quebec could then decide what next would be.

Rescued Airman Has Lower Part Of Leg Amputated

WINNIPEG (CP)—A sad postscript was added Wednesday to a dramatic northern rescue.

Capt. Thomas L. Pittman, 34-year-old United States Air Force officer found alive Tuesday in a snowdrift three days after a Stratojet bomber exploded 35,000 feet over northern Saskatchewan, had the lower part of his right leg amputated.

The leg was smashed in the blast. He parachuted to safety and landed on the broken limb. As Pittman lay helpless, unnoticed and without food in the snow for three nights and three days the leg became frostbitten.

Early Wednesday, a few hours after he was flown to Winnipeg, the leg was amputated just below the knee.

News of the operation was relayed to Pittman's wife in Riverside, Calif., by Col. P. F. Francis, also of Riverside, a member of the board investigating last Saturday's crash.

WIFE MAY VISIT

Col. Francis said he discussed with air force authorities at Riverside the possibility of flying Mrs. Pittman to her husband's side. However, he said he had not yet received word of their decision.

In Riverside, Mrs. Pittman said, "God has been good to us and we're going to lick this thing together."

"I have not been able to talk to Tom direct, but I talked to the doctor after the operation," Mrs. Pittman said. "I understand Tom has been asking for me and I am ready to go there (Winnipeg) if someone can take me."

She said she would know some time today whether she can go aboard a plane from March air force base here.

"Government regulations, you know," she said. "I understand they could take me there but could not take care of my expenses there and for the return trip."

Newest Boston Sensation Stars In Bruins' Two-All Tie With Rangers

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

LOSER 'N CLOSER!

"And the first may be last—and the last could be first" might apply to this win-again-lose-again senior "B" loop. A distinct threat is looming within the range of possibility to the first division teams as Clinton and Brockville surge into desperation drives for a playoff berth. Last night the Comets edged a faltering Whitby Dunlop club who blistered the path a short while ago and have now lost their last three starts. The Comets have won two and tied one in their last trio of outings, while the Brockville Magedomas have won three and tied one in four.

The Comets, sparked by Bob Taylor, former Belleville player, who scored two goals, giving him five in two games, are now crowding the Magedomas with 40 points, just six behind the Memos. However, the Comets have but four games left and the best they can do is to tie the Memos — if the Bouchermen drop their remaining five games. The "saw-off" comes tomorrow night when the Comets play a death-or-glory game with our side.

The Magedomas, who are about the hottest team in the loop at the moment have five games left—and they must needs keep up their sizzling pace if they are to oust the Belleville club. They must win three and tie one of their remaining five games providing, of course, the Memos lose their five. A victory over Clinton tomorrow night and another over Brockville next Tuesday and the Memos have it wrapped up.

ARLY MORNING STUFF

HE FIRST GOAL!

It has been proven time after time that the team scoring the first goal in a National Hockey League game usually goes on to win that game. It figures then, that the player who scores the first goal of the game for his team is notching a mighty important counter. These are the goals that really count, and some players have the ability to be able to tally that first big one more than others.

Sid Smith, Toronto Maple Leafs' ace left winger, is fast becoming a specialist at scoring the first goal of the game. Smith has scored the first Toronto goal in 15 games. Out of 55 games played by the Leafs (up to the morning of February 12), Smith had scored the first counter in 15 of these games.

Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens is another player who believes in getting his team on the score sheet as soon as possible. Big Jean scored Goal No. One for the Canadiens in 12 games this season. The player who is making the most conspicuous effort of all in getting his team off on the right track in each game is Don McKenney of the Boston Bruins.

McKenney, the rookie Boston forward, has notched the first Bruin goal in 10 games. This is a marvellous showing for a first-year performer. It displays quite vividly McKenney does not suffer from stage fright. It also shows the outstanding contribution he is making to his club by going out and getting that first goal.

Jack McIntyre, playing with the sixth-place Chicago Black Hawks, has done well in tallying the intitial counter for the Hawks this season. Jack has scored the first Chicago goal in 10 games. Ken Mosdell of Canadiens has scored the first Montreal goal in nine contests. Gordie Howe has put Detroit on the scoring summary for the first time in a game eight times.

Danny Lewicki, New York Rangers leading goal scorer and one of the main surprises of 1954-55 N.H.L. season, has illuminated the red light for the first time in a game for Rangers on eight occasions.

Maurice Richard and Boom Boom Geoffrion, Montreal Canadiens' pair of prolific scoring right wingers, have each fired the first goal for Montreal in seven games. New York Rangers' Dean Prentice has also notched the initial New York marker in seven games.

Leo LaBine, Dutch Reibel, Lorne Ferguson, Andy Bathgate, Pete Conacher and Cal Gardner have each scored the first goal of the game for their respective teams six times. With the exception of Gardner, these players are all part of the National Hockey League youth movement. Labine and Ferguson do their goal-getting for Boston, Reibel does his for Detroit, Bathgate and Conacher are with New York, although Conacher started the season with Chicago, and Gardner is a Boston veteran.

NEEDLING" BAD PRACTICE!

The Ontario Minor Hockey Association will take action against player-taunting or "needling" unless the practice is stopped by referees and club officials. A bulletin says thus far only one serious incident has occurred which resulted from loss of temper and ultimate suspension. In other cases outbursts have been the result of the accused player being "needled" by opposing players, fans, or even officials.

The OMHA says:

"'Needling' is one of the most unsportsmanlike acts that can be imagined, and is no part of the skill connected with the proper playing of our great Canadian game. The boys are on the ice to win or lose games according to their ability. If they can't win by their ability, but must resort to illegal tactics, or to teasing the other players, there is no place in the OMHA for them. Referees are instructed to curb these inefficient players trying to make up for their lack of ability by use of over-efficient tongues. We ask your co-operation as a manager or coach to stop such tactics. These lads will only end up being hurt when the victim of their teasing finally loses his temper.

"Something else we can do without is swearing. Referees have been instructed to curb bad language whenever they hear it. On the ice or from the benches it will bring penalties. However, we are asking you officials, as parents, to not only curb, but eliminate this unnecessary evil from the dressing rooms, busses, cars, or wherever your boys gather. 'You'll be doing them a service."

Leo Labine's Starry Effort Extends Boston String to 9; Trail Leafs by Four Points

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Boston Bruins' leading pointmaker this season, Leo Labine, rapped home his 24th goal of a most productive year to give the Bruins a 2-2 tie with Rangers in New York Wednesday night.

Although Labine's starry effort was in keeping with his general play this year, the suspicion remains that somehow he must have heard his hometown fans are planning to honor him. When the Bruins play in Toronto Saturday night, a busload of Haileybury, Ont., businessmen will be on hand to pay tribute to the town's only native now performing in the National Hockey League.

Rangers had built up a 2-0 lead on goals by Pete Conacher and Danny Lewicki in the second period. Boston defenceman Bill Quackenbush cut the margin to 2-1 seconds later on a solo breakaway, setting the stage for Labine's tying marker in the early seconds of the third session.

NINE IN A ROW

A crowd of 6,809 watched Bruins grab the tie to extend their unbeaten string to nine games. The single point advanced Bruins to within four points of third-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who were idle. For the fifth-place Rangers, it was another missed opportunity to close in on a playoff berth.

Boston meets the last - place Black Hawks at Chicago tonight and a win would put Bruins in position to move even with Leafs with a Saturday night triumph.

In tonight's other NHL encounter first place will be at stake as the league-leading Detroit Red Wings meet second-place Canadiens in Montreal. Only a point separates the two, with Wings having 73 points for the lead.

Marlies Nudge Losing Irish; Beat Cubs 4-1

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Marlboros moved to within one point of third-place Toronto St. Michael's Majors in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League here Wednesday night by defeating Hamilton Tiger-Cubs 4-1. St. Michael's dropped a 4-3 decision to Barrie Flyers in the doubleheader watched by a crowd of 1,613.

Marlboros, in fourth place, have 53 points. Hamilton is fifth with 45 points while Barrie is out of the playoffs in seventh place.

Barrie, stimulated by the superb work of Tom Green in goal, scored twice in the third period to overcome a 3-2 lead St. Mike's held after two stanzas. John Macdonald netted two goals for Flyers, Jack Kane scored the winner while Al Norenna tallied the other Barrie goal. Ken Gribbons, Dick Duff and Bill Colvin scored for St. Michael's.

Ken Girard scored what proved to be the winning goal for Marlboros in the second period of the second game. Mike Nykoluk, Billy Harris and Bob Pulford were the other Marlboro marksmen.

Gary Sharpe spoiled Marlboro goalie John Albani's try for a shutout with a second-period goal. Six penalties were called in the game with Jerry James of Marlboros receiving four and Hamilton's Bill McNeill the other two.

Claims Youth Sport Training Is Neglected

PEMBROKE (CP)—Dick Irvin, Montreal Canadiens coach, said Wednesday night the sports training of Canadian youth is being neglected. He urged more support by newspapers for budding hockey stars.

The National Hockey League coach, speaking at a hockey night dinner, said Canadian newspapers are belittling Canada's national game of hockey and idolizing imported players in other sports.

He asked the reason for reports that hockey is dying in Canada.

"What has happened to the youth of Canada?" he declared. In 1912, three hockey teams in Winnipeg had 21 players who could have been stars. Today, no players of National Hockey League calibre could be found there.

Remarking on the cost of hockey Irvin said his first professional contract in Portland, Ore., was for $700 a season. Now it cost more to bring a prospect to NHL training camp.

The Montreal coach, accompanied by Maurice Richard and Jean Beliveau, attended a $25-a-plate dinner to raise funds for Pembroke's senior hockey club, the Lumber Kings, now facing an $1,1-000 deficit. About 100 persons attended.

'Cocky' Cockell Can Defeat Rocky; Pudgy Britisher Admits That Fact

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—Now that it practically is assured that Rocky Marciano will make the next defence of his heavyweight title against Don Cockell, it seems we should start to accumulate a little information on the fellow who has proved himself a more worthy challenger than, say, Archie Moore.

It is not enough to know merely that the Englishman has been knocked out in recent years by both Jimmy Slade and Randy Turpin, and that he has since beaten Harry Matthews three times and Roland LaStarza once. All that is in the record book. What we want to know is, broadly, whether he can fight.

Noting that Jim Braddock, the former champion, was the referee of Cockell's latest victory over Matthews in Seattle last summer, we decided to phone Jim at his home in New Jersey.

"What do you think of him, Jim? Is it true he's built like Tony Galento?"

"Well, no, he's not like Tony. He carries a lot of weight for how short he is, but he's not fat the way Tony was. He's pretty solid."

"What was your main impression of him?"

"I would say it was his speed. He gets around on his feet good for a big man. He throws a lot of punches, too . . .

I wouldn't say he's a great puncher, what I saw of him. He's more the boxer type. He looks like he might take a good punch."

"Does he stand a chance against Rocky or is that a silly question?"

"I'll say this much, he thinks he can beat Rocky. His manager told me he was sure of it. He's plenty cocky, and that never hurts a fighter if he's got anything to go with it."

All in all, the impression was that Braddock didn't consider him anywhere near the worst heavyweight he ever saw.

'Rocky', Chataway Head Stars At Sports Celebrity Dinner

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-three athletic stars of past and present and from as far afield as Britain assemble here today for the annual $25-a-plate sports celebrity dinner in aid of crippled children.

The notables of national and international sport will assist the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association in launching the 1955 Canada-wide Easter seals campaign.

Among those around the dinner table tonight will be world heavyweight boxing champion Rocky Marciano, who is making a special flight to Toronto today to attend; Chris Chataway, Britain's great distance runner, who flew in from England Wednesday night, and a host of others.

Ten sports will be represented by the 23 outstanding sporting figures, star attraction at the dinner. Proceeds go to the Ontario Society for Crippled Children.

800 GUESTS

The association expects to realize about $20,000 for the society from the more than 800 paying guests.

Boxing will also be represented by Jimmy McLarnin, voted Canada's outstanding boxer of the first half century. In track there's Rich Ferguson, Canada's champion miler, and Jesse Owens, American sprint star, as well as Chataway.

From baseball come pitchers Robin Roberts of Philadelphia Phillies, Sal (The Barber) Maglie of New York Giants, third baseman Al Rosen of Cleveland and Dazzy Vance, member-elect of baseball's Hall of Fame.

Golf is represented by Gene Sarazen, U.S. and British open golf champion in 1932, who said Wednesday night he intends to enter the Canadian open this year; Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon, 1954 Canadian Open champion; Charlie Boswell, blind U.S. golfer; and E. Harold Banks, who helped form the Sportswriters Association.

WINNIPEG STARS

From football there are Lou Groza, Mr. Toe of Cleveland Browns, and halfback Gerry James of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, chosen last year as the outstanding Canadian gridder.

Hockey's contributions are Babe Dye, former National Leaguer who had possibly the hardest shot in the game, Charlie Conacher and Nels Stewart. Gilmour Boa of Toronto represents marksmanship, Bill Gooderham, Toronto, Yachting and Ed (Strangler) Lewis, wrestling. Dude Foden, ex-jockey from Toronto, is horse racing's representative.

And from swimming is Marilyn Bell of Toronto, who will be presented a plaque commemorating her selection by association members as Ontario's outstanding athlete of the year for her feat of swimming Lake Ontario last September.

Point Anne Defeats Campbellford In Opening Game OHA Round Robin

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Fighting an uphill battle from early in the first period, the Point Anne Cementmen flashed a determined attack in the 2nd half of the game to walk off with a narrow 8-6 victory over Campbellford in the opening game of an O. H. A. Intermediate "C" round - robin series here last night.

Campbellford looked much the better club in the first period as they outscored the Cementmen 2-0 before a handful of fans. They made it 3-0 before the Pointers hit the scoresheet early in the second session and the period ended with the clubs deadlocked 4-4. The visitors made it 5-4 at 3.06 of the final period but the winner's always - present scoring punch finally clicked for three fast goals to put the Cementmen in front for the first time in the game, 7-5. Each team tallied once in the dying minutes of the game. Point Anne make their next start against Marmora Friday night.

The Goyer - Williams Goyer line led the victors' attack, Gerry Goyer clicking for one goal and three assists while Williams tallied twice and assisted on one. Leo Goyer had one and one while John Green scored once and drew two assists. Pat Gilmour fired two goals and Bobby Hunter completed the scoring. Campbellford's big line of Payne, Free and Blake went well for the losers, Payne getting two and one, Free one and two while Blake picked up a trio of assists. Doober had two goals and Herrington one.

Eight minor penalties were handed out by referee Bill Holway with Campbellford drawing five of them.

Both teams opened with a lackadaisical style of hockey, the visitors carrying the play although they picked up two early penalties. It was while Pace was sitting out a holding sentence at 5.25 that Campbellford jumped into the lead, Doober flashing the light behind Letman with a long shot that caught the open corner. They made it 2-0 at 14.16 on a ganging attack with Doober deflecting Kemp's shot into the net off his body, Free also drawing an assist on the play. Point Anne played four men to six at one point near the end of the period when Hunter and Gilmour picked up successive penalties but no damage resulted.

Don Letman was the victim of a beautiful passing attack on the initial goal of the second period with Payne pulling the trigger, but playing coach Timmy Williams netted one on a goalmouth scramble and Bob Hunter cut the margin to 3-2 from John Green three minutes later, poking a loose puck into the corner.

Nelson, tending twine for the visitors, outguessed Gerry Goyer on a clean breakaway at the 7-minute mark and Doug Free made it 4-2 on the return rush, with Blake and Payne setting him up. Pat Gilmour got that one back at 9.54 on a solo effort and Campbellford was weakened by penalties to Field and Payne around the 14.00 minute mark. Gerry Goyer knotted the score at 4-4 before they returned on a quick snap shot after taking brother Leo's passout from the corner.

Payne tallied early for Captain Free's crew but the local sextet pressed hard around the 8-minute mark and it finally paid off. Leo Goyer banged the tying marker home on a ganging play with his linemates at 10.18 and Williams put them in front to stay 30 seconds later.

John Green made it 7-5 at 15.30 driving Gerry Goyer's rebound through a maze of players. Herrington and Gilmour tallied the final goals, both unassisted efforts.

The teams:

Campbellford — Nelson, Free, Louth, Blake, Payne, Eady, Herrington, Jeffs, Kemp, Doober, Pace, Fields, Lee.

Point Anne—Letman, Semark, G. Goyer, L. Goyer, Williams, Strahan, Gilmour, Stewart, Hunter, P. Maracle, J. Green, Bates. Referee, Bill Holway; linesman, Mac Carson.

Marlene Ousted In Foursomes

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) Both the 1953 and 1954 champions of the mixed foursomes two-ball amateur golf tournament were eliminated in Wednesday's quarter-finals as the event turned into a sharp battle of strokes.

Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., and J. Walcott Brown of Manasquan, N.J., won the 17th and 18th holes to defeat the defending champs, Margaret (Wiffi) Smith, La Canada, Calif., and James B. McHale, Jr., Philadelphia, 1 up.

Marjorie Burns of Greensboro, N.C., and Les Handt of Tampa, Fla., upset the 1953 winners, Marlene Stewart of Fonthill, Ont., and Hobart Manley, Jr., of Savannah, Ga., 4 and 3.

'Y' Basketball

The Y.M.C.A. House League Basketball schedule ended last night with triumphs registered by the Speedsters and Whizz Kids.

Ted Batchelor led the Speedsters to victory with 35 points in the first game, while Lawrence Parkhurst and Bill Gault shared scoring honours for the losers with 22 and 20, points respectively. Final score 63 to 53 to the Speedsters over the Pirates.

In the 8.30 game the Whizz Kids defeated the Idiots 50 to 41. Bill Dickey was high scorer with 22 points for the winners and Jack Mathews scored 18 points for the losers.

'Bobo' Olson Whips Tiger Jones In 10-Rounder

CHICAGO (AP) — Middleweight champion Carl (Bobo) Olson boxed masterfully and viciously to win his 19th straight victory with a unanimous 10-round decision over Ralph (Tiger) Jones in a non-title bout at the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night.

From the outset, Olson slashed Jones, who just one month ago had upset Sugar Ray Robinson, former middleweight champion, in the same ring.

Two officials gave Olson every round, referee Frank Gilmer calling it for the champ 100 to 86 and judge Frank McAdams 100 to 78. The other judge, John Bray, saw it for Olson 99-87. The Associated Press voted for Olson 100 to 89.

WILL MEET MAXIM

It was announced before the fight that Olson was set for an April 13 meeting with former light heavyweight champion Joe Maxim at San Francisco at 175 pounds.

Jones tried to carry the fight to the 160-pound champion, but Olson countered brilliantly and effectively to pile up large margins in every round.

In the final round of the nationally - televised bout, Olson nearly had Jones on the way down with a blistering two-fisted attack, but the game Negro finished on his feet and fighting.

Jones bled profusely from twin cuts on his right eye after the sixth round, but never called it quits against the ever-boxing, ever-slashing champion.

Olson beat Jones to the punch all the way, except the few times Jones lashed with stinging rights to the jaw which jolted the San Francisco title-holder.

BANCROFT

Pontiacs Win First Playoff Game by 7-4

BANCROFT — The first round of the Hastings - Addington league playoffs, played on Bancroft ice between Tamworth and Bancroft Pontiacs on Monday night, resulted in a 7-4 win for the home team.

First period score was 5-1, with Brady, assisted by Ohklie, responsible for the visitors goal. Bancroft scorers were Grenville, Crosby from Murray, Crosby, Ramsbottom assisted by Stringer and Shala, Lentz from Norman Brough, E. Brough with assists from N. Brough and Comerie and Ramsbottom unassisted.

Some roughness developed in the second and third periods when referee McFaul handed out five penalties for roughing, one for charging and one for misconduct.

Tamworth netted the puck three times during the second, Bancroft were able to add one to their total when E. Brough scored with an assist from Stringer. The visitors credits went to Ohklie from Kennedy, Kennedy assisted by Ohklie and Gerrow with assists from Brady and J. Cox.

The third period's only goal went to Bancroft when N. Brough scored with an assist from Pilgrim.

SMALL SHIP SAFE

KINGSTON Jamica (AP) — A crippled 300-ton Liberian freighter was towed into harbor at Bluefields, Jamaica, by the Royal Navy ship Venus Wednesday night, ending a three-day battle to keep the little vessel afloat. The Venus raced to the aid of the freighter, the Launa, Monday night after the captain reported his ship was taking water about 65 miles southwest of Kingston. The Launa was en route here from Honduras with a cargo of lumber.

One-Legged Canadian Hockey Player Stars in California Puck League

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) Ralph Diminyatz sees nothing strange in playing hockey despite the loss of his right leg above the knee in a childhood accident.

"The artificial leg never bothers me," the 24-year-old former Vancouverite says. "I use regular equipment, and I've never suffered anything more serious than the bumps and bruises you usually get."

Ralph is a defenceman with the amateur San Bernardino Shamrocks, who meet Pasadena Maple Leafs here Saturday in a California hockey league playoff game.

He came to southern California about a year ago from Vancouver and is a junior pre-med student at la Sierra College in nearby Arlington. After completing work there he plans to enter the College of Medical Evangelists near Los Angeles and hopes to become a general practitioner in Vancouver.

Until then, he says, "I'd like to play hockey as long as the coach can use me."

Diminyatz tried out for Shamrocks this season. Coach Bill Gray admired his speed and play. Suddenly Ralph and another player slammed together and fell. Diminyatz used an unorthodox rolling motion to regain his feet.

Gray turned to the newcomer's brother, Larry, who also plays with the team.

"Say, didn't Ralph get up kind of funny?" he asked.

"You'd get up funny, too, if you only had one leg," came the reply.

Diminyatz lost his leg in an accident when he was only 18 months old. His brothers were cutting grain near their home in Rouleau, Sask., when the youngster wandered into the tall grain against his mother's orders. The binder severed his leg.

By the time he was six he had learned to skate and soon was playing hockey.

"Everybody else was doing it," he explains. "I didn't want to be left out like a wallflower, you know."

Colts Snatch Dick Grann From Alouettes

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Colts announced Wednesday they had signed Dick Grann, six-foot, 245-pound tackle who was captain of the 1954 football team at the University of Rhode Island.

Grann, 23, was Colts' 25th choice in the National Football League's recent draft of College stars and they got a line on him in connection with their scouting of Pat Abruzzi, 208-pound Rhode Island halfback who apparently was headed for a Colt uniform but then lined up with a Canadian team.

"He agreed to terms and then went back on his word," Kellett said. "It makes you wonder."

In Warren, R.I., Abruzzi denied that he had "gone back on his word" to play for Colts.

"Mr. Kellett and I talked price a few weeks ago and I told him to send me a contract," Abruzzi said.

"But I meant I wanted the contract in black and white. He apparently thought I had agreed to the price."

Abruzzi said he is on the verge of signing with Montreal Alouettes at a price that exceeds the Baltimore offer by $2,000.

Jockeys Deplore Aintree 'Easing'

Bryan Marshall, who will be seeking his third straight grand national victory March 26, said:

"I did not think it was necessary to alter any of the jumps at Aintree. Horses are like humans. They must have guts and temperament to jump the course."

George Slack, who will ride the favored Tudor Line, commented: "There is nothing wrong with the coure. They should have left it alone."

The changes followed a public outcry after last year's race in which four horses died of injuries and only nine of the original 29 starters finished.

Hometown Fans Will Honor Leo Labine

HAILEYBURY (CP) — Leo Labine, the first Haileybury hockey player to make the National Hockey League in 30 years, will receive cheers from home Saturday—some directly and some by proxy.

The 170-pound centre for Boston Bruins will be performing against the Maple Leafs in a game at Toronto.

A chartered bus will take about 32 Haileybury business men to Toronto. They have reserved special seats and will stage a Leo Labine night. Most of the 2,000 persons in this town 90 miles northeast of Sudbury are expected to be listening to the game on their radios.

The group going to Toronto, including a former coach and several of Labine's teammates from earlier days, will present him with a key to Haileybury. Labine will receive an honorary membership from each five local clubs including the Chamber of Commerce.

Dodgers Sign Jim Hughes

BROOKLYN (AP)—Brooklyn relief pitcher Jim Hughes signed his 1955 contract Wednesday and was reported by vice-president Buzzy Bavasi to have received a "good raise" for his record performance last season.

Hughes, a righthander, broke the Brooklyn club record by appearing in 60 games last season. He bettered the mark of 56 appearances Joe Black set in 1952. Hughes had a 8-4 record and was credited with saving an additional 24 games. His earned-run average of 3.21 was the club's best.

Dodgers also announced they had signed Don Bessent, young righthander who joined the club toward the end of the season after a 12-13 year with St. Paul of the American Association.

Dodgers said only Ron Negray remained unsigned. Negray, another righthander, is playing winter ball and will probably sign within the next two weeks.

Pentictons Say Conditions Bad In Germany

KEMPTVILLE (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has received a protest from Penticton Vs over conditions provided for them in Germany and has asked German officials for improvement.

W. B. (Baldy) George, past president of the CAHA, announced this Thursday but said there is no question of the Canadian team withdrawing from the world hockey championships in Duesseldorf, Germany, Feb. 25 to March 6.

Mr. George said he received a cable from Penticton president Clem Bird saying that food and living accommodations in Berlin are "not good."

He said he cabled the German Ice Hockey Federation to arrange "satisfactory conditions" at Duesseldorf, where the Canadian team is due to arrive Feb. 23.

He said the Vs were to leave Berlin today for Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Redskins Will Enter Suit Against Stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins Wednesday sued coach Jack Hennemier of Calgary Stampeders for $50,000 damages on a complaint that he enticed two Washington players to jump their contracts.

Lawyers for the National Football League team said they plan to file a second suit today in an attempt to gain an injunction that would prohibit the two players from going to Calgary to play football.

Involved in the litigation are Dick (Little Mo) Modzelewski and Bob Morgan, both of whom formerly starred at tackle for the University of Maryland.

Lawyers said the injunction suit also was aimed at restraining Hennemier from trying to get two other Maryland players now with the Redskins, backs Jack Scarbath and Ralph Felton, to go to Canada.

In Calgary, Stampeder officials said they have heard nothing about the suit except "what was contained in the wire story."

Manager Bob Robinett said that "evidently the suit is much the same as the one brought by the Chicago Bears against Larry Siemering (Stampeder coach last year) and myself for tampering with Eddie Macon. Nothing more has been heard of it since."

Pentictons Win Opener 11-4

BERLIN (Reuters) — Penticton Vs, representing Canada at the forthcoming world hockey championships in West Germany, beat an international team of Canadians, Swedes and Germans here Wednesday night 11-4. Period scores were 5-1, 2-1, 4-2.

Barons Snap Hershey Streak With 7-4 Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It would be hard to beat the performance of veteran goalie Emile (the Cat) Francis for Cleveland Barons in Wednesday night's American Hockey League game with Hershey Bears. Barons won 7-4 to snap Bears' four-game winning streak.

The 28-year-old goaltender received 17 minutes of penalties, served by substitutes, during a second-period uproar. First he fought with Norm Corcoran and was given a five-minute major penalty. Later he drew an additional 10-minute misconduct for disputing a two-minute penalty for holding the puck.

Francis also was given a rare assist on a second-period Cleveland goal as Cal Stearns broke away for the score with his team short-handed two men.

In another league game, the short - handed Providence Reds, with general-manager Terry Reardon taking a turn at a forward post, scored two goals in the final three minutes to defeat Buffalo Bisons 5-3.

Jackie Not Candidate For Manager's Job

NEW YORK (AP)—Jack Robinson, the first Negro to play major league baseball in the United States, said Wednesday his fellow players and the country's fans are ready to accept the first Negro manager but he isn't a candidate for the job and he isn't sure there is a man ready to fit the part.

"We will have a Negro manager eventually," said Robinson "and it will be the finest thing that could happen to baseball when it comes."

Brooklyn's 36-year-old versatile veteran, who cracked baseball's color line in 1947, ruled himself out as a candidate when he added: "It would take an awful lot of persuasion to get me to take the job."

Robinson will wind up a speaking tour at Louisville, Ky., for the National Conference of Christians and Jews. He then goes to Florida to train for his ninth season of major league play.

Chataway Will Try for Olympics; Mile 'Wide Open'

MONTREAL (CP)—Chris Chataway, Britain's red-haired distance runner, said Wednesday he will try for the 1956 British Olympic team, with his eyes on the 5,000-metre race but he won't forget the mile, either. He thinks the mile at Melbourne will be "wide open."

Chataway arrived by air in Montreal en route to Toronto where he will be a guest tonight at the sports celebrities dinner.

Chataway wouldn't hazard a guess as to the three leading milers in the next Olympics. He said several may be contenders, although Roger Bannister, who first broke four minutes, will not compete and Australia's John Landy is still a question mark so far as trying for the Aussie team is concerned.

Chataway said Brian Hewson of England has done 4:05 and that Ian Boyd of Oxford is coming along great. Derek Johnson is another Briton Chataway likes.

Indians Lose To Dutchies 3-1; Finish Fourth

KITCHENER (CP) — Stratford Indians lost their last chance to finish in third place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A standings when they dropped a 3-1 decision to Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen before 3,746 fans here Wednesday night.

Dutchies, who clinched first place more than a week ago, will play either Owen Sound or Windsor Bulldogs in the semi-finals.

The Dutchmen came from behind in a well-played game. George Aitken fired a 30-footer from left wing to give the Indians the only goal of the first period.

Jack McKenzie tied it up with the Indians playing shorthanded in the second. Dutchies went in front less than five minutes later when Jim Logan's pass from behind the net deflected into the Stratford goal off Bruce Dale.

Each team had eight minor penalties.

FIGHTER RECOVERING

AREZZO, Italy (AP) — Doctors said Wednesday Italy's deaf-mute bantamweight champion, Mario d'Agata, would recover from 23 shotgun wounds and fight again.

D'Agata, a contender for the world 118 - pound title, was peppered with shotgun pellets and his mother also was wounded in an argument last Saturday. Giovanni Petitto, 59-year-old Sicilian manager of a laundry here in which the young boxer has an interest, is being held by police.

Doctors wouldn't say how soon the 29-year-old Italian could fight again. Recovery was attributed to "a remarkable constitution."

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Jockey Club has come up with a plan that may make daily double betting in Ontario one decisive operation.

The OJC said it will seek Ontario government approval of a plan to have bettors buy one ticket before the first race covering both races.

Under the present government regulations, bettors must buy a double ticket on the first race and then exchange their winning ticket for their choice in the second race.

Bettors win the daily double when they have a ticket on the winners of the first two races.

Russ Watch Penticton V's In Action

BERLIN (Reuters)—The Soviet world hockey championship team may watch Canada's Penticton Vs play a return game here Friday against a Canadian-Swedish-German side, West Berlin sports officials said today.

The officials said other Russians were keen spectators Wednesday night when Penticton beat an international side 11-4.

Referring to published reports Wednesday that his team has been beefing about accommodations here, Glen Bird, manager of the Canadian team, told Reuters today that his men are satisfied with their living conditions in West Berlin and "I have no idea where a contradictory report can have originated."

Berliner Morgenpost says the Canadians displayed hockey "as Berlin has not seen it for decades."

Actors, Actresses Making Switch to TV in Droves

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP) — In these days of television the actresses and actors who for years held the airwaves in radio's leading dramas are making the switch to TV in droves.

But while TV has its appeals for many it can't hold a candle to the more frequent roles, steady income and easier pace of radio acting, says one veteran radio actress.

"There are no ulcers in radio," says Elspeth Eric, who averages eight shows a week on CBS radio, including Gangbusters, 21st Precinct and Young Dr. Malone.

RADIO EASIER

She says her eight radio shows a week are easier than one a week on TV, and leave her more time to herself. She speaks from experience, having put in occasional TV appearances on Studio One, Danger and in soap operas.

While she still prefers sound broadcasting for herself, she concedes it's not like the good old days from the mid-30s to the mid-40s which she believes was the golden age of radio.

For those who really wanted to coin the money, she says, it wasn't too difficult to obtain roles on five to six shows a day.

Though the pasture isn't as green now, Miss Eric thinks radio still has it all over TV's costuming, makeup, memorizing and long rehearsals, and less-frequent roles.

The recent upheaval in the Soviet hierarchy gives added timeliness to Television Playhouse's NBC telecast this coming Sunday of "The Assassin," based on the slaying of Leon Trotsky in Mexico City in 1940.

Tuneful Rosemary Clooney, now on CBS radio Thursday nights, also will be heard Tuesday nights starting Feb. 22.

Dancer Shirley Maclaine will sub for the ailing Betty Grable in tonight's Shower of Stars on CBS Television. . . . Johnny Desmond, long-time regular on Breakfast Club on ABC Radio and TV, starts a new weekly radio program on Mutual Saturday morning.

ADVANCE FOR THURS.FEB.17.

Red Sox Sign Players

BOSTON (AP)—The signing of pitchers Truman Clevenger and Al Curtis and outfielder Al van Alstyne was announced today by Boston Red Sox.

Clevenger, a 22-year-old righthander, had a 2-4 record with the Sox last year.

Curtis, a righthander, had only a 3-5 with Louisville in the American Association last season, but looked good in the playoffs.

Walter Hampden at 75 Leads Vigorous Career in Theatre

By BOB THOMAS

Not Walter Hampden. At 75 he is leading a vigorous career in movies, TV and the theatre. And as a sideline he is learning Spanish.

The distinguished actor is here to play King Louis XI in "The Vagabond King," and I caught up with him at lunch to learn about his carer, past and present. I found him still strikingly handsome and more nimble-witted than actors half his age.

"I came out expecting to play the king as a mean old codget who was too stingy to pay money for fancy clothes," he related. "That's how he has always been played. But they fitted me for some beautiful costumes that weigh 30 pounds and make me look like Henry VIII.

"I asked the director, Mike Curtiz, about it. 'Waltie,' he said, 'just play him as your own charming self.'"

CONCERNED WITH FUTURE

Hampden couldn't be more pleased. At this phase in his career, he wants to branch into more light comedy, such as he did so delightfully in "Sabrina."

Because of his faultless diction and because he came here from the English stage, some people presume Hampden is British. Actually Hampden grew up in Brooklyn but went to England to lose his Brooklyn accent.

He enrolled in a repertory company and played a juvenile opposite an English beauty named Mabel Moore. Their love scenes became real ones. This summer they will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary.

'CYRANO' FAMOUS ROLE

After his seasoning on the English stage, he returned to the United States to become one of the bright stars of the American theatrm His most famous role was "Cyrano de Bergerac," which he played more than 1,000 times.

"I generally had my own company," he said. "I've always done what I've wanted to do. I'm not wealthy by any means, but I don't have to work unless I want to."

It's plain he wants to. Except for last season, he has generally been in a New York play every year. He has done 20 TV plays, including all of the top dramatic shows. And he's a regular commuter to Hollywood for film roles.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Take a peek at the hand your partner shows when he makes his first response to your opening one bid. You can do so mentally if you are familiar with the meaning of a responding bid.

♠A Q J 9
♥10 9 6
♣A 5

Suppose your partner responds at once with a bid of two spades. What do you see in this hand? What is he telling you to do? What are you required to do after you get this information?

The fact that he bid at all shows that he has more than the two tricks you assumed he might have. The fact that he bid at all admits that he has two high cards and at least one more trick.

The fact that he did not first bid a suit of his own shows that he does not have a biddable suit of his own in hearts or diamonds or clubs. Because a takeout to a suit is preferred to an assist.

The fact that he assisted your suit shows that he has adequate support. This means three spades of which one is a queen or higher; or any four cards in that suit. If only three he will have the king.

The fact that he did not jump to four spades says he does not have as many as five tricks. The fact that he did not jump to three spades says he does not have five tricks with two sure tricks.

Thus, you have deduced that he must have at least three tricks and not more than four tricks; that he lacks a biddable trump suit of his own; that he may have a no-trump bid not yet shown.

Only a jump bid or a takeout to a new suit forces you to bid again. Thus, any second bid you make here is voluntary and would show something more than your opening has also revealed.

No more takeouts. No more tricks for a raise to three spades. No more than the four high card no-trump tricks your opening showed. So, you pass. Reconcile yourself to it.

AT THE CAPITOL — "The Bob Mathias Story" — Bob Mathias, Ward Bond — 7.10-10.20 — In Technicolor, "Rich, Young and Pretty" — Jane Powell, Danielle Darrieux, Vic Damone — 8.40.

AT THE McCARTHY — "Prince Valiant" — CinemaScope and Technicolor — James Mason, Janet Leigh, Robert Walker — 2.20-7.20-9.22.

AT THE McCARTHY — Robert Wagner and Janet Leigh recreate to life, the Viking hero "Prince Valiant" and his beautiful "Aleta", Princess of the Misty Isles, in Twentieth Century-Fox's filmization of Hal Foster's famed comic strip. The CinemaScope spectacle in Technicolor which opens today at the McCarthy Theatre, also stars James Mason, Debra Paget and Sterling Hayden in the lively adventures that are set in the days when knighthood was in flower.

AT THE BELLE — Jane Powell and Howard Keel, join their singing voices for the first time in MGM's new CinemaScope musical in color, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, starting today at the Belle Theatre. The tune-filled musical unfolds the hilarious story of a family of Oregon back-woodsmen who abduct the prettiest girls of a neighboring village with explosive results!

AT THE CAPITOL — Few screen debuts have caused as much excitement as that of young Vic Damone, introduced to film audiences in MGM's Technicolor musical, "Rich, Young and Pretty", now at the Capitol Theatre. Damone, whose spectacular climb in the music world has already established him as one of the nation's top celebrities, plays the role as Jane Powell's singing and romancing partner in the new picture which offers a flock of new song hits. On the same program a true story "The Bob Mathias Story" starring the great athlete himself.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

For Friday, Feb. 18, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Could speed things up within reason so you'd have more time for improving a talent, hobby or getting in some good reading over weekend. But don't neglect details, little niceties.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Fairly encouraging for new (needed) undertakings but don't delay matters already started and waiting completion. Will be wise to get things arranged to start new week with freer hand.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Stimulating rays especially for mental alertness, analysis, survey of propositions for future exploitation, systemized execution. Salesmanship should be strong; keep temper calm.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Ideal indications for pleasant work, agreeable situations which could bring fresh advantages. Urgent building, such as housing projects; mining; manufacturing can advance.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—While a day holds promise, stimulus for industrial trades and honorable work generally, you are reminded not to go to extremes nor take risky chances with capital, other assets or talents.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Optimism in the air, and it is well if not used blindly or to hide defects or poor managing. Make progressive tries improvements. Right effort will advance you,

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—New worth-while things, trades, business ventures, professions requiring mental acumen, skilled labor all have beneficial influences. Good day for study, teaching, religious interests.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Let clients, customers employers, employes know your fine plans, ideas, propositions that can encourage better business, sound finances, but in enthusiasm don't override others' wishes.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Justify others' faith in your ability, your smart way to manage groups of people, big propositions or small but important matters. A day for your very best showing.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Adaptability and talent are inherent in true-to-type Capricorn and there are many avenues leading to achievement for you to release these valuable assets. Try afresh now, today.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Day has many advantages, is at least fairly profitable for the quiet steady worker as well as the more outstanding perfectionist. Let not difficult tasks stump you.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Could well be period of unusual attainment, in a sound business way, in plain everyday activities and occupational work, in domestic interests, in any and all worthy efforts.

YOU BORN TODAY: Friendly nature, kind; inclined to be variable, not always as ambitious as should be. Once you realize your great possibilities and your failings, you should determine to take quick steady advantage of your good qualities, shut out hindering ones, and advance rapidly. Make excellent teachers, promoter of humane enterprises, do well in science, law or in a business or work where patience, cooperation and attention to detail are essential. Can be shrewd bargainer, thrifty economizer; are progressive. Be careful not to become penurious. Pray always for guidance. Birthdate of Paganini, famous violinist; Chas. Schwab, industrialist; Jimmy Durante, comedian.

Little Benny's Notebook

I was taking a walk with pop before dinner and asking him about diffrent subjects such as why peeple would rather have an accident in an automobeel than in an airplane, and a little fat lady came up almost crying and talking to herself, saying, Oh my little boy, my poor sweet little boy, he's lost, what am I going to do?

Dont worry, madam, he's probably in good hands, pop said, and the lady said, Oh my goodness, whose hands?

I meen the police have probably taken care of him, pop said, and the lady said, Oh dear, the big ruff policemen. The darling little chap will be so frightened, he's so nerviss and sensitive, he's not used to big berly policemen, she said.

None of us are, madam, but they'll see that you get him back, pop said, and the lady said, He promised to wait outside the market and never budge, oh my little angel boy.

I wish I could help you, madam, but I dont see what I can do, pop said, and she said, It's all my fault, I should of known he was too little and helpless to be left alone. Oh, there he is. Peedro, Peedro boy, come to mamma, she said.

Meening a little bit of a dog running tords her with no hair and hardly any legs, and she picked him up and started to kiss him, and me and pop kept on going, pop saying, Her boy, yee gods her little boy.

Well G, pop, maybe she only meant it wasn't a gerl dog, I said, and pop said, For Peet sake lets change the subject.

Which we did, talking about money and how the most unexpected way to get it is to find it.

Sudbury Leads Schoolboy Spiel

SUDBURY (CP)—Hugh Chesser of Sudbury, skip of last year's northern Ontario schoolboy curling champions, has a stranglehold on this year's title.

Chesser skipped his quartet to three consecutive victories Wednesday in the first day's play of the double round-robin competition for the northern Ontario championship and the Allan McNiece Austin Memorial Trophy.

Terry Justice's Noranda, Que., rink, which came through the first day with one victory and one defeat, and Carl Konefal's Port Arthur foursome, which has no victories against three losses, are the other entries in the finals.

Chesser's group posted two victories over Konefal and one over Justice Wednesday to keep its record clean. Justice's only victory was over Konefal.

The Sudbury rink started off the day with an 1-8 victory over the Port Arthur quartet. Noranda downed Port Arthur 9-3 in the second game and Sudbury edged Noranda 8-5 in the third contest. Chesser's 8-6, extra-end win over Konefal ended the day's activity.

Justice meets Konefal in the first round today and takes on Chesser in the afternoon. If the Noranda rink wins both those games it will be tied with Sudbury and a playoff would have to be held later in the day.

Vic Seixas Postpones Plans For Retirement

NEW YORK (AP)—U.S. champion Vic Seixas is postponing retirement plans for one more tour of the world tennis circuit and defence of the Davis Cup.

Interviewed Wednesday, he said: "When I decide to quit it will be a quick, clean swipe. I won't do it halfway and after I make the move I'll play strictly for laughs.

"I have been thinking seriously of stepping out to devote more time to the family's plumbing-equipment business in Philadelphia. But now I've decided on one more year of bigtime tennis."

Seixas, 31, and his Davis Cup mate, Tony Trabert, arrived in New York by air Wednesday from the Pacific coast. They had punctuated their return trip from Australia with a two-week stay in Honolulu where they were joined by their wives.

Seixas and Trabert wrested the cup from the Australians last December.

Despite their defeats in the Australian national championship, won by Australia's Ken Rosewall, the two boldly predicted Uncle Sam would be able to beat back the Australian bid in the Davis Cup challenge round.

Committee To Deal With Willie Pep Case

MILWAUKEE (CP)—A National Boxing Association official said today the ring future of Willie Pep is too big an issue for one man to decide. He said the decision might split the NBA and the New York state athletic commission.

Fred Saddy, chairman of the NBA's grievance and suspension committee, said he was turning the Pep case over to the NBA's executive committee.

The veteran Pep, former world featherweight champion, was suspended by the New York commission last February on the ground that he was not in condition to fight again. The NBA recognizes New York suspensions. Pep, 32, appealed to the NBA.

Saddy said two thorough physical examinations convinced him that Pep is in fine condition.

"I still contend Pep can lick 80 per cent of the featherweights today," he said, "and personally I will vote to reinstate him.

"But a decision as important as this, which may cause a break between the NBA and New York, should be the responsibility of the NBA executive committee."

EX-POLICEMAN FINED

LINDSAY (CP) — A former Toronto policeman Wednesday was convicted here of impersonating a police officer, assaulting a police officer and having liquor in a place other than his residence. Edgar Bailey, now a Toronto real estate agent, was fined a total of $84 and costs. Bailey resigned from the Toronto force in 1951.

Frost Accuses Leader of Twis

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost Thursday night accused Liberal Leader Farquhar Oliver of twisting the facts in the highways irregularities issue and of making public statements which "had n real foundation in fact."

Speaking in defence of the government and the majority report of a select legislature committee which investigated irregularities the department, the premier sai it will soon be revealed that th province did not lose $1 in improper payments.

Mr. Frost said in the legislatu the amount of money made overpayments by the governme in seven roads contracts totalle

Senator Asks Tax Check On Farmers

OTTAWA (CP)—The government was asked Wednesday to use some of its income tax inspectors in Saskatchewan to check on possible tax delinquents among farmers in Ontario, Quebec and other provinces.

Senator Walter Aseltine (PC—Saskatchewan) made the proposal in the Senate after stating that Saskatchewan farmers in 1952 paid $13,268,000 in income taxes, compared with $27,465,000 paid by all farmers in Canada. He also said that the amount of tax paid by farmers in the three prairie provinces in 1952 was six times the total for the rest of Canada.

"I wish that the department (of national revenue) would release some of our 50 (Saskatchewan) inspectors to go to Ontario, Quebec and other provinces and see what they could find down there."

Senator Aseltine said Newfoundland farmers paid no tax in 1952. Farmers in Prince Edward Island paid $70,000, Nova Scotia $40,000, New Brunswick $66,000, Quebec $233,000, Ontario $2,647,000, Manitoba $1,707,00, Alberta $8,35,000 and British Columbia $1,075,000.

Too Late For Idle Luxury Of Debating

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Health Minister Paul Martin said Wednesday the threat of atomic attack on Canada is too great to permit the "idle luxury of debating" whether federal, provincial or municipal governments should pay for civil defence.

"The danger is so large that it clearly and inevitably involves us all," he told the Brockville Junior Chamber of Commerce. He added:

"It may well be that the hydrogen bomb will prove to be our best insurance against the possibility of another war."

If it didn't, "We must be ready to meet the full weight of enemy attack."

"There is still much to be done before civil defence preparations in Canada will have reached a satisfactory level."

The statements were included in the text of a speech issued to the press before delivery.

Commons Debates Conservation Of Resources With No Results

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons has debated resources conservation for 3½ hours with no apparent concrete results.

In Wednesday's half - day set aside for private members' resolutions, H. W Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) for the fourth time in four years asked for a Dominion-provincial conference on water, soil and forest conservation.

The resolution was rejected by two cabinet members. Resources Minister Lesage said responsibility for initiating such a conference rests with the provinces. Agriculture Minister Gardiner said the Liberal government always has had a national conservation policy.

"Talked out" when adjournment time came, the resolution reverted to the bottom of a lengthy list of members' motions, probably doomed not to come up again this session.

Today marks the return to Parliament Hill of Hon. George Drew, Opposition leader now recovered from an attack of meningitis which hit him last November.

Mr. Herridge said governments pay lip service to conservation but their actions are limited and unrelated. Exploitation and neglect of natural resources continued.

Canada in 1953 had spent $30,000,000 on conservation compared with $2,000,000,000 by the United States. This country could well afford to spend at least $180,000,000 a year.

Mr. Lesage said the central government would be glad to cooperate if the desire for a resources conference by the provinces was "broad enough."

Meanwhile, he hoped the Commons standing committee on natural resources, which has not met for many years, would be established at this session to study a bill he will sponsor. He did not describe the measure.

Mr. Gardiner said the government has aided the provinces in insect and stream control and soil conservation.

John B. Hamilton, (PC — York West) said Mr. Lesage's statement that the federal government must wait for the provinces to initiate a conference is "a feeble excuse to pass the buck."

John Hallett (PC—Peel) asked the government not to "shilly-shally behind the facade" of Dominion-provincial rights.

Canada Third Greatest Trader In World

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—Through the energy and initiative of her people Canada has emerged from debit-nation status to the third greatest trader in the world, E. J Cosford, president and managing director of Canadian Car and Foundry Co., said Wednesday night.

The per capita external trade of this country is three times that of the United States, said Mr. Cosford in addressing the annual meeting of the Fort William Chamber of Commerce.

Canada's emergence as one of the great middle powers of the century has been so amazing, he said, that proportionately even the tremendous strides made by the United States almost become insignificant.

A resume of Mr. Cosford's remarks was released to the press in advance.

Canadian forests supplied more than 80 per cent of newsprint for the press of North America. Canada led the world's output of nickel, asbestos, the platinum metals and other minerals and products.

Canada's retail trade was well beyond $10,000,000,000 in 1951, more than three times the 1941 figure, but the population didn't increase threefold in that period.

Describing the Lakehead district as one of the great trans-shipping points of the world, Mr. Cosford said he believes the Lakehead, as the natural crossroads between east and west, will become even more important in the Canadian economic scheme of things.

Scoharie

Schoharie — A number of young people attended a charivari for Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Hagerman Wednesday.

Mrs. John McGee and Miss Ann McGee were Thursday supper guests of Mrs. M. S. Whitten, Mt. Pleasant.

Several from here attended Junior Farmer "Parents Night" at Bloomfield Sunday School rooms Friday evening.

Nancy and Carolyn Hubbs spent the weekend with their grandmother, Mrs. John McGee.

Mrs. Blaine Foster spent a couple of days in town with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McWilliam, owing to her father's illness.

Messrs. Theodore and Harry Foster attended funeral services for their uncle, Mr. William Hagerman at Stirling United Church Monday afternoon.

Nervous, Tired, Rundown, Headaches, Stomach Rebelled

Miss Margaret Hughes, 526 Talbot St., London, Ont., Said in a Recent Report:

"About two years ago I had a nervous breakdown and was in a very rundown condition. I could not sleep as my nerves were so on edge and I would get up mornings feeling exhausted and worn out. What food I ate would not digest properly, but caused awful gas, indigestion and sour acid risings. I was subject to throbbing headaches and constipation.

TRIED MANY THINGS

"I took all sort of medicines that were recommended to me for nervousness, but nothing helped me. Then a few weeks ago my father suggested that I try Syntona. So, I got some and from the first few doses my stomach felt better. I was so encouraged that I kept right on taking it, now I am delighted with the improvement in my health. My nerves are calmed down. I sleep well at night, and have no trouble with headaches or constipation. My food digests so much better."

Syntona produces these results without the aid of harsh drugs. It is made from the Purest Herbs and Roots that have long been known for their medicine value. Syntona is pleasant to take and results are quickly felt.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by Dolan The Druggist.

Hon. George Drew Returns to House After Illness

By JOHN LeBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Hon. George Drew returns to the Commons today as the head of its official opposition, declaring himself ready for day-after-day action following recovery from a rugged illness.

Mr. Drew is to take his seat in the House directly opposite Prime Minister St. Laurent at 2:30 p.m. EST for the first time at this session of Parliament, which opened Jan. 7.

The 60-year-old chief of the Progressive Conservative party told reporters Wednesday night he expects to be on deck every day from now on but probably will take it easy for a while.

Mr. Drew, party leader since late 1948, has been kept from the Commons by a meningitis attack which struck him Nov. 11. Party House leader up to now has been Hon. Earl Rowe, Dufferin-Simcoe.

Mr. Drew Wednesday walked into an informal gathering of newspaper men, stepped over a tangle of television cables and pronounced:

LOOKED UNCHANGED

"I feel as good as I look—a little better, I guess."

The general impression of reporters who have known him for years was that he looked about as usual. He appeared to have taken on a little more color in the face but he looked unchanged otherwise.

As to his future in the rough-and-tumble in the Commons:

"I'm going to be in the House each day from now on. But, mind you, I'm not going to crowd myself too much at the start.

"You know, things have been going on very well without me."

He said this with a nod towards Mr. Rowe, sitting on the sidelines.

New St. Gregory's Separate School Officially Opened

PICTON — The new St. Gregory's Separate school here was officially opened yesterday afternoon with impressive ceremony. Two new rooms were added to the former school which was completely renovated inside. C. P. O'Neill, superintendent of Elementary Separate Schools for the Province of Ontario officially opened the school.

Most Rev. J.A. O'Sullivan, Archbishop of Kingston, commended the school board on its work. Paying tribute to Premier Frost he stated "he is the finest Premier this province ever had, and he is trying to solve our problems, especially as they concern education."

C. P. Matthews, Inspector of Separate Schools, said since 1910 there had been built 109 Separate school classrooms and many more are in the planning stage. "The welfare of children should be uppermost in our minds," he said.

Mr. O'Neill said in 1954 the Province had spent 31 million dollars on elementary schools; of that amount $8,273,000 was spent for Separate schools. 443 Separate school classrooms out of a total of 1,000 were constructed last year, he stated. Mr. O'Neill urged parents to direct thinking of the children towards the teaching profession where there is great need.

M. J. Finnegan, chairman of the board, presided. Others who spoke were Norris Whitney, MPP, Mayor H. J. McFarland, the contractor who erected the fine building, and H. L. Knight, inspector of Public schools for Prince Edward County, County Warden Murney Parks and Rev. J. G. Clancy, Parish Priest. The school children contributed musical numbers.

CUT TOBACCO ACREAGE

SIMCOE (CP) — Acreage to be allotted to Ontario flue-cured tobacco growers for the 1955 crop year will be 70 per cent of the base acreage, it was announced Wednesday. During 1954 growers were allowed full base acreage, but the Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Growers' Association board decided at a meeting Wednesday the 70 per cent would produce sufficient tobacco to meet domestic and export requirements.

The 200-page majority report admitted there were improper practices in the highways department but said the conditions referred to no longer existed. It blamed the contract troubles, investigated during the last 18 months, on the late C. H. Nelson, former chief engineer of the department, who died last August.

The report, signed by eight Progressive Conservative members, cleared George Doucett, former highways minister, and J. D. Millar, former deputy minister, of any part in the irregularities.

One Paratrooper Is Killed, Six Hurt in Army Exercise

CALGARY (CP)—Death struck a military dress rehearsal on the prairie outside Calgary Thursday when a Korean war veteran hurtled 1,000 feet to a frozen lake after his parachute failed to open properly.

The army said 24-year-old Pte. Donald Lesley Mason of Victoria and Calgary was killed instantly. Six of his paratrooper companions were injured in the jump over frozen Lloyd lake 14 miles south of here.

Mason had no chance to release the reserve parachute and dropped like a stone.

Army authorities withheld the names of the injured pending notification of next-of-kin. Their injuries were described as minor.

JUMP "NORMAL"

Four RCAF Flying Boxcars dropped "well over 100 men" from the 1st Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, in what was a rehearsal for Bull Dog III, the sub-Arctic exercise opening later this month.

Army officers said jumping conditions were "completely normal." A jump planned for this morning was to go ahead as scheduled if weather permits.

Capt. F. T. Harris of Kingston, Ont., with the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, made the jump in the same "stick" as Mason but from another plane. Capt. Harris, a veteran of 27 jumps, said:

"The wind at 1,000 feet was between 15 and 20 miles an hour but as we got near the dropping zone the wind dropped off sharply. It was no more than six miles an hour at the ground.

"Everything in the operation was very, very smooth. There didn't seem to be anything wrong. I had no idea a man in my stick had been killed.

"The landing was quite good. Snow covering the ice cushioned the fall. I had no idea anyone was injured. I saw the ambulance but went directly to my grouping point which was in an opposite direction from where the man fell."

In the supply drop which followed the company's jump two 'chutes on equipment parcels did not open.

Barrie Couple Find Bad Luck Works Overtime

BARRIE (CP) — It never rains . . .

Construction worker Ken Griffin, 39, suffered a crushed hand Thursday when it was caught in a cement mixer.

Death Accident Jury Verdict

MONTREAL (CP) — The father of 2½-year-old Richard Guibeau said Thursday that it was impossible for his son to wander more than a mile and a half from his home to the desolate field where his frozen body was found Tuesday after one of the city's biggest police searches.

"It's inconceivable that my boy walked that distance through all that snow," Mr. Guibeau told a coroner's inquest. "Someone must have taken him there."

The jury, however, ruled the death accidental and a medico-legal expert and a veteran detective testified the child could have walked the distance.

Rail Commuter Fares Increased

OTTAWA (CP) —Increases of about 50 per cent in railway commuter fares for all areas of Canada except Toronto were authorized today by the board of transport commissioners.

The increases will be mainly effective on the Montreal district's big commuter traffic. An increase was obtained last year for the Toronto area. Elsewhere, commuter business is small.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: While mainly sunny weather will prevail over southern Ontario today, clouds have spread across much of the far north ahead of a disturbance drifting through the central states. Southerly winds ahead of the disturbance kept overnight temperatures in northwestern Ontario well up in the 20s, and this moderating trend will gradually progress across the rest of the province today and Saturday. With the approach of this mid-western low pressure area clouds will edge across the province from the west late today and tonight, followed by rain in southern regions, snow in the far north, and a mixture in central sections.

CHRYSLER UNION VOTES TO STRIKE NEXT WEDNESDAY

Negotiations However Will Be Resumed

WINDSOR (CP) — Negotiations between the Chrysler Corporation of Canada and the United Automobile Workers (CIO-CCL) were scheduled to resume early today to avert a strike of 7,500 workers at the huge automotive plant here.

Today's talks between company and union leaders were arranged after the union announced suddenly Thursday it will call a strike at the Chrysler plants at 6 a.m. EST Wednesday unless a contract dispute is settled before that time.

George Burt, Canadian director of the UAW, said the decision to set the strike deadline was taken at a meeting of the stewards and committeemen of the Chrysler unit of UAW's Local 195.

He said the union meeting agreed that negotiations with the company over the long-standing contract dispute were not progressing satisfactorily.

VOTED STRIKE

A poorly-attended general membership meeting of the Chrysler workers last Saturday voted authority to call a strike to the union executive. According to a union spokesman, 88 per cent of the 1,800 workers at the meeting were in favor of the strike motion.

Walter Reuther, international president of the UAW, earlier this week approved the calling of the strike if the union negotiators thought it necessary.

Company officials have maintained a tight silence except to say their negotiating team was ready to meet with the union spokesmen.

The union is seeking a 15-cent hourly wage boost, plus fringe benefits including higher hospital and medical payments and more holidays.

They are also demanding a revised seniority program, improved job transfer and job posting practices and a new apprenticeship plan.

Offered $3,000 Weekly to Allow Pin Ball Games

MONTREAL (CP) — Chairman Pierre Desmarais of the city executive committee said Thursday he has been offered as much as $3,000 a week to allow the operation of pinball machines.

Mr. Desmarais also told of being offered $25,000 prior to the civic elections last October to refrain from discussing pinball machines, and of receiving a similar offer after the elections to take necessary steps to enact legislation permitting their operation.

"I was later offered $3,000 per week to allow their operation. When I declined to accept, I was offered $3 per machine and, when you figure out that there are about 4,600 in the city, this means quite a tidy income.'

Britain Negotiating for Purchase Of Guided Missiles from States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain, with much of her guided-missile program still in the development stage, has been talking with the United States about buying some American weapons.

The talks, still in preliminary phases, involve the U. S. Army's Corporal missile, a defence department spokesman said in answer to a reporter's inquiries.

There has been speculation that the Corporal can strike with effective accuracy up to 40 or 50 miles. Artillery covers up to 30 miles with big guns.

The spokesman said published reports that the British government already has purchased some other American missiles appeared premature, adding that the only missile involved so far is the Corporal and that in that case negotiations are only in the discussion stage.

The Corporal can be equipped with either a standard explosive warhead or an atomic charge. Its speed is something over 2,000 miles an hour, several times the speed of sound and far too fast for interception by any existing planes.

It starts out propelled by a rocket motor. During its flight a guidance system takes control to steer the missile toward its precise target.

It is assumed here that British interest in the weapon is for possible defensive use against a cross-Channel invasion attempt. Similarly, the weapon could be as useful for British as for American forces in defence of lines in Western Europe against Russian attack.

Frost Accuses Opposition Leader of Twisting Facts

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost Thursday night accused Liberal Leader Farquhar Oliver of twisting the facts in the highways irregularities issue and of making public statements which "had no real foundation in fact."

Speaking in defence of the government and the majority report of a select legislature committee which investigated irregularities in the department, the premier said it will soon be revealed that the province did not lose $1 in improper payments.

Mr. Frost said in the legislature the amount of money made in overpayments by the government in seven roads contracts totalled $1,400,000. But the amount was covered by credits held by the government with the companies or by claims with bonding companies.

A minority report, submitted by three opposition members, including Mr. Oliver, also was tabled. The other opposition members were W. J. Grummett (CCF—Cochrane South) and Albert Wren (Lib-Lab—Kenora).

The minority report said that "the evidence before us showed two alarming facts, that there had been overruns on contracts from 1949 to 1952 of $28,332,401 and that a substantial part of these overruns were the result of plans to defraud the government. The most important part of our work should have been to unmask everyone who was a party to these frauds.'

The 200-page majority report admitted there were improper practices in the highways department but said the conditions referred to no longer existed. It blamed the contract troubles, investigated during the last 18 months, on the late C. H. Nelson, former chief engineer of the department, who died last August.

The report, signed by eight Progressive Conservative members, cleared George Doucett, former highways minister, and J. D. Millar, former deputy minister, of any part in the irregularities.

A. Kelso Roberts (PC—Toronto St. Patrick), chairman of the committee, said:

"There was not one bit of evidence that anyone waxed fat on the province. There was not one tittle of evidence of bribery or corruption. There were practices that were improper, true, but not for gain by any one official."

The minority members charged in their 22-page report that the Frost government was responsible for frauds and accused the government majority on the committee of blocking a proper investigation. Their report called for the appointment of a royal commission to launch a new investigation of the department.

Belief Grows in Washington Chinese Reds Will Strike

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The next move in the Formosa crisis is up to the Red Chinese. More and more American officials are coming around to the view that the Reds may make it with military force.

The importance of what the Reds may do overshadows a rift between the United States and Britain over the Quemoy, Matsus and other coastal islands.

With British support, the U. S. has established a firm line in defence of Formosa. Beyond this, Washington has in effect said it will fight a Chinese Communist assault on any of the off-shore islands if President Eisenhower decides the move is aimed at conquest of Formosa. Britain, however, holds that Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists should give up the islands and pull back to Formosa.

In this situation, the Communists have to decide whether they will try to take over either the coastal islands or Formosa itself by military means or by diplomatic manoeuvre. Under present circumstances, if they try by military means in either case it seems certain they will confront at the least a limited war with the U. S.

Several months ago the Chinese Reds began stepping up their threats to capture Formosa.

Furthermore, diplomats here have heard, they have privately told Burmese and Indian leaders they intend to take Formosa this year.

These private boasts, coupled with increasingly strong public stands, are regarded as going beyond normal propaganda in such a situation. In effect, the Chinese Communist leaders are nailing themselves to a program of force.

British officials are convinced that the Soviet Union is trying to use its influence to keep Red China from precipitating a big war in the Formosa area. But neither they nor American leaders have any confidence that the Reds will not engage in some kind of military action, although the U. S. has indicated it would bargain on the coastal islands if the Reds were willing to renounce efforts to take Formosa by force.

Phone Wire-Tapping Centre Raided by New York Police

NEW YORK (AP)—A mysterious big telephone wire-tapping centre, capable of eavesdropping on phone conversations over much of midtown Manhattan's business and residential area, reportedly has been raided by police.

However, police authorities remained strangely silent on the matter long after accounts first appeared in newspapers.

For a time various high officials disclaimed any knowledge, but finally it was announced that police commissioner Francis W. H. Adams would make a statement later today.

Newspapers say the raid was disclosed in a memorandum submitted to state legislative leaders in Albany by the New York City anti-crime committee, a private organization.

Purpose of the memorandum, it is said, was to show that unauthorized wire-tapping of telephones here now is so widespread that new legislation is required to curb it.

Newspaper stories say the raid was inspired by disclosures that the murdered Serge Rubinstein, financial wizard slain in his luxurious Fifth avenue mansion, made wide use of taps to get information for his market manipulations.

The raid was carried out last Friday by a police squad headed by a high-ranking officer. They crashed into an apartment on East 54th St. to find two men and two women operating tap equipment valued at $10,000.

So complex was the setup that the tappers could hear phone conversations anywhere from 36th street to 96th street on the east side of Manhattan.

This area includes many plush Fifth avenue stores, some of the world's most exclusive residential sections and offices of many huge business concerns.

Ten active wiretaps were in progress at the time of the raid. Many others had been recorded on tape earlier. It was not brought out just what the conversations concerned.

Two of those in the apartment were telephone company employees, it was said, who were immediately suspended for unauthorized use of company equipment.

None of the four was arrested by the raiders, but no reason was given for the failure to do so. Wire-tapping is illegal in New York state without court permission.

POPULATION UP 25 PC. IN SEVEN YEARS HOUSE TOLD

Pickersgill Answers Critics of Immigration

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Pickersgill thinks Canada has been taking in immigrants about as fast as it can.

That was his reply in the Commons Thursday to an Opposition charge that the government is "planning for a little Canada" because of reduced immigration in the last two years.

Mr. Pickersgill said Canada's population has risen 25 per cent to 15,000,000 in seven years since May, 1947. Counting 250,000 Newfoundlanders added by Confederation "it is a very rapid rate of growth indeed."

"I question very much whether it could have been much faster," he said in his first Commons speech on the subject since taking over the department last summer.

REPLIES TO FULTON

His reply was to Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) who touched off opposition criticism of immigration policy and practice Tuesday with a motion of non-confidence in the government. The debate continues today.

Mr. Pickersgill's two-hour speech did nothing to take the sting out of opposition criticism.

John Diefenbaker (PC — Prince Albert), speaking after him, accused the immigration department of arrogance, abuse of authority and bungling. He described its operations as "uncontrolled despotism of unknown bureaucrats sitting in a star chamber."

He attacked departmental practice of not making public the reasons for rejecting would-be immigrants. There was bound to be some injustice and bumbling in the department but "it is the first time bumbling has become the cornerstone of policy."

LAW REQUIRES IT

Mr. Pickersgill replied to that and other criticisms in his extended speech.

Field Trials On New Rifle Nearly Complete

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Army hopes to complete in about two months field trials of the Belgian Fabrique Nationale .300-calibre automatic rifle, Defence Minister Campney said Thursday.

He informed Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC (PC — Esquimalt-Saanich) that his department has not yet reached any final decision on adoption of the FN to replace the Lee-Enfield .303 as the army's standard infantry weapon.

Results of the army's field trials are "very encouraging," Mr. Campney said in the Commons.

He also said conversion of production drawings of the FN to the inch system from the metric system has been successfully completed. The FN can be adapted to North American production techniques.

Britain, as well as Belgium, has adopted the FN as the standard infantry weapon for its army.

Heart-Broken Mother Discovers Husband Is Her Orphaned Brother

HEREFORD, Eng. (Reuters) — A heart-broken 24-year-old mother of two children said Thursday night that after three years of marriage she discovered her husband is her brother.

Mrs. Margaret Hughes, said she left her husband four months ago when she found out he was the brother from whom she had been separated when she was orphaned at the age of three.

Her lawyer announced that she will apply for an annulment of the marriage.

When Mrs. Hughes' parents died she and her brother Geoffrey were placed in different orphanages. Two years later she was adopted and her new parents changed her last name.

In 1948 she met a young man named Geoffrey Hughes. They were married in 1951.

Thursday night Mrs. Hughes said: "Just after the birth of my second child a woman told me my real name was Hughes.

"I went to the registrar of birth, death and marriages at once and I found to my horror that Geoffrey was my brother. . . .

"I parted from my husband the same morning. . . . Geoffrey was heart-broken, for he is devoted to the children. But we have never been together since. I don't know where he is."

Planes Take Over Attack After Ships Sink 7 Vessels

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The Chinese Nationalist air force claimed one of its bombers sank a submarine off the Red-held Taishan islands this afternoon while other planes and warships wreaked havoc on a Chinese Communist troop supply convoy.

The air force said the bomber went into a power dive and bombed and strafed the sub, scoring direct hits and causing bubbles to rise as it went down.

Panes patrolled the area for a long period but found no trace of the undersea craft.

In the same east China sea area, Nationalist warplanes and ships claimed at least 21 Red vessels sunk, with indications the battle would go on through the night.

If the Nationalist claims are confirmed, it would be the most severe defeat they have ever administered the Reds.

The ministry said the Reds lost eight landing craft, five gunboats and eight armed motorized junks, plus other unspecified craft.

The ministry said Nationalist planes also swooped down in an attack on the Red-held Taishan islands, destroying eight barracks and causing heavy Communist casualties.

A ministry spokesman said the Red flotilla was cruising southward toward the Taishans when the Nationalist warships intercepted it. After the Nationalist navy reported seven landing craft and possibly three gunboats sunk, Chiang Kai-shek's planes raced out over the sea to take on the survivors.

The sea battle erupted off the coast about 130 miles northwest of Formosa between the Nationalist northern outpost of Nanchi and Red-held Taishan island.

In the first 30 minutes of action, seven Red landing craft, each capable of carrying 200 troops, were sunk, Col. Lu Ta of the defence ministry said. He reported three of the four Red gunboats were set afire.

Lu said the small transports were loaded with troops and supplies, but he refused to speculate on their mission.

Far to the south, Communist batteries on the mainland and a nearby island hurled 90 shells at the Nationalist garrison on Quemoy earlier today. The ministry said the Red guns fell silent when Nationalist artillery roared out in answer.

The conviction is growing here that an all-out Communist attempt against Quemoy or the Matsus would create a situation as explosive as that kicked off by the Red invasion of Yikiangshan. That invasion a month ago led to Nationalist evacuation of the Tachen islands, just to the south, under protection of the U. S. 7th Fleet.

No Invitation Given

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government hasn't considered extending an invitation to Marshal Zhukov, Russian defence minister, to visit Canada, Prime Minister St. Laurent said Thursday in the Commons. He was asked by George Hees (PC — Toronto Broadview) whether such an invitation is being considered in view of the recently-appointed Zhukov's expressed desire to visit North America.

Non-Pedigreed Cow Is Judged Best Shorthorn

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP)— All the other cows looked down on Maggie. She was an orphan without a pedigree.

The five-year-old roan shorthorn won first prize in the Scottish dairy show and 3,000 farmers cheered wildly. It was the first time a non-pedigree cow had ever won the supreme championship at the old show.

The next catalogue will note "Maggie—champion, sire and dam unknown."

Senate Adopts Throne Speech Without Dissent

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate Thursday adopted without a dissenting vote the address in reply to the speech from the throne given at the opening of Parliament Jan. 7. The throne speech debate lasted 13 days.

The Commons approved the address Feb. 4 after the defeat of want-of-confidence motions proposed by the Progressive Conservative, CCF and Social Credit parties.

The seven-man Progressive Conservative Opposition in the Senate did not move any motion of non-confidence in the government.

However, Opposition leader John T. Haig, Manitoba, and his Progressive Conservative followers criticized government policies, particularly on trade and employment.

During Thursday's throne speech debate, a Liberal senator said the Chinese Communist government should be permitted membership in the United Nations along with the Chinese Nationalists.

"My personal view is that both factions should be given a seat," Senator Charles Howard, Quebec, said. "I certainly would not kick out the Formosa (Nationalist) Chinese nor would I block the acceptance of the Red Chinese."

He is the second Liberal senator to support Chinese Communist membership in the UN. Senator William Euler, Ontario, also proposed Canadian recognition of the Chinese Reds.

MEMBERS ENJOY FILM OF GAME

At a social evening held at the Army, Navy and Air Force Association clubrooms last night, the members enjoyed the technicolor film of the Grey Cup game last fall. The film was shown by Earl Salter, representative of the Dow Kingsbeer Brewing Company. The film is one of the best ever made of the fall classic and the key plays are easily discernable. The thanks of the association was expressed to Mr. Salter for his kindness.

Theatre Guild Holds Panel Discussion With Adjudicator

"A good play is one that is well constructed, well written, which uses all the aspects of the theatre and sends an audience out of the theatre feeling a little bit bigger than when they came in."

Andre van Gyseghem, British actor and stage director, presently adjudicating the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival being held in Belleville this week, last night dispensed the above recipe for the play that hopes to stay the full course in theatre.

Mr. van Gyseghem was speaking to a panel discussion on theatre to members of the Belleville Theatre Guild and the Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival . Queen Victoria school.

The panel was far from wooden, swinging through a lively discussion, hinged on problems common in the little theatre movement in Canada today.

One reservation made by chairman Meiklejohn at the outset, was refusal to let Mr. van Gyseghem answer any questions on his comments on the plays presented thus far in the EODL festivals.

KIND OF PLAY DISCUSSED

One of the knottiest problems in amateur theatre in Canada — what kind of play should be put on the boards — held much of the spotlight during the discussion.

Mr. van Gyseghem said he did not believe there was such a thing as "a festival play."

"All I am interested in is that you choose a good play . . . of its kind."

However, he made this with some reservations.

There are some plays which are not easy for small town groups to present, particularly where the author originally depended on the personalities of certain actors to fill out what he had omitted in the script.

More precisely he warned amateurs against the difficulties of staging "brittle, sophisticated comedy", particularly the plays of Noel Coward, which he said were not "suitable for small town groups."

In contract he thought that the plays of George Bernard Shaw would be "an excellent choice for theatres like this."

In contrast he thought the plays of Shaw, which do not rely on stage effects, would be "an excellent choice for theatres like this."

"I am surprised Shaw is not being done in the festival at all," he said.

DON'T LOWER STANDARDS

Asked if he preferred to see amateurs stay within their capabilities in presenting a play, Mr. van Gyseghem replied that he "liked to see people attempting to do something out of their reach."

"Do not lower your standards by doing a poor play 'well' " he advised.

He also agreed that it "would help, certainly" to explain a play before presentation to an audience, which might have difficulty in understanding the play: " . . . particularly when playing in a town, that is not theatrically educated."

Choice of a play for production by amateur groups should not be concentrated solely in the hands of the director, he said.

Amateur theatre is "collective work" and all the group should have a hand in selecting the play, he thought.

Among other opinions on theatre activity, Mr. van Gyseghem also gave members his idea of discipline in the theatre.

"Discipline should come from people by not being imposed on them," he said. Each member of a company should have a responsibility to himself and the group to self-impose discipline.

"It comes very largely from the shared excitement of the group in the work they are doing."

"I do not believe in being an autocrat. I expect a cast and a company to work as sensible, responsible people," he added.

What amateurs need is a good business manager, he thought.

"Get business men into it who are interested in selling theatre," he said.

Guild president Stuart Robb introduced and thanked the panel.

Plays Entered in Festivals Should Be 'Different'

—Van Gyseghem

Amateur theatre groups participating in drama festivals should not select plays on entertainment value alone, but should enter plays that are "different," Andre van Gyseghem, Dominion drama festival adjudicator said here last night.

Amateur groups should produce at least one play a year in their communities that are not presented with an eye to box-office appeal.

"It is the responsibility of all amateur groups to develop themselves as people with culture and imagination, whose eyes can be opened and broadened," he said.

"If you are going to do plays to bring in the shekels you will never grow culturally . . .," he told members of the Belleville Theatre Guild at a panel discussion in Queen Victoria school last night.

"You should be able to do at least one play that is different and of a high dramatic quality . . . and that is the play you should do for the festival," he said.

"You have got to grow, you have got to experiment . . . as well as having to please the audience."

Amateur groups must always have an eye to leading their communities—not a hand in pushing them behind.

Mr. van Gyseghem noted that the typical amateur group presents about three plays a year in its community and claimed that any financial loss incurred by including the "different" presentation in that schedule would be offset, by making the other plays productions of popular appeal.

"I bow to the box office with a very slight genuflection," he said. "I acknowledge its existence."

"I am asking that only one of your plays should take the risk —and I think that is the one you should put in the festival."

"It is taking the occasional chance; that is all I am asking," he said.

However, Mrs. Don McKinnon, Belleville Theatre Guild member, and also on the panel with Mr. van Gyseghem, saw the problem a little more practically difficult, especially in smaller communities where people have not the opportunity of seeing so much live theatre.

By "leading the community" she felt amateur players might not have any audience left.

"We have the problem to exist," she said, and " . . . much as we would like to be idealistic," presentations of 'better' plays often are limited by lack of funds to sustain financial loss.

Richard MacDonald, director of the Dominion Drama Festival, and another member of the panel, added a footnote to Mr. van Gyseghem's remarks during the evening.

The standards of play selection for entry into the festivals across the nation are "definitely higher," he said. Reasons for this included the knowledge culled from experienced advice of adjudicators handed out at the festivals and panel discussions on common problems like the one held at Queen Victoria School last night.

Regarding the selection of entries there is a trend away from box-office appeal. He said there had been "a slight drop" in audience attendance at the festivals across Canada which could be blamed to a certain extent on television.

However, audiences will turn out to plays presented to the best of the groups' ability and "if it is a finished performance."

In this respect he felt "more groups should develop more discipline."

Obituary

MANLEY POST

ELDORADO — The funeral of Mr. Manley Post was held on Tuesday afternoon from his late residence to Fox's United Church. The service was conducted by Rev. J. F. Lane, of Madoc, assisted by Rev. W. G. Fletcher, a former minister. The large crowd and the beautiful floral tributes showed the high esteem in which Mr. Post was held.

Friends were present from Paradise Valley, Toronto, Picton, Rednersville, Huff's Island, Mt. Pleasant, Foxboro, Stirling, Marmora and surrounding community.

Interment was in Fox's cemetery.

Bearers were: George Ketcheson, Charles Pigden, Percy Broadworth, Charles McCann, Cecil and Gerald Blackburn.

BURTON T. BIDDLE

PICTON — St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was unable to accommodate the many hundreds who came yesterday afternoon to attend the funeral of Chief of Police Burton T. Biddle, who died suddenly at his home. The service was conducted by the minister, Rev. J. G. Hornsby, and entombment was in Glenwood vault. Front of the church was banked with a great number of floral tributes.

Pall bearers were members of the police force: Sgt. George Pitt, Constables Ronald Roblin, Gerald Hicks and Scott Hele, Provincial Constables John Thompson and Charles Fletcher.

Honorary members were: Judge W. S. Lane, Mayor Harvey McFarland, Sheriff H. J. Colliver, Crown Attorney G. T. Walmsley, Q.C., County Clerk C. G. Rutter, Dr. J. H. Walmsley, P. F. Bailey, Harold McLoughlin.

All businesses in Picton were closed during the funeral. Flags were flown at half staff. Besides many civic officials, businessmen and friends attending the service were members of Branch 78 Canadian Legion, of which the chief was an honorary member. District police forces were also represented.

Prior to the service nearly two hundred school children of senior grades at the public school paraded to the church to see an old friend who had guided them across the street to school for many years. Later, they held a memorial service in the school.

REV. SISTER M. FIDELIS

She had been a member of the Sisters of Charity for over fifty years during which much of her time was spent at Smith's Falls and Belleville.

Surviving are three sisters: Mrs. R. Eves and Miss K. Black of Kingston, and Mrs. W. Stafford, of Oshawa, and three brothers: Bernard Joseph Black, of Belleville; John Black of Cataraqui and Arthur Black of Railton.

WILLIAM C. DAFOE

The funeral of William C. Dafoe was held Thursday, Feb. 17th, from the Grant Funeral Home. Rev. Hope Smith conducted the service assisted by Rev. L. H. Price.

Bearers were Earl Parks, Gilbert Lott, John Thompson, Seldon Homan, Vern Prindle and Gilbert Clegg.

Interment took place in Belleville cemetery.

GEORGE THOMAS (DODE) BOWEN

The funeral of George Thomas (Dode) Bowen was held Thursday, February 17th, from the Grant Funeral Home. Rev. Ray Rowley conducted the service.

Bearers were: George Wonnacott, Dawson Maclean, Gordon Miller, Fred Symons, Thomas McCoy and Charles Shedden.

On Wednesday evening, Moira Lodge held a Masonic service at the funeral home. Those taking part were: Wor. Master Ray Grant; Harold Robbins, Herbert Reed, Robert Orne, Mark Vanner, John Lawrence, Charles Barnett and James Mastine, master of Temple Lodge.

Interment took place in Belleville cemetery.

Flu in Many Schools Causes High Rate of Absenteeism

Flu, in almost epidemic proportions, has hit Belleville's two public high schools.

"Absenteeism at Belleville Collegiate this week has averaged 170-180 students a day," said A. E. Orr, principal, this morning. Collegiate enrolment is 1,000.

Leslie Reid, principal of the Quinte Secondary School, stated that 70, of an enrolment of 370, were absent today because of illness.

"Today's total was the worst reported this week," said Mr. Reid. "The number has been mounting steadily from 35 to 40 absentees at the week's beginning.

"We do not intend to close the school," said BCI principal Orr. "If absenteeism climbs much above 200 students per day I will take the matter of closing the school to the Board," he said.

Illness among teachers has been low.

"We are keeping our fingers crossed about teacher sickness," said Mr. Orr. "Teacher absenteeism was only 1.3 per cent in the first five months of this school year; an exceedingly low figure," he said. "We have been lucky in that respect.

"Some students are staying at school who would likely be better Mr. Reid. "There were 14 away off if they stayed at home," said in one class."

J. G. Demeza, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf reported no illness in the school when contacted this morning by The Ontario Intelligencer.

"There was no one in the infirmary yesterday," he said.

HEALTH AT COLLEGE GOOD

"We had a few cases of 'flu in January," he said this morning, "but we are free of 'flu now. The infirmary is clear and the general health at the College is good."

Elementary schools in the city reported only minor increases in the number of absentees. Most schools reported almost normal attendance.

Queen Mary school reported from three to five absentees per class, somewhat above normal, but partially accounted for by a minor epidemic of chickenpox. Queen Victoria school reported "a few more out than usual," but nothing unusual. King George school reported attendance "normal for this time of year."

"Attendance is about normal in the junior rooms," she said. "One senior room had 12 of 36 students absent yesterday, but it was the only class seriously affected," she said.

Present Gifts To James Cordes On Retirement

James Cordes, former superintendent of the job printing department of the Ontario Intelligencer, retired yesterday after 45 years with the company.

Mr. Cordes reported to the Ontario Publishing Co. April 10th, 1910. Except for service overseas in World War I as an original member of the 21st Battalion, he has been with the company ever since.

He was a pressman when the Daily Ontario and the Daily Intelligencer were merged into The Ontario Intelligencer in 1930. Two years later he became superintendent of the combined job printing departments of the papers, a post he held until recently.

Co-workers gave him a travelling bag at a presentation ceremony in the news room Thursday afternoon. They presented Mrs. Cordes with an electric coffee percolator.

Dr. Boyd Upper made the presentation on behalf of the staff. He stated that a printer is more than a tradesman. He is an artist and a craftsman in a complex, honored profession. Retirement of a printer is a loss, not only to his company, but to his community, Dr. Upper said.

He wished Mr. Cordes "a long and happy retirement which has been well-earned."

Mr. Cordes spoke briefly thanking his fellow employees for their thoughtfulness and their gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Cordes will leave the city this week for an extended visit to California.

Club Members Hear Address On C.N. Railways

The Lion president, Stu Dixon, welcomed a new member last night, Lion Lyle Bowes, formerly of Gravenhurst, now employed by Reid's Dairy of Belleville.

The guest speaker was Newton Thompson, chief clerk to the superintendent of the Canadian National Railways at Belleville, who spoke on the C.N.R. and its relation to Canada and Belleville. Many interesting facts were presented. Mr. Thompson said: "the history of the C.N.R. from 1836, when it was first started until today has always been linked with the builders of our nation." The Lions were told "that the Canadian National Railways was the largest single employer of labor in the Dominion of Canada and that 1,250 C.N.R. employees were headquartered in Belleville." Next year on October 27th will mark the 100th anniversary of the first train from Montreal to Toronto passing through this beautiful city.

Mr. Thompson told of the early days when the trains ran on the left hand side of the road and of many of the interesting and human experiences he had encountered in his 45 years' service with the C.N.R.

Lion Preston Timmins, of the Kingston Lions Club and a representative of the Canadian Institute of the Blind was also a guest at this well attended meeting at Lattimer's tea room.

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP) — Cattle prices were fully 50 cents to $1 higher this week at the Ontario public stockyards. Calves were steady, hogs steady to 25 cents lower and sheep and lambs steady to 50 cents lower in spots.

The run of 7,300 head of cattle was 1,200 head more than last week and about 1,000 more than the same week a year ago. Included in the fresh run were 283 head of western cattle, mixed stockers and fat cattle, a decrease of some 400 head under last week. Shipments to eastern Canada were light. There were no exports to the United States.

Prices:

Choice steers, all weights $21-21.50 with a few loads of choice weighty steers up to $21.75; good steers $19-21; mediums $16-19; commons $12-16; good heifers $17-18; mediums $14-16; commons $12-14; boner steers and heifers $10-12; choice fed yearlings $21-21.50 with sales to $22 and odd single sales to $22.25; good fed yearlings $20-21; mediums $16-19; good cows opened at $11.50-12 with tops of $12.50, but closed strong at $12-12.50 with extreme tops of $13; light heifery cows up to $14; canners and cutters down to $6; good heavy bologna bulls $13-13.50; butcher bulls up to $14; common and medium light bulls down to $10.

Replacement Cattle: Shipments back to the country of replacement cattle were about 300 head. This is a decrease of some 200 head under last week and comparable to two weeks ago. Prices remained unchanged with good stockers selling at $17-18 with some sales to $18.50; one load of heavy weight short-keep feeders sold at $19.25; medium stockers $14-16; commons $12-14.

Calves were 1,100 head. This total is about 300 head less than last week. Good and choice vealers were $28-30; mediums $19-27; commons $12-18.

Hogs totalled 2,800 head. This run is about the same as last week. Grade A hogs opened at $26-26.25 and closed at $26.25-26.50 with one load to Montreal at $26.75; sows 50 cents to $1 lower at $19, dressed while stags were unchanged at $14.

Sheep and lambs about 500, a decrease of about 300 under last week. Included in the run were 192 lambs from western Canada. Local feedlot lambs were $21-21.50 for good ewes and wethers; common and medium lambs were generally $14-17; good light sheep $8-10; common and heavy sheep down to $3.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—A heavy wave of buying came into the stock market about noon today, pushing a number of western oils and mines ahead as much as $1.

Golds were the strongest section, with Dome ahead $1 to $17.25 at 1 p. m. EST, McIntyre up $1 and Preston up 80 cents to $8.20.

Algom led the uranium advance with a $1 jump to $18.50 on 12,000-share turnover. Pronto was up 35 to $7.15 and the warrants 20 to $3.70.

Steels and foods led industrials up. Ahead $1 or more were Gypsum, Canada Cement and Aluminium up $2.50 to $81.50.

PRODUCE MARKET

The egg market was weak with offerings heavy and demand poor.

Quotations provided by the Dominion department of agriculture: Eggs, graded, in fibre cases: A large 39; A medium 38; A small 34; B 32; C 26. Wholesale to retail: A large 44; A medium 43; A small 39; B 37; C 31.

Butter solids; Ont., first grade 61; western 61.

Drew Welcomed Back to House With Ovation

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition leader George Drew was given a desk-pounding ovation when he returned to the Commons Thursday.

It was the first time he had taken his seat this session. He suffered a meningitis attack Remembrance Day and was recuperating until lately in the Laurentians and at Guelph.

Prime Minister St. Laurent, CCF Leader Coldwell and Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC — Macleod) all welcomed back the Progressive Conservative leader.

Broadcasters Urge Overhaul Of Copyright Law

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters called today for a complete overhaul of Canada's copyright legislation.

The law as it stands, the CARTB said, helps build monopolies which tend to exploit the general public without much benefit to composers, least of all Canadian composers.

In a brief prepared for presentation to a royal commission on copyright and other such laws, CARTB said most of the millions of dollars paid by private broadcasters to performing rights societies since 1941 have found their way into the pockets of foreigners.

The royal commission is headed by Chief Justice J. L. Ilsley of Nova Scotia and is investigating Canada's laws on patents, copyright, trade marks and industrial design.

REPRESENTS MAJORITY

The CARTB, with a membership of 125 radio and 17 TV stations, represents the majority of private broadcasters in Canada.

Its brief said two major performing rights societies do business in Canada—the Composers, Authors and Publishers Association of Canada, Ltd., linked with the performing rights societies of many other countries, including the United Kingdom, the United States and France; and BMI Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Broadcast Music Inc. in the U.S.

They obtain licensing rights from artists and authors and collect fees for them when their works are performed in public.

The CARTB brief said private broadcasters alone paid $3,000,000 to CAPAC from 1941 to 1954 and it is safe to assume that the bulk of this money found its way directly or indirectly into the pockets of foreign authors, composers and publishers.

Virtually all composers were required to pay the cost of publishing a song or selection in return for a five-per-cent royalty and, sometimes, revenue from fees charged for public performing rights. This system resulted in monopolies by the publishing firms, CARTB said.

A DISADVANTAGE

"The monopoly fails of mitigating characteristics if it benefits publishers rather than composers," the broadcasters said.

Another recommendation was Canada's withdrawal from international copyright conventions which worked to the disadvantage of countries such as Canada which imported most of their music.

The broadcasters suggested that copyright fees are unjustified and might possibly be eliminated. The brief said broadcasters' usage of recorded music created a demand for the works, thus contributing in an indirect way to publishers' and composers' revenue.

The brief said performing right fees for works used in a network program should be paid only by the originating station and not by all stations on the network.

It also requested a so-called broadcasting right whereby radio or TV stations would have exclusive rights to their productions. This would prohibit any unauthorized person from picking up and re-broadcasting any radio or TV broadcast.

Pilot Lands Safely

EDMONTON (CP) — Veteran Arctic pilot Ernie Boffa landed his single-engine plane safely at Port Radium, 900 miles north of Edmonton, Thursday after being reported missing since Tuesday.

He had been forced down by weather while making a 320-mile flight from Pearce point on the Arctic coast to Port Radium.

Technicolor Tour of Brazil Enjoyed by Large Audience

Brazil, occupying 47 per cent of the land mass of South America, and fourth largest country in the world, is spectacular in all its aspects.

"Let's see Brazil," Karl Robinson's technicolor tour of the geographic and anthropologic mosaic is a rewarding experience.

Seeing Brazil takes a lot of seeing. From tropical jungles at the head-waters of the Amazon in the far northwest of the country to the grassy plains of Rio Grande do Sul on the Uruguay border, 3000 miles to the south, the federal republic of Brazil sprawls over an area as large as the United States with an extra Texas.

However, three-quarters of Brazil's 55,000,000 people live in an area within 100 miles of the Atlantic coast leaving an almost empty empire in the interior.

Mr. Robinson's tour began in the steaming, tropical rain forests near the headwaters of the Amazon. The area's fabulous flora and fauna presented a riot of color for Mr. Robinson's camera. Manaos, capital of a vanished rubber empire a thousand miles from the mouth of the Amazon, proved to be an interesting city, alone and lonely in the heart of the jungle.

His tour included a north-to-south trip along Brazil's Atlantic coast from Belem, at the mouth of the Amazon, to beautiful Rio and Sao Paulo in the south.

Mr. Robinson devoted much of his film to recording scenes of the life of Brazil's citizens — a mixture of races, including Portuguese, Negroes, Asiatics and Europeans of almost every descent.

Inluded in the picture were scenes of rubber gatherers in the Amazon jungle, fishermen on the Atlantic coast, industrial workers in the great cities, coffee harvesters near Sao Paulo, cattle raisers in Rio Grande do Sul, gold miners in the province of Minas, jewellery workers, and the rich and famous at the beaches and racetracks of Rio.

Sao Paulo, "the most advanced city, architecturally, in the world," and home to 2,500,000 people, is the industrial heart of Brazil. Santos, part of Sao Paulo is the chief coffee distribution point in Brazil.

"Let's see Brazil" was a treat to the ear as well as the eye because of recordings of music typical of certain festivals and the way of life of Brazil's ranchers.

Mr. Robinson's easy humor and pleasant narration added greatly to the enjoyment of the picture.

Accused Given 12-Year Term For Manslaughter

SARNIA (CP) — George Albert Lehtonen, 23, today was sentenced to 12 years in penitentiary for manslaughter in the stabbing death Oct. 12 of his brother-in-law, Joseph Alonzo Lee.

Mr. Justice Wilfred Judson of the Ontario Supreme Court said in passing sentence:

"It is impossible to take what is sometimes referred to as 'a lenient view.'"

The knifing resulted from a family quarrel in front of Lehtonen's home, witnesses said during the trial.

Lehtonen's attractive young wife, Marcelle, said tearfully in court she will wait for her husband's return from prison.

Defence counsel Hugh Garrett asked the court to take into consideration Lehtonen's age and marital status in deciding on the penalty.

Lehtonen was charged with murder but was convicted on the reduced charge Wednesday night after the jury deliberated for more than three hours.

Lehtonen was charged with murder but was convicted on the reduced charge Wednesday night after the jury deliberated for more than three hours.

Lehtonen admitted having a paring knife in his hand during a quarrel with Lee the night of the stabbing but denied any intent to use it. He said he went outside to tell Lee "not to beat up my sister any more." He added he carried the knife because his hand had been recently broken and he wanted to avoid trouble.

TORONTO (CP)—The Christmas tree on the city hall lawn is to come down. The tree, given to the city by Cleveland a year ago, could not flourish in Toronto smog, a city official said.

Snowstorms Disrupt Travel In North Europe

LONDON (AP) — Snowstorms swept over Britain, Ireland and northern Europe today, disrupting travel and communications and isolating rural communities.

Munich, West Germany's second largest city, was buried in 10 inches of snow, and more was forecast. Blizzards raged over Sweden with temperatures around zero. Main highways were studded with cars abandoned in deep snowdrifts.

Heavy snow poured down on northern Scotland as Royal Navy helicopters stood by for a possible repeat of last month's operation Snowdrop in which food was dropped to marooned villagers.

Ireland experienced its worst weather of the winter with snow, sleet, rain and hail pounding down. Shipping was halted, roads blocked and farmers struggled to rescue livestock.

Snow fell on London throughout the morning, snarling traffic and commuter trains. Outside the city police warned that many roads were impassable.

Thieves Get $75,000

OSLO, Minn. (AP) — Burglars raided the Stoltman exchange in this small farm community early Thursday and escaped with loot estimated at $75,000 in negotiable securities and $15,000 cash.

The exchange, in a former bank building, has a vault in which farmers and businessmen kept money and securities in individual safety deposit boxes.

City Statistics Carried in Issue Of Financial Post

A paid advertisement stressing the industrial advantages of the city of Belleville is carried in the March 1st special industrial edition of the Financial Post which has a circulation of about 85,000 papers.

The advertisement which was authorized by city council appears on page three of the special edition and carries a small picture of Mayor J. Both and lists the many advantages of the city as an industrial centre.

Mayor Both yesterday was particularly pleased with the page three position of the Belleville advertisement and noted the special edition in which it was carried went to all countries of the world outside the iron curtain.

Says CCF Makes Totalitarian State in North

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A Liberal member of the Saskatchewan legislature says the province's CCF government has created Canada's first totalitarian state.

H. C. Dunfield, member for Meadow Lake, made the charge while speaking in the throne speech debate Thursday. He said a totalitarian state has been organized in northern Saskatchewan with the CCF government imposing complete control in all natural resources and administrative facilities.

Mr. Dunfield added:

"From tremendously increased civil service and crown corporation employment and through regulation and instruction of our youth, this government is determined to fasten on our province a political authority that will effectively throttle the last prestige of local government and personal political liberty."

No government member answered the charge immediately.

NO PROTEST

Meanwhile, no protest was raised in the British Columbia legislature as Liberal Gordon Gibson, banned from the House Tuesday, returned.

Mr. Gibson was told to leave the House after refusing to withdraw remarks that suggested government patronage in the issuing of forest-management licences. It is believed to be the first time that a Speaker of the B. C. House had demanded a member's withdrawal.

The Alberta House opened with throne-speech indications that the Social Credit government will seek a voluntary prepaid medical services insurance plan for the province. No details were given but it was believed the government will contribute about one-third of the premium cost. The speech also forecast "substantial" increases for education, highway construction and rural electrification.

Ask All Expenses Be Deductible From Income

OTTAWA (CP)—Business should be allowed to deduct all legitimate expenses when computing income tax, a joint committee of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants and the Canadian Bar Association said today in a submission to Finance Minister Harris and Revenue Minister McCann.

At present, said the brief, many expenses necessary to the conduct of business are not deductible. This meant actual income tax was often higher than the stated rates indicated.

Expenditures not now deductible included legal and other costs in carrying a successful appeal against assessed taxes and costs of obtaining a loan of capital other than the interest paid.

Laird Watt of Montreal and Clem L. King of Toronto represented the chartered accountants and Henry F. White of Toronto and E. B. Fairbanks of Montreal the bar association.

Changes were suggested in connection with tax appeals.

CROWN SHOULD PAY

The delegation stated that it was of paramount interest to all citizens that important questions of principle be decided by the Supreme Court of Canada. However, where a taxpayer succeeded in a tax appeal in the Exchequer Court, the crown should bear the costs of the taxpayer in the Supreme Court if it desired to appeal.

The brief also asked that upon the death of a farmer or fisherman his beneficiaries 'be not penalized" by forbidding the averaging of his income for a period of less than five years.

Otto Strasser Kept in Custody Between Planes

LONDON (CP) — Otto Strasser, former Hitler collaborator en route home to his native Germany after a long exile in Canada, was held by British authorities at London airport between planes today.

Strasser was taken to the home office's airport headquarters when he stepped from a Trans-Canada Air Lines plane this morning after a flight from Montreal. The home office, which is responsible for Britain's internal security, said the former German politician who is anxious to resume his career at home was "refused permission to enter Britain."

The authorities detained him "in legal custody" until the departure of his connecting plane for Zurich, Switzerland, where he plans to meet his wife before going on to West Germany.

BOUND FOR MUNICH

There was no indication that Strasser had expressed any desire to leave the confines of the airport during his stopover.

His original destination when he left Montreal Thursday was given as Munich.

Strasser has long expressed a desire to re-enter the political life of his homeland as an avowed opponent of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

PROGRESS IN THE EAST

"Indonesian News Bulletin," published by the Embassy of the Republic of Indonesia at Ottawa, deplores the fact that newspapermen frequently concentrate on the sensational and overlook quiet trends of equal or greater importance.

"Take, for example," it says, "the progress in the so-called 'new nations,' countries which have just recently become independent. These countries are definitely making progress against many odds and under the most difficult circumstances; lack of personnel, funds and experience in the fields of education, health, communications, and social reforms, as well as civil and military administration."

The "Bulletin" then proceeds to outline the achievements of the Republic of Indonesia in the few brief years since it won independence from the Dutch.

"With regard to social reforms," it says, "child labor, customary under the colonial government, has been abolished. A forty-hour week has been introduced. Women receive the same salary as men for equal work. The co-operative movement has grown considerably; rice production almost meets the country's domestic needs."

A similar story of social reforms could be told about many of the countries of Asia, in spite of their poverty, their illiteracy and their other handicaps.

On their road to reform, they are jumping many of the intermediate steps through which the nations of the West passed. There is a similarity between this situation and that respecting the industrialization of Russia while the Czars were still in power. Trotsky, one of the high priests of the Communist revolution who was later ousted by Stalin, explains in his history of the Communist revolution that the very fact that the industrial revolution came late to Russia was a factor in making those factories which it possessed amongst the most modern in the world. The Russian capitalists, when they built their plants, took advantage of the experience which western industrialists had acquired through many years of trial and error. Today, in a different field, social reform is moving with seven league boots in nations which, until just recently, still had institutions which were essentially feudal in character.

The nations of the East are thus benefiting by the lessons learned by trial and error in more developed countries in the West. No one will begrudge them this advantage. They have a long road to travel in their effort to raise their standards of living to a point where they compare with those of the western world. At the same time, this copying of the West is not without its dangers. In reform it is often as dangerous to attempt to move too fast as to move too slowly. It is to be hoped that these "new nations" do not attempt to establish social reforms which their economies are too weak to maintain.

PROSPECTORS' CLASS AT MARMORA

It serves to emphasize the mineral wealth of this district. Recent discoveries and developments have made residents of this area aware of the possibility that the highlands of Hastings may eventually prove to be amongst the richest areas of a county which offers man a vast variety of natural resources for his use and enjoyment.

It would be wrong, though, to regard this as entirely a new discovery. Long before Bethlehem Steel opened its pit at Marmora, long before uranium became a coveted metal and promising ore was located in the Bancroft area, there were men who were aware of the mineral possibilities of the district.

When he opened this year's class at Marmora, Dr. W. D. Harding of the Department of Mines pointed out that the first prospectors' class to be held in Ontario was conducted at Marmora, in 1894.

Sixty years have passed since that class. In the interval vast mineral resources have been discovered in other parts of Ontario, but, until recently, the mineral wealth of Hastings lay hidden, for the most part.

The reason for that is not difficult to discover. Dr. Harding supplied it in one brief sentence. "Nature hides minerals most effectively."

But man, by his ingenuity and persistence, has discovered new means of discovering Nature's treasure chest. The airplane and the geiger counter, to mention just two of many new "tools" of the prospector, have made it much easier to locate the hiding places of mineral wealth. But the real key to Nature's secrets, today as yesterday, is knowledge. That is what these prospectors' classes are designed to provide for the men attending them. If just one important mine is developed as the result of these classes, Ontario and its taxpayers will be repaid a hundredfold for the money being expended on providing this type of instruction.

SPEECH

The gift of speech to man belongs.
Words give a meaning to his songs.
By words all knowledge is conveyed
And out of them are poems made.

Though sweet the music of the birds,
They can't supply their song with words.
All creatures dumb their young must teach
Without the helpful gift of speech.

All other creatures, air or ground,
Their feelings must express with sound.
'Tis only man who has been freed
To tell his thoughts, to write and read.

No Bible and no faith to keep!
Enough for beasts to eat and sleep.
'Tis only man has speech to use
And words for every thought to choose.

Mr. Samuel Bowers of Tweed is observing today the 93rd anniversary of his birth. He was born in Thurlow township; the greater part of his life however, was passed in Hungerford township and for the past fifteen years he has made his home in Tweed where he is held in high esteem. He is enjoying good health as is also his wife, who is seventy eight years of age.

In a hockey match at Madoc in the intermediate class, the Madoc team defeated the team of the Grills garage, Belleville, the score being 5 to 3. The following composed the teams: — Madoc, — Hulin, West, Embury, Henderson, Alexander, Akey, subs, Ashley, Noble, Clarke and Keller. Grills Garage, Belleville, — Buskard, Ethier, Henn, H. Canning, St. Denis, J. Canning; subs, Hap. Day, Don. Ridley, Herb. Henn. The stars on the Grills team were Herb. Henn and Hap Day, and for the Madoc team Akey, Henderson, Keller, Alexander and Hulin played a star game. The referee was James Watson of Madoc.

Handcarts For Handbags

(Philadelphia Bulletin)

Suitcases and handbags are no trouble to stow in an automobile, but they are among the trials of life for rail travelers. The Pennsylvania is trying out at the Boston and Pittsburgh stations a method lightening this load. It will provide sturdy steel carriages similar to those used in the large food stores, so that incoming and outgoing passengers can wheel their baggage.

The task of putting the impediments, on and off train racks will still test the passenger's muscles, but rolling the baggage through the stations offers substantial relief. Red caps now will do the carrying when and if they can be found, but there are not as many of them as there used to be, and they are almost impossible to spot when the station is crowded.

The expense of handling suitcases by porters has become quite an item in rail travel. There is a fixed charge for every piece no matter how far it is carried, and in addition the red cap expects a tip. The steel carriages can be rented for 25 cents and 10 cents of this is refunded when the cart is returned to its place.

The experiment should appeal especially to women travellers and to heads of families who have little influence in reducing the amount of luggage women think is necessary.

Bees Boost Berry Crop

(St. Paul Pioneer Press)

Honeybees are the great pollinators. Without their busy buzzing from flower to flower, the world would lose much of its production of fruits and many other crops.

At Rutgers University, scientists were asked to study a serious decline in the yield of New Jersey cranberries over a period of years. Research disclosed that the cranberry bogs needed was a greater population of honeybees to pollinate more blossoms and thus produce more fruit.

By putting a colony of bees on every acre of bog, the cranberry crop was increased from 25 barrels an acre to 43 barrels in test areas. Fruit orchards and many garden and field crops also have benefited from increased attention to pollination factors.

Wild bees formerly were abundant in most of the United States. They automatically took care of most pollinating jobs. However, land clearing and use of powerful insecticides have cut down the wild bee population. Man managed honeybees now are needed to replace them.

Are Juries Obsolete?

(By Harold Weir in the Vancouver Sun)

All my life I've been raised in the tradition (and warmly subscribed to it) that the jury system is the foundation of our machinery of justice.

There's something emotionally appealing about the thought of an accused person being "tried by his peers." There's a feeling of faintly absurd security about the notion that 12 neighbors stand between the prisoner and the ferocity of a Lord Jeffreys thirsting for his blood. There's more than a trace of democratic snobbery in the rather muddled theory that God sends down the gift of common sense on a panel of jurymen and imparts only uncommon sense, which is said to be a grosser commodity, to judges learned in the law.

So the jury system has been a pleasant thing to contemplate, flattering to the self-esteem of us plebeians, warning to the egos of laymen (provided some other layman is called for it) and thrillingly reminiscent of such resounding things as the field of Runnymede and the amiable conceit that Britons never, never shall be slaves.

It is black heresy, then, to express a doubt of it? It is anti-social to suddenly experience the fear that the jury system sometimes inflicts a second mutilation on justice, depriving that lady of her brains who has already lost her eyes?

• • •

I am not convinced by any means that the jury system should be abolished. Nor am I convinced that the jury system fails, except in some few cases, to arrive at a reasonable approximation of the facts.

But those few cases in which juries do fail to comprehend the facts are so flagrant that, against my own will and sentiment, I'm moved to conclude that the institution should be most carefully re-examined.

Very much within the memory of living men have been cases in Vancouver where juries' verdicts were unreasonable, where a few have been nonsensical and where one or two have been monstrous.

I'm credibly informed that at the end of a criminal trial not long ago, the jury, having digested and considered days of evidence in something less than an hour, returned to the courtroom with one young juror grinning from ear to ear while another fixed his eyes on the accused and broadly winked. Having vouchsafed these indications of winsomeness, this jury then proceeded to give the prisoner the works.

If juries must be increasingly facetious and cute, isn't the day of their usefulness almost over? A grinning or a winking juror, in my untutored book, falls into the same class as a whistling woman and a crowing hen, all too grisly to be endured.

• • •

The jury system was born in an age when judges were fawning creatures of the sovereign and little more. It was born in an age when general pre-knowledge of the facts of a case was confined pretty much to the disclosures of the town crier whose reporting was not exactly extensive.

The juror of those days came into court with a fresh mind and few biases and a colossal ignorance. Except in small, rural communities, jurors probably had no views on any case and probably had never even heard of the accused.

Today every crime is the subject of common gossip. It's quite untrue to say that reputable newspapers try cases in their pages. But they do give, as they should give in any enlighted age, all the facts they can collect. There's nothing wrong with this. The public is entitled to know what's going on and the newspaper, moreover, performs an essential task in quenching wild rumor with substantiated fact.

But it's still true that a potential juror who has not heard almost all about any case and who has not formed an opinion about the guilt or innocence of the accused is about as rare as a roc's egg.

It requires a trained judicial mind to separate pre-conceptions from sworn evidence. I am inclined to doubt that the average juror, particularly a waggish juror, can do it.

The entire jury system, in the minds of many, has become suspect.

Hitch Hiker Got a Shock

(Toronto Saturday Night)

A young friend of ours, who does not believe in paying for his own transportation if he can scrounge a ride, had an experience a few weeks ago that left him so shaken he hasn't been able to cock a thumb since.

Hitch-hiking in the Ottawa Valley, he was picked up by a solitary driver bound for Chalk River. It came time for our friend to get out of the car, and when he went to get his bag from the rear seat, the driver asked him to do it quickly and carefully. "I dont want that snake to get out", he said. "It seems to have wakened up."

Sure enough, on the seat was about four feet of thick-bodied snake uncoiling itself. "What kind is it?" the hiker managed to ask, making a hurried grab for his bag. "Boa constrictor", the driver said, and pulled away.

We listened to this tale with the dubiety we thought it deserved, but the other day a scientist who works at Chalk River paid us a visit and in the course of some idle talk mentioned that one of his colleagues had suffered a grievous loss. "It's his pet boa constrictor", he said. "It died a couple of weeks ago. He had it out for a drive and it got pneumonia."

Highway Hazards

(Manchester Guardian)

Problems in developing Kenya's national game parks as revenue gatherers have been vividly explained in the annual report of Mervyn Cowie, director of the parks.

To give greater access to the most promising wildlife haunts, roads are being increasingly carved through the bush, but Cowie notes that the animals themselves are not co-operative in the development plan.

"Elephants usually show their disdain for any new track by covering it with trees and bushes," Cowie writes. A road hollow containing rain water "is often selected by a rhino as a really good place for a mud bath", while an antbear thinks it the only conceivable location for a good ant's nest.

As for Kenya's mole rats, "these strange animals have to comply with certain engineering principles by disposing of waste soil before tunnelling. A road is therfore as good as any place to throw up a mound, and tunnels frequently collapse under the weight of traffic much to the annoyance of car owners."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BACK TO QUIET AND SANITY

No matter how few or many friends we may have, right now in life, or through memory, there is at least one whom we trust and to whom we look. It is that one's love and character that influence us; so much so that even the memory of that one remains forever fresh and in an inspiration because we are so naturally and understandingly brought back to quiet and sanity after having wandered far away!

I early became interested in that treasure of a book, George Gissing's "The Private Papers of Henry Rycroft." After a stormy and troublesome life he sat down and wrote this peaceful and stimulating little book about life, books, people and nature. The famous Moshper, publisher of beautiful books in Portland, Maine, of years ago, got out a de luxe edition of this volume, to which he gave the title of "Books and the Quiet Life."

Any person, or any book, that can lead us back to quiet and sanity during these fear-filled days is not only important but essential! The best that is within us quickly responds to that which calms the spirit and brightens the heart with hope. What a blessing is a genuine friend, or one of our kin who is able to help us away from worry and fear and bring us back to quiet and sanity.

Stevenson wrote about such a man and remarked that he ought to be "placed here and there at ugly corners of life's wayside, preaching his gospel of quiet and contentment." One of the most comforting of writers is Stevenson himself. Ill most of his life, nevertheless his writings glow with cheer, courage and patience.

We are happiest, however, when we have succeeded in uplifting our own selves, for then we have dipped into a precious substance hidden within us, Glorifying God through its discovery and at the same time awakening every fine fibre that we own.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

ALL GOOD FOODS ARE MORE OR LESS LAXATIVE

A correspondent asks whether use of milk of magnesia for many years would account for face swelling and a rash, and whether I would suggest a laxative diet.

Dr. Brady

Without examination even a good doctor could only guess what the face swelling and rash may be, and, as you should know, if you heed what the A. M. A. boys say, I'm not a good doctor.

But I can read and write. In several books by recognized medical and nutrition authorities I read that frequent or habitual intake of milk of magnesia, magnesium sulfate (Epsom salts), effervescent solution of magnesium citrate, magnesium oxide (light calcined magnesia) or magnesium carbonate interferes with assimilation of calcium, and one of the manifestations of calcium deficiency is hives or giant hives (angioneurotic edema), which might explain swellings of the face.

Aside from the harmful effect of the milk of magnesia or salts habit on nutrition, the frequent or habitual use of any such laxative or physic keeps digestion deranged, contributes to development of pelvic troubles in men and women, and is as senseless as the acetanilid habit.

After all, stupid, the function of the bowel is regulated or controlled by the same automatic (autonomic) mechanism as that which regulates or controls the function of the heart and the function of the lungs. I imagine even you would not take a daily dose of medicine to keep your heart working.

Just as silly as taking physic is the notion of following a "laxative diet." Any food you like is more or less laxative. No food is "binding" or "constipating"—and don't try to tell me that you are different from ordinary bipeds in this respect.

Now it may well be that you have been so steeped in almanac lore and so thoroughly exploited, by the nostrum makers and physicians that you will brush aside what I am trying to tell you, as just another of my strange notions, as the A M A would say. This is a free country and no one will stop you if you want to worry along enslaved to physic. But before we part I'd like to make one last attempt to bring you back to health. If you are too far gone, at any rate it won't do you any harm.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

A LESSON TO BE LEARNED

No one—be he a Christian believer or an atheist—can deny that Christianity is the most extensive social movement that has touched the life of Europe and the western hemisphere during all human history. Yet, strangely enough, the Man who stands at the beginning of this great movement not only came from a humble home and lived thirty of his thirty-three years in the quiet of a peaceful village but was also, according to modern standards, uneducated. There is no indication that Jesus received any further instruction than would have been given any village boy in synagogue circles. Certainly this would not exceed our grade school education today.

Then when Jesus of Nazareth started his ministry, he chose twelve men to be close to him and to be his witnesses to the unbelieving world. Not one of these men was what we would call today collegebred.

This leads us, does it not, to the conclusion that education may not be as golden as its glitter first indicates. To say this is not to extol ignorance; it is only to point out that much of the so-called "education" has in every age been spiritually barren. Much of our education today does not recognize the validity of spiritual values, and because of this is dead.

The lesson for us is: Put religion into education or take the consequences of a huge mistake scarcely disguised as learning.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

A trapper named Harold Roberts who is a northern outfitter in summer and runs a trapline in winter, was interested in the unusual amount of noise being made by a flock of ravens as he passed along his trapline. He snow-shoed over to the scene of the ravens' excitement and found a dead fawn. It had recently been killed by predators, as it was in good condition and had certainly not died of starvation.

Roberts supposed it was wolves, and back-tracked in the snow, away from the beaten-up area where the fawn lay, to see if he could estimate the number and size of the marauders on his trapline. To his astonishment, he discovered nothing but fox tracks. Following the trail of the tragedy some distance, he was able to estimate that either five or seven foxes had formed a pack and had jumped the fawn in the snow-drifts and attacked it, dragging it down several times before finally overpowering it. No other animal appeared to be involved in the hunt.

A fox weighs from ten to fifteen pounds, as against the seventy to hundred and fifty pounds of a wolf. A fox terrier weighs 18 pounds. A cocker spaniel weighs up to 24 spaniel weighs up to twenty-four pounds. A fox is a slender-boned, almost fragile animal compared to a dog. Seen in the fields or woods, its small size is exaggerated by its rich fur. Its jaws are small and snipey compared even to a terrier's. To picture it attacking a deer requires quite an effort of the imagination, yet biologists inform me that families of foxes form packs and have been known to do what Trapper Roberts definitely reports.

The significance of his report has to do with the chasing of deer by dogs. If a pack of five or seven foxes can destroy deer, what can packs of dogs left loose in the bush do?—dogs three and four times the size of foxes and still not deemed to be in the class of wolves.

Says A-Bombs Alter Weather

(Vancouver Province)

The other day readers were told the theory of Dr. Bohdon M. Cwilong, a physicist who has specialized in the study of rain formation, about the effect of atomic bombs on the weather.

And a great many readers sat back and remarked: "That's what I have been saying all along."

It is not often that a scientist comes up with support for the hunches of the layman. This time Dr. Cwilong is right with the boys who have been shaking their heads over the situtation for a long time. He thinks atomic explosions are responsible for the freaky weather that has been experienced around the world.

Pt. Anne Takes Game Lead In TVL Semi-Finals

The Point Anne Cementmen broke up a closely-fought battle with three goals in the third period, two of them by Gerry Goyer, as they topped the RCAF Flyers 5-1 in the first game of their best-of-five TVL southern section semi-finals played in Frankford last night. The second game is scheduled for Trenton on Monday night.

Last year's TVL champs used only ten players but the excellent work of goalie Don Bates and fine protection of his three defencemen, Bill Hurst, Jud Semark and Jack Stewart turned the goal hungry Flyers back time after time.

Gerry Goyer sparked the winner's offence with two goals and one assist, while Tim Williams, Jud Semark and Pat Gilmour also scored. Gilmour played an all-around good game. Tardiff fired the lone Flyer goal with Stewart and Rochon also turning in fine exhibition.

The teams split ten minor penalties with Bob Hunter drawing a misconduct early in the third period.

Wide open hockey prevailed in the first period but both netminders came up with starring efforts and the Pointers netted the only goal of the session. Pat Gilmour was the marksman, banging home Billy Strahan's rebound at 6.25 with their team one man short at the time. Playing coach Timmy Williams made it 2-0 at 7.02 of the second, knocking in Gerry Goyer's corner passout but the Flyers came to life and finally scored at 11.19. They had been applying the pressure for several minutes before Tardiff took passes from Blanchard and St. Pierre to beat Bates.

Point Anne were a man short when Gerry Goyer made it 3-1 in the final twenty minutes, stealing the disc from an attacker for an unassisted effort. He fired his second at 9.51 on a three-way passing play with Williams and Gilmour and Jud Semark closed the scoring at 18.04, firing a blast from centre ice that bounced over Ogden's stick.

The teams:

RCAF—Ogden, Stewart, Childerhouse, Francis, Bowman, Rochon, Tardiff, Blanchard, St. Pierre, Branch, Brown, Dickson, Racicot, Boucher.

Point Anne—Bates, Hurst, Semark, G. Goyer, Williams, Hunter, Gilmour, Strahan, Graham, Stewart, P. Maracle.

Referees—Mac Carson and Sam Ellis.

SUMMARY

First Period

Pt. Anne—Gilmour (Strahan) 6.25
Penalty—Semark.

Second Period

Pt. Anne—Williams (G. Goyer) 7.02
RCAF—Tardiff (Blanchard, St. Pierre) 11.19
Penalties—Hurst, St. Pierre, Tardiff.

Third Period

High School Officials Admire Auditorium Bell

The fine workmanship of shop students at B.C.I.V.S. is illustrated in the sparkling brass bell held by Carol Reid, member of the Quinte Secondary School Glee Club. Fashioned in the B.C.I. vocational school shop, the bell was presented by the collegiate students to the Quinte Secondary School during the official opening on Wednesday evening. Shown admiring the bell along with Miss Reid are (left) Roy Sills, chairman of the high school board; Leslie Reid, school principal, and L. S. Beattie, superintendent of secondary education, who officially opened the new high school.

Minor Hockey

The city playoffs in the midget and squirt divisions got under way at the Arena last night with six games played. In midget action the Big "A" sextet scored a 6-3 win over Lewis Auto Electric. Robb Royals edged Northern Electric and Booth Radio blanked Stewart Warner 3-0. The Canadiens shaded the Maple Leafs 2-1, Bruins whitewashed the Red Wings 3-0 and the Black Hawks battled to a 1-1 tie with the Rangers in the squirt games. Both sections are playing a two-game, goals-to-count series.

MIDGET

Kellar and O'Neil were the big guns in the Big "A" win with the former netting three goals while O'Neil helped himself to a pair of goals and one assist. Lewis also scored one goal and assisted on another while Lynch picked up an asist. McLaren had two goals in defeat with Calpen getting the odd one.

Green potted two goals in Robb's narrow victory with Campbell claiming one and one and Gill assisting on a goal. Wardthorn and Fuller tallied unassisted markers for the Northern team.

Brant led Booth Radio to victory with two goals while M. Alyea netted the other, all three unassisted efforts.

SQUIRT

East and West Apparently Nearer to Breaking Deadlock

By FRANCIS HAYDON

LONDON (Reuters) — A five-power disarmament conference which opens here Feb. 23 will start with East and West apparently nearer to breaking their deadlock on the subject than at any time since the war.

But the 10 years of trying to reach a settlement with the Soviet Union on the question of control over atomic and hydrogen arms production has made British diplomats wary of predicting success.

The forthcoming conference, under United Nations auspices, will be attended by representatives of the big five atomic powers: Britain, France, the United States, Canada and the Soviet Union. Its outcome will be reported back to the disarmament commission of the United Nations.

Best omen for the conference is that, for the first time, the Soviet Union has agreed to discuss an Anglo-French plan covering both conventional arms and weapons of mass destruction.

Three months ago at the United Nations, the then Soviet delegate, the late Andrei Vishinsky, accepted the Anglo-French plan as the basis of discussion for a further disarmament conference. Vishinsky made it clear, however, that the Soviet Union was not committed to the Western proposals and intended to submit others of its own.

The Soviet Union consistently has demanded that banning of weapons of mass destruction should be the starting point of world disarmament. While agreeing that international teams should have access to all countries, including the Soviet Union, to see that the ban is carried out, it has balked at the idea of giving the teams powers as wide as the Western nations want.

The Anglo-French plan, for instance, provides that the teams should have complete freedom of access to inspect any production centres which they wish to see. Their very title "control organ," shows that their role would be more than one of mere passive inspection.

CHRYSLER UNION

No company offer has been made public, but sources close to the talks reported the two parties are close to agreement on the financial demands, although widely separated on the non-monetary differences.

Mr. Burt in a statement released Thursday said the union had offered to accept the recent Ford of Canada strike settlement as a basis for a new contract as it applies to the Chrysler issues.

He said the company in reply to the union offer "conceded several very trivial items," then said it had nothing more to offer.

The statement charged the company was trying to "buy off the union" on non-monetary items by conceding several of the financial demands.

The dispute has caught the Chrysler Corporation in the midst of a gigantic expansion program which company president E. C. Row has said is intended to regain Chrysler's position in the "Big Three" automotive productian race.

Increased facilities at the company's three plants within the last year have cost an estimated $50,000,000. The plants are now producing 2,100 cars a week, almost double their former capacity.

Two thousand extra production workers were hired recently, bringing the total working force to about 7,500 men. The average wage of the workers is $1.71 an hour. A Chrysler parts plant and depot in Chatham, 50 miles east of here, is not affected by the present contract dispute.

ROBSON—MARTIN

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized at the United Church parsonage, Tweed, on Friday, February 4, at 7:00 p.m., by the Rev. K. W. Pace, when Jean Elizabeth Martin, of Tweed, Ontario, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Martin, became the bride of Roger Lewis Robson, of Halloway, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Robson.

The bride was attractively attired in a two-piece light blue corded taffeta ensemble with pink accessories and corsage of pink roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Vera Martin, who was gowned in cream corded taffeta fashioned on princess lines, with black accessories, and corsage of bronze roses.

Mr. John Robson, of Belleville, Ontario, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the bride's home, where the bride's mother, attired in dusky rose satin, with black accessories, and corsage of white roses, received the guests. The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing blue crepe, with navy accessories, and white rose corsage.

For the wedding trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls, the bride wore a navy suit, with pink accessories and light blue topcoat. Mr. and Mrs. Robson are residing in Halloway, Ontario.

Thirty Years Nursing Service In San Ended

WATERFORD, N.B. (CP)—Miss Annie Moore has returned to her home here after 30 years of nursing service at the famous Trudeau Tuberculosis Sanitorium, Saranac Lake, N.Y., which was closed last year.

"Fate is indeed ironic," said Miss Moore in commenting on the closing of the sanitorium.

"Dr. Trudeau years ago revolutionized the treatment of TB with his theory of rest and fresh air and it was in his own laboratory that research was carried on that outmoded his original treatment.

"Research done on anti - tuberculosis drugs such as streptomycin finally forced the sanitorium to close. Patients nowadays can get more effective treatment in local TB hospitals."

Miss Moore went to Saranac Lake as a patient in 1922 after completing her first year as a student nurse at Moncton City Hospital. Her health improved and later she became a student at the training school for nurses at Trudeau Sanitorium. Since then her life was closely linked with the hospital.

"There was a gaiety and conviviality about the place that was fascinating," Miss Moore said. "Visitors used to say that it looked more like a resort than a sanitorium."

Quintena Lodge Entertains Assembly Head

A memorable evening of signal significance was spent on Tuesday last by Quintena Rebekah Lodge and her neighboring sisters of the district from Stirling, Tweed, Madoc, and Thomasburg, when they were honored by the visit of Sister Meta Priestley, president of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario. The Rebekah firmament literally glittered with honor guests. As well as Sister Priestley, introduced by Sister V. Oliphant, P.N.G., there were Sister Nina Embury, D.D.P., Sister Irene Aman, vice-president of L.A.P.M., introduced in turn by Sisters P. Burley, P.D.D.P., and E. Turvey, P.D.D.P.

Sister Rose also read a poem of welcome composed by the Noble Grand to Sister Priestley.

Gifts were presented to Sisters Embury and Aman from Quintena by Sisters Charlton, P.N.G., Twiddy, P.N.G., Carruthers, V.G., and Oliphant, J.P.N.G. The Noble Grands of Tweed, Stirling, Madoc and Thomasburg, Sisters Jeffrey, Barr, Kellar and Brock, presented Sister Priestley with a gift from the district.

THREE CANDIDATES

Quintena was also fortunate at this time in having received three candidates for initiation and in the opinion of the writer never was the degree conferred more beautifully. Much of the success of this work must be credited to Sister Harwood, staff captain, and to Sister Plumpton, N.G., for their exemplary insight into the inspiring act of initiation which, more than anything else reveals the high purpose of Odd Fellowship. Officers and staff alike performed their stations faultlessly and Sister Webber's lovely voice served to draw it all more closely into a ritual of beauty and grace.

Sister Priestley's message will long be remembered by all as an inspiration to Rebekah-hood.

Lodge was closed by the Stirling sisters, after which all adjourned to the upper hall where Sisters Ila Addy and Alice Adams, with their assistants served refreshments, beautifully arranged.

The tea table was a picture with its cutwork cloth, the pink and green of the Lodge colors repeated in the soft sheen of silver services and candlesticks and a breath of spring in the fresh beauty of daffodils.

Pouring tea were Sisters B. Boldrick, H. Miller, M. Large, D. Harwood, I. Aman, V. Oliphant, all Past Noble Grands. Serving were, Sisters Rushworth, Novinski, Laverne, Reynolds and Muir; while the kitchen detail was ably cared for by Sisters Gill, Addy and Adams.

Women's H.A. Hears Reports, Makes Plans

At the Februray meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, Mrs. J. Lennox Smith, the newly elected president, thanked the large group of members for encouraging her in her new work by their presence at this first meeting.

Two new members were welcomed by the auxiliary, Mrs. F. Burling and Mrs. Ben Yanover.

Mrs. J. E. Pugh, this year's recording secretary, read the minutes of the December meeting.

There are now 330 voluntary workers for the Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

Mrs. W. Dallas gave a favorable account of the finances, and Mrs. B. E. Burley read interesting correspondence.

Mrs. C. C. Taylor reported on the annual luncheon, and Mrs. L. B. Fonger on the Opportunity Shop. Spring donations are needed. Donors were asked to notify her if they are unable to take articles to the shop. The auxiliary would appreciate the services of any volunteers with cars to help with these collections.

Mrs. J. L. Smith brought the members up to date with the latest arrangements for the Coffee-Snack. Mrs. W. C. McCutcheon has agreed to be staff convener and Mrs. E. H. Hall in charge of supplies.

SPECIAL GIFTS

Special gifts of home-made pies or cakes from auxiliary members and others have been a great saving to the funds. Mrs. P. T. Seibert and Mrs. W. A. Campbell will collect any such donations if notified.

Mrs. E. Buchanan has taken over the membership convener's work, and Mrs. E. G. Kennedy is in charge of public relations.

The president thanked the secretarial committee who send out the quarterly hospital reviews, for also sending out the recent auxiliary bulletin. Those responsible for the monthly bulletin will now be—Mrs. C. C. Taylor, reporter; Mrs. R. H. Tanner, editor; and Mrs. E. E. Follwell and Mrs. Taylor, secretaries.

Other appointments announced were, Mrs. R. H. Wray, convener of special events such as Hospital Day and nurses' graduaton, and Miss I. Dickens is in charge of purchasing and distribution of Easter and Christmas gifts to the patients.

After the conclusion of the business session, Mr. L. Burfoot, purchasing agent for the hospital, showed some interesting films that he himself had taken of the hospital sod-turning ceremony, the nurses' graduation and their picnic to the Outlet, and the Women's Hospital Auxiliary annual luncheon.

It was announced that Mr. L. Burfoot will speak to the members at the March meeting on the subject "Purchasing and Control of Stores."

St. Joseph's C.W.L. Holds Euchre Party

Another successful euchre party was held in St. Joseph's school hall, Thursday evening. Prize winners were ladies' 1st, Mrs. J. N. Anton; 2nd, Mrs. T. Jury and Mrs. G. Carson; consolation, Mrs. E. Labelle and Mrs. C. Champagne; men's 1st, E. Dafoe; 2nd, C. Champagne; consolation, R. Campbell.

The lone hand winner was A. Cole, the door prize was won by R. Kennedy. R. Campbell was the lucky winner of a raffle held during the evening.

Mrs. P. Mercier and Mrs. J. E. Poirier convened this party, assisting them were, Mrs. B. Bankey, Mrs. G. Bradshaw, Mrs. A. J. Gibbons, Mrs. H. O'Neill, Mrs. P. F. Halloran, Mrs. E. Labelle, Mrs. J. D. Panting and Mrs. J. N. Anton.

Chatterton W.I. Enjoys Talk On Short Course

The February meeting of the Chatterton Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Berson Mitts with an attendance of 15 members and six children and two babies. This was "Grandmothers' Day". The hostess was dressed in the garb similar to what her grandmother might have worn with old-fashioned long, white apron, with crocheted lace across the bottom, and old spectacles.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Alex. Tanner of Pine Grove Institute, who recently attended the short course at Guelph, gave a description of her trip, the college buildings, and details of interesting handicraft, including moccasins, which were pretty, and with an insole, would make comfortable footwear.

She also took needlepoint work, working with wool making chair tops or cushion tops. This also was nice, and worthwhile knowing how one might solve a Christmas present problem. Mrs. Tanner's talk was most interesting and worthwhile and enjoyed by all.

The rest of the program consisted of readings, "Grandmother's Parlor" by Mrs. Gerald Irvine; "Then and Now", and "A Crushing Farewell," by Mrs. Albert Carson; a nice solo accompanied by guitar by Mrs. Douglas Prest was appreciated.

A Valentine's contest followed and a musical quiz which was good as it required thought; also a singing "song contest" with verse written on one side of a red heart. Groups of four were to sing the verse. A prize was given to the best group.

The hostess served refreshments.

The Experts Say

Woman Takes Elevator Home After Finishing Day's Work

By PAULINE KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—When business woman Viola MacMillan finishes work, she takes an elevator home.

She and her husband, George, rent a 13th-floor penthouse apartment on top of the building where they have their office—one of the first penthouses in downtown Toronto.

Mrs. MacMillan, better known in mining circles as the dynamic president of the Prospectors' and Developers' Association, runs several mining businesses on her own.

The couple ostensibly rented the apartment to beat the daily traffic problem although they still keep their home in North Toronto. The penthouse overlooks Bay street, Toronto's financial hub.

FULFILLED OLD WISH

"My reason for wanting it was frivolous," Mrs. MacMillan said. "I always had a secret longing to live in a penthouse."

The MacMillans first planned their apartment for entertaining and as a secondary office. But they like it so much they hardly ever see their other home.

Mrs. MacMillan dropped the office idea soon. "Our business means long hours and strenuous conferences so it's nice to take an elevator and relax."

She got her start in mining 30 years ago in northern Ontario prospecting in hip boots right along with the men. But she went feminine in decorating her penthouse.

Color theme is dusky rose throughout the six-roomed apartment for walls and drapes. A sandlewood rose broadloom blankets every floor except kitchen and breakfast room.

DRAMATIC DECOR

Walled on two sides by windows the main living room, 40 by 20 feet, is dramatically set off by a central pillar of mirrors surrounded by an indoor tropical garden. A similar pillar stands in the master bedroom encircled by a dressing table.

Furniture in the living room is modern with many comfortable chairs and fat hassocks in turquoise, gold, tangarine, ivory and brown. A wallpaper shot with gold creates a shimmering effect.

Mrs. MacMillan's favorite is the television room, a smaller living room which she uses for relaxing or small buffet parties. Its windows afford a wide sweep of Toronto bay.

The apartment is custom designed for entertaining. Sliding doors on the two bedrooms adjoining the main living room open out, making a huge area. And there are so many windows the MacMillans say living is one daily panorama of sunrise, sunset and city lights.

F.W.T.A.O. Holds Meeting

Heavy snow and other outside activities seemingly interfered with the usually good attendance, at the February meeting of the Belleville Women Teachers' Association, on Wednesday evening. However, a small group of interested teachers was present to discuss the necessary business conducted by president Miss Grace Houston, and to hear the guest speaker, Mr. Eugene Lang, a well known Belleville resident.

Mr. Lang, with the aid of numerous well-chosen records, spoke briefly on music, mainly descriptive, its component parts, and how it can generally affect both child and adult.

Marmora Couple Celebrate 50th Anniversary

MARMORA. — Lifelong residents of the district, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bonter, Marmora township, quietly celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Tuesday evening at their home just outside the northern limits of the village.

They were married at the home of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lough on the 5th concession of Marmora township on February 15, 1905, when the late Canon C. M. Harris united in marriage Ada Beatrice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lough and John Wadsworth Bonter, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Bonter. At the time Mr. Bonter worked as a sawyer at his father's sawmill and continued at it some years after his marriage. Twenty-five years ago he and his family moved to their present home.

RETIRED THREE YEARS

He later opened a marble quarry. Ill health forced his retirement three years ago, since when his son, Herbert, has been carrying on the business.

There are four other children living, Mrs. George Gay (Mildred) of Belleville, who for some years has been a supply teacher; Raymond, who farms in Marmora township; Eldon, a teacher residing in Belleville and another son at home. A daughter, Hazel, died about 23 years ago and a son, Stewart, who was a pilot with the RCAF, was killed overseas during World War II.

Their many friends extended congratulations and good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Bonter, highly respected in this community.

SEMI-EPIDEMIC REPORTED

TORONTO (CP)—The Toronto incidence of measles has reached "semi-epidemic" proportions, Dr. L. A. Pequegnat, Toronto medical officer of health, said Thursday night. He gave no figures.

Holloway St. Fellowship Club Holds Meeting

The Fellowship club of Holloway Street United Church held its February meeting in the church parlor on Wednesday night. The president, Mrs. Earl White, presided and after a brief address opened the meeting.

A short business period followed and the meeting was turned over to Miss Moorcroft and her group.

A lovely thought-provoking program was based on the theme "Let your light so shine before men, that they shall see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Mrs. MacFarlane's reading of the scripture lesson 1st John 1:14, and Mrs. Wrightmeyer's choice of several short stories bore out this theme.

Miss Moorcroft closed with an excerpt from the book "The Power of Positive Thinking", by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale.

Refreshments were served by the group, closing an enjoyable evening.

55TH ANNUAL REPORT

OUR progress in 1954 established new records in the history of our Company. Assets under Administration increased by $123,000,000, to reach the impressive figure shown below.

This wide expansion of our business reflects, we believe, the realization by more and more people that such complex personal problems as executorships, trusteeships, succession duties, taxation and investments require the service of specialists with wide knowledge and extensive experience. How a trust company functions to relieve those harried and beset by these and similar problems is undoubtedly becoming more widely known and appreciated.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHOULD SHE GIVE HER HUSBAND "A THIRD CHANCE"?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I have been married for six and a half years. We have a son four years old.

My husband, who is 27, has been running around with a girl of 16. I have sued for divorce, which he doesn't want, but he still won't give this girl up. Three years ago, he did the same thing, only that affair just lasted three weeks.

My problem is that if I drop the divorce action, how do I know it won't happen again? If he truly loved me and our son, I don't believe he would have run around in the first place. I believe in giving anyone a second chance, but not a third.

Please advise me, as our little boy loves his father very much. I have talked to the girl and her parents, but they will do nothing.
— Mrs. R.H

Dear Mrs. R.H.:

I agree with you that there is a limited to the number of chances a person deserves, and I certainly cannot blame you if you feel that, since your husband did not mend his ways after his first affair, it would be hard to trust him again.

Before definitely making up your mind that a divorce is the only solution, however, it seems to me it would be very wise to talk the whole problem over with a marriage counselor. To discuss a complicated problem such as this in a personal talk, where an advisor can get all the details necessary to complete understanding of the situation, may suggest some course of action that you might try before taking as final a step as ending your marriage. Even though you feel rather hopeless about it right now, I'm sure you would prefer to hold your marriage together, if that can be done.

I suggest that you write a letter to the Marriage Counselors, asking for the names of qualified marital counselors in your area. Then you can select the one nearest you and make an appointment for a consultation with him. There will, of course, be a fee for this service, but if you can manage it, it would certainly be worth it.

YOU LET HIM KEEP THE RING; IT'S NOT YOURS TO CLAIM NOW

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was going steady with a boy for 18 months, and last Christmas I gave him a ring that cost $33. Two weeks after that, I broke off with him. He wanted to give me back the ring, but I told him to keep it.

Now I am going with someone else, and so is he. My friends tell me that he plans to give this new girl the ring I bought him. Do you think this is right? Should I ask him for the ring, or forget about it? I still have a friendship ring he gave to me when we started going together. My new boy friend asked me for it but I wouldn't give it to him. — L.A.

Dear L.A:

So long as you refused to take back the ring you gave this boy, when he offered to return it, you thereupon relinquished all claim to it. While I think it certainly is not in very good taste for him to give it to his new girl, I don't think you should ask him to give it back to you at this point. You told him to keep it, so you really have nothing to say about what he does with it.

Similarly, I would say you did the proper thing in not giving away the friendship ring. Since you, on your side, kept the souvenir your former boy friend gave you, it would be just as out of place for you to give it away as it is for him to give away the memento you gave him.

You acted correctly; he did not. Just let it go at that.

KEEP THIS A FRIENDSHIP: DON'T MAKE IT A ROMANCE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl almost 16, and recently a boy of 20 has asked to date me.

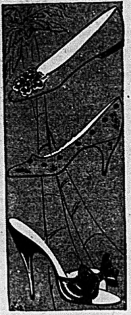
Do you think he is too old for me? — L.L.

Dear L.L.:

As a general rule. I do think that a young man of 20 is not a very appropriate companion for a girl as young as you are. You still have some years of school ahead of you, while this 20-year-old chap probably has a job, if he is not in college, and interests which are different from those of a teen-ager. At any rate, he should have.

I admit, however, that there are exceptions to this general rule, and if you want to go out with this young man occasionally, there's certainly harm in it. But I wouldn't be in a hurry to take him on as a "steady".

FASHIONABLE FOOTPRINTS



By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

There are new foot prints along fashion lane and three are shown here. Golden brown kid makes a flat heeled, youthful pump that has a yellow and checked gingham petal bow in front. Here is the newest version of the daytime opera pump and it is done in blue kid with multicolored buttons all around in border effect. See-through plastic is used for the vamp and heel of a pretty evening slip-on, the clear plastic nicely set off by the black satin of the back quarter and the perky bow on the vamp.

Beauty

DOUBLE TROUBLE

Like extra pounds, a double chin seems to turn up overnight. First, there is a little cross line, a slight tissue fullness, and soon the beauty jig is up.

Numerous are the good looks problems of the woman who eats too much. She always has an alibi. She lives on practically nothing a day, or so she says. But that "nothing" is packed full of fattening calories. She should see the family doctor, have him give her a diet. She will look better and feel better after reducing.

A double chin will respond to treatment, as any facial operator in a beauty shop will tell you. Devote five minutes a day to corrective massage and you will be rewarded.

Start with a soapy face-washing, using fairly warm water to make the flesh glow. Rinse and dry thoroughly. Massage is more effective on a dry skin surface.

Have at hand a heavy emollient that will offer resistance to the manipulations. Spread it on the neck first, doing upward strokes, covering the entire facial area.

Hold your head back, but keep muscles relaxed. Pick up the flesh under your chin, roll it between thumbs and first fingers. The purpose is to crush the fat cells.

Fold your fingers in the palms of your hands and beat lightly with your knuckles, proceeding from the collarbone to the jaw line, pressing the flesh upward.

While the cream remains on, have an ice friction. In the morning, dash on cold water and apply an astringent. Witch hazel will serve.

Readers' Friday Column

By Mary Moore

QUESTION:

. : .would it be possible to get a recipe for Plum Sauce that the Chinese use with Egg Rolls?—Victoria A.

ANSWER:

I tasted Plum Sauce in a Chinese restaurant in Vancouver, but my recipe for a similar sauce calls for apricots. Why don't you try substituting cooked plum puree for the apricot puree in this

SWEET-SOUR SAUCE

One-quarter lb. dried apricots, 1 cup water, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup sugar,. 1-2 cup cider vinegar. Cook apricots, covered, slowly in water about 30 minutes or until they are very soft and most of the water is absorbed or evaporated. Push through fine sieve. Mix with remaining ingredients by beating with egg beater until smooth. This may be served with many Chinese foods served as appetizers. Store in covered jar in refrigerator.

QUESTION:

I feel I know you if only through reading your column . . one is sure to have success when attempting your recipes. . . I baked the Christmas cake of 1954 and think it is the tastiest fruit cake I've ever had. Pete sure knows his fruit cake. . . followed your instructions for dressing a turkey and then the time table . . . believe you me the guests all raved over the flavor of that bird . .I also tried those "Cocoa Quickies" . . . my husband has asked for more. . I have misplaced the recipe. . . wish you loads of luck.—Eileen L.

ANSWER:

Bully for us Eileen—that makes us both happy.

COCOA QUICKIES

Mix together in a large bowl 3 cups rolled oats, 1-2 cup each cocoanut and chopped nuts, 6 tablespoons cocoa, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Boil together for 1 minute only 1-2 cup butter or margarine, 2 cups white sugar, 1-2 cup milk (or water). Pour this over the first mixture and blend thoroughly. Drop from teaspoon on a sheet of wax paper and let cool. They harden quickly so work fast. (I should add this recipe came to me from "B." of Kingston.)

QUESTION:

Would you please send me a recipe for steamed rice and for a sauce, sweet and sour for spareribs.—Mrs. E. J. C.

ANSWER:

You may be interested in the recipe above for Sweet-Sour Sauce.

SWEET-SOUR SAUCE

(For Spareribs.)

Spareribs are cut in 2-inch squares with meat on both sides of rib, and dipped in this batter and fried in deep fat: Batter—1 medium egg, 2 tablespoons milk, 1-4 cup sifted flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt. When fried they are put in baking dish and Sauce is poured over: 1-4 cup cider vinegar, 1-2 cup pineapple juice, 1-3 cup brown sugar solidly packed, 1 1-2 tablespoons cornstarch stirred into 1 tablespoon water, 1 teaspoon salt. Mix well, bring to boil stirring.

Pour this over battered and fried rib pieces, cover, bake at 300 deg. Fahr. 1 hour.

STEAMED RICE

In top of double boiler but over direct heat bring 3 cups water to boiling (or use milk). Add 1 teaspoon salt and stir in 1 cup rice. Place over boiling water, cover and steam 45 minutes stirring occasionally. If desired rice may be rinsed in sieve with boiling water. Another way to cook rice (as the Chinese do) is to measure exactly 1 cup long grain rice, rinse in sieve under cold water, drain. In aluminum pot add to it 1 1-2 cups boiling water, 3-4 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon butter. Cover, bring to boil, Turn off heat for 5 minutes. Turn on heat as low as possible and cook until water is absorbed. All grains are separated and tender.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

BREAD-AND-BUTTER PRESENTS . . . GIVING THANKS TO YOUR HOSTESS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help several of us by suggesting some appropriate gifts to send to one's hostess with (or soon after) one's bread-and-butter letter? — F.

The first and best suggestion is for the guest to keep his or her eyes widely and wisely open during the visit to "spot" something that will be particularly welcome. It may be the mention of a book, either a current favorite or a classic. It may be a photoview album, to hold the family snapshots that now may be "loose." Or a glass pitcher or jug for iced tea or fruit juice; a thermos jug, with tray and glass, for a night table. For a desk that seems to yearn for a library-set, a pair of scissors and paper cutter neatly and safely contained in a trim leather sheath.

Informal living and informal entertaining to generally mean that decorative place mats are delightfully welcome . . . and you can show your alert imagination by sending a set of these with designs particularly appropriate to the interest of the family. Or two or four or more hostess trays, in one or different transparent colors.

Or show your hostess that you like to send gifts that have a "just for you" personality, a gift personalized with her or "their" initials or names. Perhaps a paper or plastic ensemble for parties (luncheon napkins, cocktail napkins, coasters, stirring rods for long drinks, matchboxes, and so forth) charmingly packed in a be-ribboned container, or a set or large supply of paper coasters; or personalized playing-cards, with name imprinted in gilt or silver; or bridge ensemble; or plastic coasters, in one of a variety of transparent colors, light or dark shades, Or, selected for special uses, initialed or be-named paper doilies and or napkins in various sizes; place mats; guest towels; or for picnics, paper plates, cups and so forth. Pencils printed with the name. And, one of the most popular and certainly one of the most decorative of paper gifts, the radiant "drum" of metallic matchbooks, in one glowing color or in assorted colors.

Some guests like to send to the family a subscription to a magazine that may have been mentioned with interest in a conversation . . . a twelve-time gift. And, as a personal gift to the hostess, there is the alluring world of beauty-gifts . . . "tied with ribbons pink and sweetly scented," as the old song goes!

THROW AWAY THE INFERIORITY COMPLEX "EXCUSE" . . . AND LEARN TO DANCE WELL

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am shy and self-conscious and am finding it very difficult to become a good dancer. The other day I read that an orchestra leader says that the reason poor dancers are poor dancers is because they have an inferiority complex. I'm sure I have just that . . . but does that mean that I can never become a dood dancer? — Gloria

No! But as long as you hug to yourself the superficial excuse that you are "shy and "self-conscious" and "have an inferiority complex," you won't make real progress in learning to dance. Because you'll always be so desperately and ridiculously concerned with how you look or with any slight misstep that your thoughts will be taken up with this rather than in lightheartedly (and light footedly!) concentrating on the rhythm and following the lead of your partner.

Perhaps . . . and I hope so . . . you have a brother or a devoted cousin or boy-friend who will give you some pointers . . . also it would be a good idea to save your pennies and take as many dancing lessons as your purse will permit. Becoming a good dancer is probably just the thing you need to bring you out of your "oh, how-awful-to-be-as-shy-as-I-am" mood, and to change your ingrowing personality into a bright, new, outgoing personality. Make up your mind to abandon all those useless, worn-out excuses. Learn to dance . . . learn to dance Well . . . and have fun!

"THE BRIDE CUTS THE CAKE!"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When there is a bride's table, with seated service, at a wedding reception, when does the bride cut the cake? — Bride's mother

The bride cuts the cake just before the serving of the ice cream. . the cake is eaten with the ice cream, as the dessert. There is, of course, a good deal of ceremony about this cutting-of-the-cake . . . the bridegroom stands beside the bride, his right hand over her right hand, and the bride cuts the first slice and shares it with the bridegroom as the symbol of sharing everything throughout life. Their parents and friends gather 'round to watch the cake-cutting ceremony . . . and usually all join joyously and festively in singing "The Bride Cuts the Cake!"

WEDDING QUESTIONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When there are to be three bridesmaids in the bridal party, would it be proper to have the bridesmaids and ushers walk down the aisle together?
2. Would it be correct to invite the parents of the bridesmaids and ushers to the wedding dinner?
3. Is it necessary to send a special invitation to the "serious" boy-friend of a relative? — J.

1. In the processional, the bridesmaids of course must not walk with the ushers . . . the ushers walk first; the bridesmaids following, either in single file or one bridesmaid walking alone before or after the pair of bridesmaids. In the recessional, they may walk in the same way, or the bridesmaids may walk with the ushers.
2. This is certainly not necessary at a small wedding dinner.
3. Not necessary . . . but gracious, if the wedding is not to be a large, or fairly large, one.

No need to mourn if your youngster has straight hair. It can look as pretty as curly locks if it's properly shaped and cut.

Even a Budding Beauty Needs Some Expert Help

By HELEN FOLLETT

Many beauty shops have special departments for children. Instead of fighting with little Dolly when it's shampoo time, Mom can take the child along when she goes for a cut, shampoo and set herself.

HAIR CARE LECTURE

During the hair washing, the young customer gets a little lecture. The operator tells her about the importance of frequent brushing to keep hair shining and pretty. She is taught how to arrange her coiffure, thus saving her mother that particular trouble during the terrific pre-school, morning rush hour.

Tiny nails are manicured—with colorless polish, of course. This is when advice on hand care is given.

The head of one such salon points out that a child who is taught early not to bite her nails will not pick up the habit later.

A GOLD STAR

"In my shop," said this beauty expert, "I conceived the idea of giving a little gold star to any child who showed up each week with smooth, unbitten nails.

"Little girls with naturally curly hair need professional attention," she continued. "Often the wave quality is lost through improper shampooing. Curly locks lend themselves to many styles not possible for hair that's straight as an Indian's. But even the straightest hair can be given loveliness and distinctiveness when properly cut so that it falls into waves."

DEATHS ACCIDENTAL

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — An inquest into the deaths of two McKinnon Industries employees Wednesday resulted in verdicts of accidental death in both cases. The victims were William Sadler, 38, who died Oct. 18 of burns caused by an electric shock, received while cleaning insulators, and Fernand Poitras, 32, who was killed when caught in conveyor machinery Jan. 11.

He said the law requires immigration officials to ask questions prying into the private lives of applicants. Such information should not be disclosed to lawyers or relatives in Canada. Besides, information on whether applicants were security risks came from "sources not under government" on the understanding it be kept confidential.

As for the level of immigration in future, it was becoming more difficult to get desirable immigrants because economic conditions had improved so greatly in Europe.

"It is going to be a good deal more difficult to get the kind of people we want," he said.

NO DECLINE

But there had been no decline in the ability of Canada's economy to absorb immigrants—the basis for deciding how many should enter.

There "may have been something" in the story of Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) that a group of Estonians had paid $190 each to come to Canada aboard the ship Beaverbrae and then had had to scrub decks. He would investigate the matter.

Mr. Pickersgill also referred to the report of a Canadian Bar Association sub-committee, which last year urged a series of changes, including provision for appeals against department decisions and for making public the reasons for rejections.

Sub-committee members were John H. McDonald of Ottawa, defeated Liberal candidate in Carleton in the last two federal elections, John Dickey (L—Halifax) and John R. Taylor, Vancouver lawyer.

Mr. Pickersgill said the report was "a perfectly innocuous document." But Mr. McDonald had made an "ill-considered speech" when he told reporters there were irregular practices in overseas immigration offices.

Mr. Dickey, speaking later in the debate, said he had had nothing to do with the sub-committee's final report.

COULD NOT BE IMPLEMENTED

Mr. Pickersgill said he does not think the sub-committee's recommendations could be carried out by any responsible minister.

As for charges that the immigration department was denying the rights of Canadians seeking to bring in relatives, their only right under law was to make an application and to have that application decided upon.

Aliens had no fundamental right to enter Canada. That was a privilege and a matter of domestic policy. Parliament itself had decided that applicants should not have the right to appeal immigration department decisions.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Mr. Pickersgill has made a worse mess of the immigration department than the mess he inherited from Hon. Walter Harris, now finance minister.

He quoted chief justice W. B. Farris of British Columbia as saying that "immigration officials are fooling the public.'

"PUSHED AROUND"

That attitude extended to the most senior officials, Mr. Diefenbaker said. He had "case after case of people being pushed around, of arrogance and abuse of authority."

"These are the things that the courts of this country have raised objection to."

But Mr. Pickersgill was "placing himself on a pedestal" and making his decisions above challenge in the courts.

Jean Francois Pouliot (L—Temiscouata) said Mr. Diefenbaker spoke only of generalities, except for two or three specific cases. The Progressive Conservative demand for a royal commission on immigration was "the same old story" of wanting Parliament to abandon its responsibility.

Colin Cameron (CCF—Nanaimo) said Mr. Pickersgill is "stupid and incompetent." A Supreme Court ruling in 1932 had said the department should give reasons for barring a certain Japanese from Canada. Yet the minister was pursuing the same policy for which the department had been rapped in 1932.

FROST ACCUSES

In supporting the three-man opposition walkout from the select committee, Mr. Oliver asked: "How could the opposition act honestly and stay in the committee when the majority refused to call their witnesses?"

The premier said later that Mr. Oliver had shown a lack of impartiality while he was a member of the committee. While the Opposition leader was on the committee he had "run around the province" making statements "that had no real foundation in fact."

Mr. Oliver denied he had said anything which misrepresented the facts.

Premier Frost said that all the necessary improvements and corrections in the department of highways had been carried out. "And I can say with confidence that this is the best highway construction department in the Dominion of Canada."

He added:

"Far from shoving anything beneath the rug we have brought out all these things into the open there they may be judged by the people and corrected."

CLAIMS PHONE CALLS

Mr. Oliver said that certain witnesses, not subpoenaed by the select committee, had been telephoned by the committee after three members had walked out. He said he was not surprised when he heard the witnesses reported they had nothing to say. They had information valuable to the committee's investigation, but they were telephoned about it.

He agreed with the majority report that the prices at which contracts were let were too low.

"It seems to me that the contractors had some assurance they would be bailed out."

Three times in his speech Mr. Oliver requested a royal commission to investigate highways frauds.

PLEDGES DEFENCE

MANILA (Reuters)—Nationalist China's Foreign Minister K. C. Yeh made his statement to reporters after meeting with Philippines President Ramon Magsaysay.

AMPUTATE LEG OF RESCUED AIRMAN

Capt. Thomas L. Pittman, given up for dead after a mid-air explosion of a U.S. stratojet bomber 110 miles northwest of The Pas, Man., smiles from hospital bed in Winnipeg and waves the pistol with which he shot a rabbit as he lay on the ground, leg broken in two places and unable to move. Capt. Pittman is the third of the crew of four to escape alive when the bomber caught fire and exploded 30,000 feet up on a flight from California to Greenland. The body of the fourth has been discovered. Pittman survived in 20-below zero, immobilized by his broken leg, for 79 hours, kept alive by the Arctic clothing he was testing and by sulpha pills which he carried. Doctors have been forced to amputate the lower part of his broken leg which was badly frost-bitten.

Sunday School Lesson:

This Crooked Generation

By ROY L. SMITH

Anyone reading Peter's sermon delivered on the day of Pentecost gets the impression that the old fisherman was speaking as a man would who is living at the end of one era and the beginning of another.

The glory of Greece was all in the past. A brilliant philosophy had been displaced by a lesser school of thought. There were signs that Jerusalem, and the Jews, were heading into a conflict with the Roman Empire which could, quite conceivably, result in the destruction of the city and the historical end of the nation. Even the Empire itself was beginning to show marked signs of decay. And as a judgment upon the age Peter cried out, "Save yourselves from this crooked generation."

Salvation Our Responsibility

It is highly important that we should note the exact character of the warning. Save yourselves!

The Uniform Sunday school lesson for February 20:

"THE CHURCH AND ITS SACRAMENTS," Matthew 3:13-17; 26:26-28; 28: 19-20; Acts 2:38-41; 10:34-48; I Corinthians 11:23-29.

There were probably those then, as there are those now, who look confidently for some kind of miracle which will save men in spite of themselves, and without any effort on their own part. But that was not the faith of Peter. Instead, he laid the responsibility precisely where it must eventually rest-on the individual himself!

This is not a popular doctrine in modern America, among a generation trained through a quarter of a century to expect society, the government, Providence, or "fate" to assume responsibility. But it is a message which the church of Jesus Christ must insist upon if it is to be true to its heritage and its Master.

Can Christians Hold Aloof?

There is an insistent demand in some quarters that the church abstain from all participation in politics, and there is a sense in which such a demand is well justified. The church, as such, has no legitimate place in the programs of parties or candidates. But neither can the church hope to save society if it refuses to serve as a moral and spiritual judge in the field of politics and economics.

It must not be forgotten that when the Roman Empire finally collapsed under the weight of its accumulated evil, it was the Christian Church which moved into the breach and established law and order throughout the world.

Beginning of an Era

He is blind indeed who does not see that our generation is also living at the end of one era and the beginning of another. It lies beyond the capacity of any person now living to even estimate the vast changes that are coming on the heels of the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima.

Much more than a single city was blasted to bits by that unprecedented blast. States of mind, political concepts, balances of power, international alliances, and a thousand other factors went down with the trembling walls of the Japanese community.

No one can even yet get more than the most fleeting glimpse of what the new era is to be like. President Eisenhower's proposal that the world's knowledge in the field of nuclear science be pooled for the benefit of public health and peacetime use is only a hint. Christians must save themselves from the evils of the dying age, and for the glory of the dawning age.

PLAY THE MAN OR THE PUCK?
A hard-hitting bodycheck breaks up rushes faster than a fancy pokecheck—and the modern trend is to play the man, not the puck!
The clever defenseman uses his body to block the attacker . . . and lets his teammates take care of the puck. This man-to-man type of defense leads to more penalties.
THE BODYCHECK—A solid bodycheck is the most effective way of slowing down a forward.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

HUB'S BEEN AROUND!

Look at Hub Macey's hockey war bags and you will find stickers from Big River, Saskatchewan, to an unnamed place behind the Iron Curtain.

For this Marco Polo of the ice-lanes has more puck mileage to his credit than the majority of amateur players in the country. During his years on the blades he has amassed 100 stitches, some broken bones, an interesting travelogue; with no time out to get married.

"HUB" MACEY

And don't be fooled by Hub's picture in this column. The guy is really good-looking but the lens eagle caught him when a team-mate was trying to lay down a two-buck touch. He is the Beau Brummel of the club, always immaculate. A warm, friendly personality goes with it.

Hub saw the first light of day in Big River, Saskatchewan, but calls The Pas his home since the family moved there a short time after he reached the toddling stage.

He grabbed a hockey stick instead of a wheat fork at an early age and moving rapidly caught a spot with the Portage La Prairie Juniors, playing with them two years before moving to the Winnipeg Rangers. Hub was a member of this team when it won the Memorial Cup.

Eastern scouts got an eyeful of the western youngster and before Hub knew it he was playing centre for the New York Rovers in the Eastern Amateur League. He played with the Rovers for a year when New York Ranger scouts grabbed him and he saw action with the Gotham Blues for a season and part of another.

Hub got into the greatest game of all, joining the Canadian Army Provost Corps in which he served overseas for four years. Here he met his buddies of the pro and amateur leagues and he saw hockey service in England, France, Scotland, Switzerland and Czechoslovakia.

After the war Hub joined a bi-service club composed of players from the army and the RCAF.

He returned to Canada and then started a hockey trek that few players can boast. Hub started his first season at home with the Buffalo Bisons, but finished the season with the National League Canadiens. The next year he went back to the Bisons, thence to the Houston team of the United States League. Eddie Shore spotted him and Hub centred the Springfield Indians for the next two seasons.

After that Hub hopped across the continent to play with the Vancouver Canucks for part of a season before going south to play with the Tulsa Oilers.

But the continent-trotting Mr. Macey was not through. The next year saw him in the Maritimes playing with the Glace Bay Miners in the sizzling down-east hockey atmosphere. Hub made an instant hit down there and the next season found him in a coach's capacity with the Glace Bay club.

Last season brought Hub back west and he coached the Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan club. Then, as he says, "I graduated," and joined the Belleville Memos.

Hub starred in a centre ice position all his hockey life with the exception of this season when, as is well known in this group, he has played outstanding hockey on the Memos' defence. He is the high-scoring rearguard of the Memos with eight goals and 22 assists. Hub can hit 'em, too, but does it in a nice, hard-thumping, gentlemanly way. Thus for he claims by eight minors but got tossed out on his ear with a misconduct down Kingston way for heaving a dirty look at an official.

Hub has enough hemstitching in his carcass to take two reefs in a schooner's mainsail. Over one hundred sutures have held him in one piece at different times. When a junior with Portage La Prairie he suffered a fractured pelvis and on two other occasions Hub lost his hitch-hiking ability since both thumbs were fractured. He also suffered a gashed gluteus maximus, and being a modest young man blushed unashamedly when a lady doctor gave him the "needle."

Married? No, says Hub. "How could you expect a guy like me to get married with a travel record like mine. "But," he added, "I'm coasting now—and who knows, if the right gal comes along . . ."

Hub is the only boy in his family. He has three sisters and his father, Hubert Macey, senior, and Mrs. Macey, live in The Pas.

Hub, however, has not confined all his sports activities to hockey. He is a first baseman of more than passing ability and during his baseball days out west played with a tournament-winning club near Winnipeg. He batted .383 his last season and hit twelve homers. And he is no dub with a driver or brassie. Playing golf in the west he won two "North of .53" tournaments in The Pas-Flin-Flon district.

A HELPING HAND

The front-running Cornwall Colts strengthened their grip on first place in the near-over OHA Senior "B" race last night by handing the surging Brockville Magedomas a 7-2 setback, and, needless to say, tossed a helping hand in the Memos' directions. The loss was the first in five for the "Maggies" and definitely weakens their chances of making the fourth and final playoff spot ahead of the locals or Kingston.

This makes tonight's Clinton-Belleville affair all the more important since a Memo victory would eliminate the Comets and assure the Boucher clan of at least a tie for fourth place.

Chicago Black Hawks Give Boston Bruins 10-2 Trimming; Worst in League This Winter

By JIM BASTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The 3,280 National Hockey League fans sat unbelieving. Even Chicago Black Hawks must have been flabbergasted. But there it was, big and beautiful on the scoreboard: Boston 2, Chicago 10.

That, statistically, is how the usually-badgered Black Hawks ran wild over Boston Bruins at Chicago Stadium. It was a staggering blow to the Bruins, who were on one of the hottest streaks of the 1954-55 campaign.

Few figured the Hawks, in last place in the league race and winners of only 10 of their 57 starts, could have pulled such an upset. It was the worst shellacking given any big-league team this season.

Hawks scored four goals with only six shots in the third period, giving Boston goaltender Johnny Henderson a horrible experience in his rookie year. They tallied three goals in the first period and three more in the second.

STILL IN CELLAR

It was a Chicago morale booster, naturally. But the victory didn't do much for any Hawk hopes of catching a Stanley Cup playoff berth. They are in the cellar with 33 points, 11 behind the fifth-place New York Rangers and 24 behind the fourth-spot Bruins. Hawks have only 13 engagements left in the 70-game schedule.

In the other game Thursday night, Montreal Canadiens vaulted back into first place by scoring [illegible] beating Detroit Red Wings 4-2 be- [illegible] gave Canadiens 74 points, one up [illegible] Chicago. Bruins probably chalked the nightmarish score up to one of those things. The sparse fan turnout saw Hawks reach double-scoring figures for the first time in more than five years. They beat Boston 10-4 Oct. 30, 1949, the last time it happened in Chicago.

COUNTED TWO

Nick Mickoski was the only Hawk to score two goals—both in the first period. The others went to Metro Prystai, Bill Mosienko, Red Sullivan, Larry Wilson, Eddie Litzenberger, Jack McIntyre, Jerry Toppazzini and Harry Watson. Doug Mohns and Hal Laycoe were the Boston marksmen. Mohns got his in the third period; Laycoe in the first.

The big Boston guns were silent. Their top sniper, Leo Labine, a 24-goal man, was cold. But he did get into trouble by fighting with Chicago rearguard Bucky Hollingworth in the second period. Both were given majors and high-sticking minors.

At Montreal, Jean Beliveau fired his 31st and 32nd goals of the season in pacing Les Habitants to their 33rd victory of the campaign. Maurice Richard got his 33rd and Calum (Baldy) MacKay supplied the other Montreal goal. Beliveau lengthened his lead atop the individual scoring race. He has 62 points, five better than Richard, in second spot.

The Wings capitalized in a hurry on Montreal penalties in the first period. That's when they took a 2-0 lead on goals by Ted Lindsay and Ted Kelly. Canadiens made it 2-1 in the second period and broke out in the third.

Minor Hockey

Dates have been announced for the Ontario Minor Hockey playdown series between the Belleville bantams, midgets and juveniles and Kingston. The six teams will hook up in a two-game, goals-to-count, home and home series with the first games in Belleville on Tuesday, February 22nd and the return battles in Kingston on Saturday, February 26th.

The bantams, coached by Tony Parisi, will open activities at 6.00 p.m. on Tuesday evening followed by the midget and juvenile games in that order. Play will start at 1.00 p.m. at the Kingston Community Centre on Saturday and follow the same schedule.

Bill Gault will manage the juveniles with Bill Hurst in the coaching capacity. H. G. Jones is the midget manager and Brian Mulvihill the coach while "Boiler" Lloyd will manage the bantams. The bantam and midget teams are listed below but the juvenile roster is not yet available.

MIDGETS — Campbell, James; Coe, David; Elliott, Jack; Foster, Bill; Kerruish, Dennis; Langlois, Larry; Latchford, Robt.; Mann, Gerry; McFarland, Peter; McLauren, John; Musgrove, Geo.; O'Neill, Jack; Pollard, Ron, Rowbotham, Garry; Spafford, James; St. Louis, Gordon; Wright, Albert; Wannamaker, Robt.

Toronto Club Wins Top Prize In Bonspiel

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario bonspiel winds up today with four of the six trophies yet to be claimed.

Stewart Graham's Toronto club rink Thursday night won the Royal York Trophy, top prize of the five-day bonspiel. Stan Jones of Hamilton won the Birks Trophy.

Graham defeated Owen Loveless of Brantford 9-6. The rinks were tied 6-6 going into the 12th end.

Jones overcame an early lead by J. W. Reid of Toronto to win 9-6. Reid was leading 5-3 going into the sixth end.

Rinks skipped by Graham have won two other bonspiel trophies. In 1938 Graham won the Seiberling Trophy and in 1946 he captured the North American Trophy.

SON IS SECOND

Graham has his son, Bill, playing the second position. Stan James at lead and George McPhee, third, round out the rink.

Playing the third position on the Jones' rink is Stan's father, S.F.S. Jones. W. K. Ellis is at lead, and J. N. Anstis plays second.

Toronto rinks skipped by Andy Grant and Jack Tolton were scheduled to meet in the final for the North American Life Trophy.

Grant, 1955 Ontario curling champion, defeated E. N. Smith of Toronto 12-8. Mel Cunnington, defending holder of the trophy, lost to Tolton 16-6.

D. B. Carlyle was dumped 11-8 from the Seagram Trophy competition by Dr. G. S. Murray of Toronto. Carlyle's Toronto club rink won the Seagram last year.

KINGSTON WIN

Brodie Ness of Kingston defeated Don Stewart of Orillia 10-7 in another Seagram quarter-final. W. S. Tomenson defeated R. K. Metcalf 9-4 and M. Charron downed Frank Raney 9-6. All are Toronto rinks.

E. N. Gregory of Lindsay took Col. W. O. Morris of Toronto 14-4 in the third round for the Parker Pen Trophy. Sid Smithers of Galt defeated G. P. Thompson of Toronto 7-6.

In the Monarch Knitting Trophy competition Wilf Palmer of Sault Ste. Marie decisioned Charles Booth of Huntsville 10-9.

Play for both the Parker and Monarch trophies enters the quarter finals today.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP)—A great number of persons who thought Ezzard Charles had disappeared into thin air after his second unfortunate meeting with Rocky Marciano last September will be surprised to find the former heavyweight champion back between the commercials tonight, fighting a strange character named Charlie Norkus.

The sense of relief that Ez appeared to experience after he was counted out in the sixth round of his last bout caused many of the experts to conclude that he finally had enough and probably could retire.

They said he had proved to everybody's satisfaction, including his own, that he could never in the world whip Rocky, even if he were willing to try hard.

WOULD BE LINEUP

Now, only five months later, Ez has returned. He said the other day that he thought a good win over Norkus might send him on his way toward another title shot, but he is much too smart to believe that. If everybody who has beaten Norkus were to be given a chance at the championship it would be a matter of standing in line.

Some see the match, which has been kept very quiet in local newspapers, as a possible attempt to build Norkus into challenging size. The ex-Marine, if nothing else, can hit hard when he has a proper target. There is a possibility, this group says, that the two poundings Charles took from Rocky slowed him up to where Norkus will be able to tag him.

The opinion is not unanimous that Charles will win. Ez has to be the favorite, because nobody knows for sure how much Marciano took out of him, and there once was a time when he could have chilled the likes of Norkus in a round or two. But a number of local experts look for an upset.

Games Washed Out

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A cloudburst drenched the semi-finals of the mixed foursome two-ball golf tournament Thursday and one of the two matches, tied on the 18th hole, was called on account of the rain.

Bee McWane of Birmingham and Ted Bishop of Boston went into the finals with a 3-and-2 victory over Barbara Romack of Sacramento and Willie Turnesa of Elmsford, N.Y.

But Polly Riley of Fort Worth and J. Walcott Brown of Manasquan, N.J., were forced into a Friday sudden - death playoff with Marjorie Burns of Greensboro, N.C., and Les Handt of Tampa, Fla.

Quebec Aces Coming Up In Hockey Loop

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Quebec Aces got sound net-minding from Claude Evans Thursday as they whipped Valleyfield 5-0 and pulled into a second-place tie with Montreal in the Quebec Hockey League.

Montreal lost its one-point margin over the Aces by playing to a 1-1 tie with the Cataracts in Shawinigan Falls. Despite the tie, Quebec is a strong favorite to take the runner-up spot, still having four games in hand over the Royals.

Big Seven

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Big Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens continued his march toward the National Hockey League scoring championship with a pair of goals Thursday as the Canadiens defeated Detroit 4-2.

Beliveau's outburst stretched his first-place lead over teammate Maurice Richard to five points. Beliveau has 62 points and Richard 57. Richard scored one goal Thursday and continued to lead in that department with 33, one more than Beliveau.

CANUCKS IN FINALS

LYONS, France (CP) — Bob Bedard of Sherbrooke, Que., and Don Fontana of Toronto reached the finals of the men's doubles in the international lawn tennis tournament Thursday by defeating Eduardo Aragon of Uruguay and Colin Hannam of Britain 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Earlier Bedard reached the third round of the men's singles by defeating Michel Lemasson of France 6-4, 6-0. Fontana lost his first-round singles match to favored Budge Patty of the United States 6-4, 6-4.

Penticton V's Critical of Way C.A.H.A. Has Handled Tour

BERLIN (CP)—Penticton Vs, in Europe less than a week in their quest of Canada's lost world hockey title, already are the centre of controversy, as many a Canadian entry in the world tournament has been before them.

Latest in a series of difficulties the Vs have countered since arriving in Berlin last Monday is the possibility that entry visas to Czechoslovakia may not be forthcoming in time for the team to play two scheduled exhibition games in Prague Sunday and Monday.

Glen Bird, the team's manager said Thursday that he hopes visas can be obtained in time to leave Berlin Saturday as planned. He said the Canadian military mission here is trying to obtain the visas from the Czechs.

Bird was critical of the way details for the European tour were handled by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and said the problem of visas should have been tackled earlier by the CAHA.

However, W. B. (Baldy) George, secretary-manager of the CAHA, said Thursday night in an interview at Kemptville, Ont., that details such as visas for the Vs' exhibition tour are the responsibility of the German Ice Hockey Federation.

George added the CAHA had sent two cables to the German federation about two weeks ago requesting details of the exhibition tour the federation had sought to arrange for the Vs. The Czech dates, he said, were confirmed too late by the German federation for visas to be arranged before the team left Montreal last Sunday.

Bird is also disappointed about the team's stay in Berlin thus far. He said all the members of the club were feeling fine "but as far as sports are concerned our trip . . . has been a waste of time so far."

"We have come to Europe to see how they play hockey, but so far we have not seen it. This is disappointing."

The Vs defeated a mixed team of Canadians, Swedes and Germans 1-4 Wednesday night and while Bird said the boys on the opposing team were "all right," they were shorthanded "and we had to give them three of our players."

A return match with the mixed team is scheduled for today and West Berlin sports officials disclosed they had heard members of the Soviet entry to the world championships, which begin next week, are likely to be among the spectators. Pavel Korotkov, president of the Soviet Ice Hockey Association, and 10 other Russians were reported to have shown keen interest as they watched the Vs' first exhibition game Wednesday.

Rocky Marciano Among Sports Dinner Celebrities as $20,000 Raised for Crippled Children

TORONTO (CP)—A little boy stood before some of the greatest names in sport Thursday night and said:

"I can play sports now just like the other guys."

Ray Badger of suburban Weston, a victim of polio, had to wear braces on his legs when he appeared at the sports celebrity dinner last year. This time he came with the braces in his hands.

Ray was with 23 sports figures at the $25-a-plate dinner staged by the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association in aid of crippled children. He sat among such stars as Rocky Marciano, world heavyweight boxing champion, baseball players Al Rosen and Robin Roberts, golf's Gene Sarazen and track's Jesse Owen.

There were more than 800 guests at the dinner. The athletes represented 10 sports from three countries.

GO TO SOCIETY

Proceeds of the dinner, around $20,000, go to the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. The dinner officially started the Canada-wide Easter seals campaign. On three previous dinners the association raised $70,266.54.

Each year the society names a "Timmy" as a symbol of all unfortunates they seek to help. Ray was "Timmy" of 1954. At last year's dinner his ambition was to come back without his braces. He did, holding the braces for all to see. Sandy McDonald of Hamilton, "Timmy" of 1955, succeeds him.

The speeches Thursday night were short. They ranged from a stirring talk by Owens, the great Olympic champion who asked everybody to back the cause for crippled children, to the dry humor of Dazzy Vance, 63-year-old former pitcher with Brooklyn Dodgers.

There was a standing ovation when Marciano told how an incident at the celebrity dinner three years ago helped him win the heavyweight crown.

RECALLS TALK

Marciano, flown here from his Grossinger, N.Y., training camp, recalled that at the 1952 dinner he was introduced by former heavyweight king Jack Dempsey as the coming champion.

"He also sat with me and encouraged me," Marciano said. "He told me the fight game was worth all the effort I'd put in it, even if it was rough and tough. I left with more enthusiasm than I'd had."

There was another ovation for Chris Chataway, who flew here from London. The soft-spoken runner, who paced England's Roger Bannister and Australia's John Landy to the first mile runs under four minutes, said he had been "warned" not to orate for more than three minutes.

"I was told that when I go over the three minutes. I'm overtaken by Bannister or Landy."

PRESENT PLAQUE

The Sports Writers Association presented swimmer Marilyn Bell, conqueror of Lake Ontario, with a plaque commemorating her selection as Ontario's athlete of 1954.

There were letters and wires of congratulations, including a telegram for best wishes from Health Minister Martin.

There were other sport greats, such as football's Lou Groza of Cleveland Browns, sailing's Bill Gooderham of Toronto, boxing's Jimmy McLarnin, Rich Ferguson, Canada's outstanding miler, racing's Dude Foden, golf's Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon and hockey's Babe Dye.

Before the dinner, the celebrities spent 2½ hours at a press conference, moving from television cameras to radio microphones to newspaper reporters.

Quinte Girls Down Bancroft

Quinte Junior Girls' basketball team defeated Bancroft girls at Quinte Tuesday by a 23-17 score.

Bancroft forwards, C. LaBarge and A. Baumhour scored for Bancroft despite close checking by Quinte guards, Leslea Anderson, Joan MacDonald, Lois MacDonald and Rosetta Campbell.

Scorers for Quinte were Joy Smith, Carolyn Hatfield, Betty Musclow and Alta Laing; Joy Smith scoring 8 points.

The line-up:

Quinte—Alta Laing 4, Lynda Canning, Carolyn Hatfield 6, Betty Musclow 5, Barbara Thrasher, Shirley LaRue, Joy Smith 8, Joan MacDonald, Lois MacDonald, Leslea Anderson, Rosetta Campbell.

Year of Progress Reported by Golf, Country Club

PICTON — A year of progress was reported at the annual meeting of Picton Golf and Country Club, Wednesday night, when 65 members met for the annual dinner and meeting at the Royal Hotel. Though a number of improvements had been made, the year ended in a satisfactory manner, stated treasurer John deB. Arnaud. President Pearce Jones reported a growing interest in the club. It was decided that the retiring president should become an ex-officio member of the Board of Directors, and that the new directors should take steps to increase the water supply for the course without capital expenditures.

E. J. Williams was elected president; Donald Hobson, vice-president, and John deB. Arnaud, secretary-treasurer, by the newly elected directors who are John deB. Arnaud, Gordon Campbell, Dr. R. F. Evans, E. A. Pearce, George Ross and E. J. Williams.

Trophies and awards won during the past season were presented. Wilfred Minaker received the senior men's trophy given by Seagrams, with Ted Pearson as runner-up.

The Colliver trophy for mixed foursomes was won by Mrs. Harry Beaumont and Jack Smelt, with Mrs. Thurston and T. Pearson as runners-up.

Seagram trophy for man and wife play went to Mr. and Mrs. John Arnaud, with Mr. and Mrs. J. Smelt as runners-up.

Bristol cup for club championship went to Pearce Jones, with Geoffrey Wright runner-up.

Allison trophy, for spring handicap, went to Jack Goodwin with Jim Cowan, runner-up. Carter trophy won by Jim Cowan with Robert Chinnick, runner-up. McGee trophy won by Frank Dunning with Ted Folds, runner-up.

Pearce trays for greatest progress, were awarded Allan Anderson, with George Powers as runner-up for men and Mrs. W. Dinsdale for ladies with Mrs. E. J. Williams as runner-up.

LADIES' SECTION

In the ladies' section, the Redmond trophy went to Mrs. J. deB. Arnaud, with Mrs. J. Dinsdale as runner-up; Currie trophy to Mrs. Dinsdale with Mrs. H. Hyatt runner-up; the Leavens trophy for club championship was won by Mrs. F. Wright with Mrs. Arnaud as runner-up.

Mrs. C. Spencer presided for election of officers by the ladies' section. Mrs. G. N. McKibbon was named president; Mrs. H. Beaumont, vice-president; Mrs. George Powers, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. J. Smelt is games captain; Mrs. J. deB. Arnaud, house committee chairman; Mrs. T. Pearson and Miss Betty Brown, games committee; Mrs. E. J. Williams, Mrs. J. Cowan, Mrs. W. Hicks, Mrs. C. Thurston, Mrs. H. Beaumont, Miss Betty Brown, members of house committee.

Win Will Give Varsity Victory In Hockey Loop

MONTREAL (CP)—The University of Toronto plays two hockey games here during the weekend and a win in either one will give them the Intercollegiate Hockey League championship.

The Blues, unbeaten all season, meet McGill University Friday and the University of Montreal Saturday. McGill, although in third place, is the only club with a chance of overhauling the leaders.

Toronto has 17 points, McGill 8, but the latter has five games left to play. The University of Montreal, with nine points, has only three games remaining. A combination of three Toronto losses and five McGill wins would give the Montrealers the title.

Laval University, last year's champions are mired in the league cellar without a single point. The league's 12-game schedule winds up March 11 with Laval at McGill.

What Do Golfers Think of Scores In Texas Open?

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—What do the golfers think about these fantastic scores being shot in the Texas Open?

Thursday as Peter Thomson, the Melbourne, Australia, professional, waited to tee off the loud speaker brought these announcements:

"Mike Souchak has shot a 60 with 27 on the back nine."

"John Barnum has posted a 63."

"Say," asked Thomson solemnly "is it too late to get my entry fee back?"

Quipped Jimmie Demaret, the Houston pro: "This is the only tournament in the world where you can shoot a birdie and lose

Dan MacKinnon at 78 Still Trains, Drives Three Horses

By GERRY MARTIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP)—Here in the Maritimes where harness racing is king and cagey veterans drive at a ripe old age, Dan MacKinnon is the grand-daddy of them all.

Today, at 78, he still trains and drives his three horses.

Dan MacKinnon, soldier, pharmacist, newspaper columnist and fox-rancher, has had a varied and colorful career.

"Colonel Dan" carries himself with an erect bearing that speaks of a long military career during which he won the Distinguished Service Order and the French Croix de Guerre. In 1954 Col. MacKinnon raced his horses 17 times, driving five winners, three seconds and two thirds.

In addition to his driving he is rated the top authority on harness racing in the Maritimes and his weekly column "Down the Back Stretch" has appeared in the Charlottetown Guardian since the '30s.

He started racing in 1912 when he was 36, an age when many are calling it quits, and since then 72 horses have carried his colors.

He recalls his first win during the 1912 season at the old Exhibition Track in Halifax.

"I was considered a joke, I guess," he said.

An accident gave him that win. The top horses got mixed up and "I breezed by on the outside." Two years later he was the top driver at Halifax, when the Exhibition Track was considered one of the best in the east.

Looking back, he recalls some of his record-breaking horses and one "that never won many races, but I guess he was my favorite."

That was "Doctor Sharper," an outlaw horse and the wildest trotter ever to appear on a track in the Maritimes. "Why it took three men to get the harness on him, but this used up a lot of his energy before the race even started."

One of his best horses was the pacer "Helen R." She performs a fantastic feat of winning 15 heats in 14 days back in 1915, this including time for shipment from Halifax to Charlottetown. Another was "The Yank," who set a world's mark of 2:15¼ on the ice at Mount Clements, Mich., in 1924.

Col. MacKinnon bought a controlling interest in the Charlottetown Exhibition Association and founded "Old Home Week" in 1940, the greatest single week of racing in the Maritimes. He retained control of the Exhibition Association until 1947.

He also was managing editor and part-owner of the Charlottetown Guardian.

A crack shot with an uncanny eye, he joined the militia in 1904 and served with the artillery. Going overseas in the First World War he took command of the 36th Field Battery from Sydney, N.S., in 1916 and in 1918 was appointed commander of the 9th Canadian Field Artillery Brigade.

He won his D.S.O. in 1916 at the Battle of the Somme and the French Croix de Guerre after the Battle of Passchendaele. He also was mentioned in dispatches on several occasions.

On his return from overseas he went into the hotel business and fox ranching.

While horse racing was his chief interest, he has a keen knowledge of all sports. A runner of some note, he held the Maritime mile record from 1897-99 and was a member of the Maritime championship football team of 1898.

Ball Clubs Except Yankees Report Heavy Advance Sales

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball clubs can look forward to a prosperous 1955 on the basis of advance sale of tickets.

With only one or two exceptions, and one of those is the New York Yankees, the clubs reported an increase in advance sales over 1954 in a survey by The Associated Press.

The increase is in line with the overall jump last year when the attendance climbed 9.7 per cent over the preceding season on a turnout of 15,935,881.

The Yankees' advance is an excess of $900,000 but they are about 10 per cent off last year's figures. When the Pittsburgh Pirates checked their figures a week ago they found themselves only some $2,000 under last year. Last year's figures were $328,214 compared to this year's $326,811.

Both the world champion New York Giants and the American League titleholders, the Cleveland Indians, are well satisfied. The advance ticket sale of the Giants has passed a record $500,000 whereas the entire advance up to the opening day in 1954 was only $322,000.

The Indians said they do not keep comparative records but that sales are running ahead of last year when the club did around $1,000,000 in advance sales.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, benefitting from clever promotions, are at the $600,000 mark, which is almost 15 per cent higher than at the same time last season.

Mike Souchak Leads Texas Open In Fantastic Round

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Massive Mike Souchak of Durham, N.C., who fashioned a record-tying 60 and set a nine-hole mark of 27, headed the field that moved toward the half-way point of the $12,000 Texas Open today still talking about a round that was fantastic even for this fantastic tournament.

Such things as a 62 winding up in second place, a golfer who shot three eagles on one round and still was three strokes out of the lead, a player seven under par on five holes, a 68 not finishing in the top 25 and 76 out of 167 bettering par made the round like something out of fiction.

Souchak, the ex-football star of Duke University, finished early in Thursday's opening bout, then sat back and watched the hotshots of the tournament trail try to catch him.

His 60 tied the PGA record for 18 holes held by Al Brosch, Bill Nary, Ted Kroll and Tommy Bolt, and his 27 on the back nine of the 6,400-yard Brackenridge park course cracked the record of 28 held by Ben Hogan, Toby Lyons, and Bolt.

In second place was Freddie Haas of Claremont, Calif., who had a nine-under-par 62 with a smoking putter, and third was huge John Barnum of Grand Rapids, Mich., who shot three eagles and in one stretch of five holes was seven under par. Next in line were Peter Allis of Dorset, England, and Al Balding of Toronto, each with 64.

Souchak shot his great round despite a bogey when he three-putted one green. But he had two eagles and almost equalled Barnum's feat with seven under par in one stretch of six holes. He used only 25 putts on 18 greens.

Barnum was a picture of frustration on the 18th hole—shortest hole on the course. He took a five because he landed in a creek with his tee shot. If he could have birdied the 155-yard, par 3 hole he would have tied Souchak's 60. He

James J. Corbett, master stylist of the ring, died at New York 21 years ago today. He had stunned the sports world in 1892 by knocking out the great John L. Sullivan to become the first world's heavyweight champion under Marquis of Queensbury rules, fighting with gloves instead of the old bare-knuckle style.

Britain Hopes For Dance Title In Skating

VIENNA (CP) — Britain appeared virtually certain to capture the dancing title today as the world figure skating championships moved into their final phase at Vienna's open-air arena.

British couples, led by Jean Westwood and Lawrence Demmy, held the first three places in the dancing competition Thursday after completing three of the four compulsory school figures. The final figure had to be postponed until today because of heavy snow and sleet.

Tenley Albright, 19-year-old Newton, Mass., miss, Thursday regained the women's world title she first won in 1953 to give the United States a clean sweep of individual honors.

LOST LAST YEAR

Tenley lost the title last year to Germany's Gundi Busch — since turned professional—because of a fall while doing a double flip. But there was nothing close to a spill Thursday as the poised, graceful pre-medical student reeled off flips and intricate double jumps which brought continuous cheers and applause from a capacity crowd of 6,500.

Carol Jane Pachl, 17-year-old Canadian women's champion who lives in Montreal but does her training in Ottawa, finished sixth with 58 placements and 175.16 points.

Miss Pachl, wearing a gold lame dress and skating to a melody from "Kiss Me Kate," showed exceptionally fine musical sense in a brilliant exhibition of free skating.

Toronto's Ann Johnston, 18, slipped from eighth at the end of the morning school figures to ninth in the final standing.

Miss Albright was well in front in the field of 22 skaters from 12 countries after the school figures phase of the competition, when contestants must follow prescribed routines. But she pulled even farther ahead in the free skating, in which the contestant conceives her own manoeuvres and is judged on the originality and perfection of execution. Tenley was awarded a total of nine placements and 190.06 points.

Tiny Carol Heiss of New York finished second to Miss Albright, with 28 placements and 180.31 points. European champion Hanna Eigel of Austria was third with 29 and 179.78.

37 FOR TIGERS

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Tigers Thursday signed outfielder Jimmy Delsing and pitchers Dick Marlowe and Bob Schultz, making it 37 players signed. Eight still are unsigned, including outfielder-catcher J. W. Porter, whom Tigers recently refused to sell for $100,000.

Mustangs Clobber McGill Redmen

MONTREAL (CP)—The sharpshooting University of Western Ontario Mustangs overcame an early deficit Thursday night to clobber McGill University Redmen 80-56 and maintain an unblemished 1954-55 senior Intercollegiate Basketball League record.

The triumph was the fifth in as many games for coach Johnny Metras' five and somewhat spoiled the start of McGill's annual winter carnival which officially got under way atop Mount Royal. The Redmen are in fourth position with two victories and four defeats.

Hamilton Cubs Clinch Fifth Place in Race

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Cubs clinched fifth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings by defeating Galt's sixth-place Black Hawks 6-5 Thursday night.

Three goals by Brian Kilrea, two by Billy McNeill and a single by Bill Binnie gave Cubs their edge.

A third-period brawl involved both teams with Cummy Burton, Larry Hillman of Cubs, Brodie and Florent Pilote of the Hawks getting major penalties for fighting. Even Cub goalie Dennis Riggin got into the battle but didn't get a penalty. Hillman and Lalande tangled later in the period, dropping their gloves in a fist fight but each got a minor for roughing instead of five-minute majors.

Hawks gambled with an extra forward instead of goalie Bob Senior in the last minute of play but failed to tie the game.

Galt outshot Hamilton 34-30.

Judge Issues Temporary Order On Two Players

MARLBORO, Md. (AP)—Judge Charles C. Marbury Thursday issued a temporary order restraining Dick (Little Mo) Modzelewski and Bob Morgan from playing for any professional football club other than the Washington Redskins.

The judge also fixed Feb. 25 for hearing on a $50,000 damage suit brought against Jack Hennemier, coach of Calgary Stampeders, by the Redskins who accuse him of inducing the two football players to jump their contract with the Redskins.

Modzelewski and Morgan formerly played with the University of Maryland, where they were star tackles. Hennemier was line coach at Maryland at the time.

The judge's order enjoins Hennemier from attempting to induce any other Redskin players to jump to Canada. There were reports that Hennemier was after other former Maryland players.

Three Victories Put Noranda Rink in Lead

SUDBURY (CP) — A great comeback, consisting of three consecutive victories, has vaulted Terry Justice's Noranda, Que., rink into the Dominion high school curling championships for the second straight year.

The 17-year-old skip, his back to the wall after the first day of play in the northern Ontario schoolboy curling finals Wednesday, took three straight wins, including a playoff victory, Thursday to qualify for the Canadian finals at Sydney, N.S., Feb. 21-25.

A 9-5 playoff victory over Hugh Chesser's Sudbury foursome gave Justice the double round-robin, northern Ontario title.

Chesser, who finished Wednesday's action with three victories and no losses, needed only one win Thursday to wrap up the championship. Justice had one win and one loss after the first day's play. Carl Konefal's Port Arthur quartet, the other rink in the finals, lost all three games the first day.

FORCED PLAYOFF

Thursday morning Justice defeated Konefal 9-6 to hoist his won-and-lost record to 2-1 and then forced the evening playoff by defeating Chesser 12-4 in nine ends in the afternoon.

The playoff victory gave him a record of four wins and one loss. Sudbury was 3-2 and Port Arthur 0-4.

The dark-haired Justice doesn't go into the Dominion finals with the same crew as last year. Only Pete Whitman, his vice-skip, is a holdover. The newcomers are lead Bob Nelson and second Lorne Ames. All four are 17 years old.

But the two new members of Justice's rink are anything but Green. Both were members of the rink that battled Justice down to the wire in the northern Ontario finals last year. Justice liked their style and got together with them this year.

At the same time Justice said he altered his own style a bit this year.

"We played pretty much a clean knockout game last year, but this season I've found that a combination of both knockout and draw unsettles the enemy. We have incorporated both styles into our game."

Terry is confident he'll do better in this year's Canadian championships than in 1954.

"Last year we got off to a bad start. We lost three of our first seven games on the last rock. It got a little discouraging and the boys just blew up after that."

He also thinks most of his trouble is going to come from the western representatives.

"The western rinks are always tough," he says. "Their usual clean knockout style can be very upsetting." But, he added, "we'll be out there trying every minute."

Gobel, Brando Get Heaviest Fan Mail at Present Time

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Seven years ago, an actress named Claire Rochelle got tired of waiting around casting offices and hoping for jobs.

She looked for another line of work and decided she might be able to make a living answering fan mail for movie stars. Her favorite was Howard Duff, the Sam Spade of radio, and she approached him. He signed up as her first client.

Today Claire Rochelle runs an industry that replies to 1,500,000 pieces of mail yearly for 250 stars and TV shows.

PLACE IS BUZZING

Miss Rochelle and her husband, Leo Hirsch, run the United Fan Club and Fan Mail Service from an office on the Sunset Strip. I visited them and found the place buzzing with activity. One secretary was laboring over a batch of George Gobel mail.

"He's our latest sensation," said Miss Rochelle, an attractive redhead. "When we started with him three months ago, he was getting 50 letters a week. Now the figure is 3,800 a month and it's rising all the time."

Another current favorite is Marlon Brando.

"People have a mistaken impression of him," said Miss Rochelle. "He is supposed to have no concern for his fans. The exact opposite is true. He is very interested in the letters and insists that they be answered properly. He never would allow a fan club unless it was set up for charity purposes. Now a girl in New York has done that and he is very interested in it."

Most letters are requests for photos and these are dispatched to the writer. About 15 to 20 per cent require answers, and these are written by a staff of four secretaries. Fourteen others, mostly disabled persons, work on the outside addressing envelopes.

"We can tell when a star is rising in popularity," said Miss Rochelle. "We can also tell when he is slipping badly. It is all reflected in the mail."

A hit picture will bounce a star's mail volume up, she added. When "The Glenn Miller Story" was in release, June Allyson's total leaped from an average month of 4,800 to a top of 7,500.

Some letters to the stars are not in the gentle "I loved your last picture—would you send me a photo?" category.

"When we get one that seems out of line, we file it away," said Miss Rochelle. "Then if it is repeated by the same person, we turn them over to the post office authorities."

"We're just giving them some extra work to help them get in shape for the coming junior playoffs," said general-manager Hap Day. The three were Noel Price, St. Michael's, and Marlboros' players Gerry James and Garry Aldcorn.

Forecasts Second TV Set In Homes Will Be Common

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP) — It hasn't happened to any appreciable extent yet, but an industry veteran predicts that a second television set in the home ultimately will be as commonplace as the extra radio is now.

Says Max F. Balcom, board chairman of the Radio-Electonics-Television Manufacturers Association: "It's the old family setup. Mother wants to see one program, father wants to see another and the children may want to see something else entirely."

No comprehensive survey has been made on how many homes have more than one TV set but industry guesses run from three to five per cent of the total of approximately 33,000,000 in the Unite dStates.

Extra radio sets in homes became a godsend to manufacturers. Sales of extra sets for bedrooms and kitchens and of portables and car radios became a major part of their business. Of last year's U. S. output of nearly 10,500,000 radios, only 3,000,000 were conventional home sets.

Balcom forecasts that manufacture of radios still will be a big business a generation from now. Meanwhile, he predicts that extra TV sets also will account for more and more of the industry's output.

There already is a growing trend among set owners buying larger screen models to keep their old sets for extras instead of trading them in. However, only about 70 per cent of American homes have TV now, so there's a good way to go yet before the two-in-every-home point is reached.

British stars Beatrice Lillie, Gracie Fields and Sarah Churchill will appear in Ed Sullivan's tribute to the late Gertrude Lawrence on his Toast of the Town on CBS Sunday. American stars taking part will include Lily Pons, Helen Hayes and Judith Anderson.

A new filmed show entitled Captain Gallant of the Foreign Legion and starring Buster Crabbe starts on NBC-TV Sunday. The films were shot in North Africa.

AT THE McCARTHY

SWORDS CLASH—AND BREAK IN BIG DUEL

Robert Wagner and James Mason hack out quite a tune for themselves with "singing swords" in a dueling sequence that in rehearsal left them reeling and their swords broken at the hilt for the final sequence in Twentieth Century-Fox's spectacular CinemaScope production, "Prince Valiant," currently at the Odeon McCarthy.

During the try-outs for this all-important moment in the filmization of the popular Harold Foster comic strip feature, Wagner and Mason broke nine sword blades from their hilts and demolished 11 shields—such was their skill strength and vehemence in the action. Then it was that Robert Wagner's real-life father came to the rescue.

Robert, Sr., is a steel manufacturer who finally came through with a new type of steel alloy for the swords to withstand more mayhem than was witnessed in the duel between Richard Burton and Jeff Morrow in "The Robe."

The dueling stars had been using thick 36-inch, four-inch wide Arthurian blades that were so heavy, the swords blunt and dent each other out of shape. Fencing champion Jean Heremans, the actors' instructor, had had the swords made up of aluminum ,duraluminum and several types of steel, but the "authentic" requirements of the medieval swords were both lethally dangerous to both swordsmen and swords.

Robert's father finally produced a special compound of stainless steel that looked as heavy as the swords of the period, but still were light enough to handle and strong enough to withstand the slashing blows. In fact, the duel comes to a finish, more thanks to the magic power of "Valiant's" sword than his prowess over the "Black Knight."

Others in the cast of this stunning production that brings the "Valiant" episodes to life on screen are Janet Leigh, Debra Paget, Sterling Hayden with Victor McLaglen, Donald Crisp, Brian Aherne and Barry Jones, Robert L. Jacks was the producer with Henry Hathaway the director.

AT THE CAPITOL — New romantic singing team — Jane Powell and Vic Damone get together for romance and song in MGM's glittering Technicolor musical, "Rich, Young and Pretty," which marks Damone's first appearance on the screen. Laid against the colorful background of Paris in springtime, the new offering also stars Danielle Darrieux, Wendell Corey and Fernando Lamas. It is now showing today and Saturday at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program the "Bob Mathias Story", starring Bob Mathias himself. AT THE BELLE

'Seven Brides for Seven Brothers' M.G.M.'s Love - Making Cinemascope Musical

There are seven heroes, seven heroines, seven song hits and seven - time - seven laughs in one of the most ingenious plots ever devised for a Hollywood musical in "Seven Brides For Seven Brothers", M. G. M.'s new CinemaScope musical in color, now showing at the Belle Theatre.

Starring Jane Powell and Howard Keel in a cast featuring dancing personalities from screen, stage and the ballet, the plot is taken from Stephen Vincent Benet's story, "The Sobbin Women", based on the classic tale of the abduction of the Sabine women by the ancient Romans. But in the current musical hit is a family of brothers in the Oregon backwoods country of the 1850's who carry off the prettiest girls of a neighboring town and who have to subdue an irate mob of townspeople intent on rescue before they can make the ladies their brides.

As novel as the story idea is the new concept in the development and production of "Seven Brides For Seven Brothers", in which action, songs and dances dovetail, as integral parts of the musical entity. As a result, when Jane Powell, in the role of Milly, sings such infectious melodies as "Wonderful, Wonderful Day", "Goin' Courtin' ", and "When You're in Love"; when Howard Keel, as Adam Pontipee, lends his rich voice to "Bless Your Beautiful Hide" and "Sobbin' Women"; when the girls sing and dance to "June Bride" and "Spring, Spring, Spring", and the brothers make a striking ballad of "Lament", there is no lapse in the action. Instead the songs and dances become part of the action.

The hilarious proceedings start off with a bang when Adam comes to town in search of a bride and sweeps Milly off her feet with an impetuous proposal of marriage. It continues with the impromptu bride's discovery that her wifely duties will include cooking, sewing and cleaning for her husband's six brawny and fractious brothers, her attempts to teach them the rudiments of neatness and chivalry, the collapse of her lessons when they make a free-for-all fighting shambles out of a barn-raising get-together (with the ensemble dance preceding the scrap a show - stopping routine) and the scheme by which they hope to achieve domesticity by stealing the girls they have set their hearts on. They have to put up quite a fight for 'em both during and after the kidnapping, but six shotgun weddings bring the lusty tale to a happy conclusion. It is one of M.G.M.'s outstanding musical hits.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

F· Saturday, February 19, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Any tendency to overstock, to spend on non-essentials could retard progress, rainy-day reserves. Take full advantage of increased knowledge, ways for surer profits to save portions, too.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—You are usually fast, competent and qualified thinkers. Knowing how best to use your talents and capability is your means to succes. But one does not always best utilize days for action!

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Suitable time for planning, checking and putting into effect well understood propositions. Your stars give healthy encouragement; explore new ventures, try for new goals.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Don't be hasty in judgment or action, too quick to form opinions. You may convict wrongly, person or good idea or project. Give all their due fighting chance.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Hold everything a bit. Aspects more receptive as day advances; possibilities increase. You snappy folks, take time to think, plan, but act promptly, too, essential requisite now.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—With tight rein, keen insight into what you really have analyzed, you can go on to gainful results though day is partly mixed. Give your intuitive "hunches" opportunity.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Added responsibilities, self-sacrifices may increase, they must be accepted along with the numerous privileges and blessings we enjoy. They are for our better.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—A benefic, pleasant day for you who keep within your Zodiacal orbit of possibilities. Push work and business matters within reason. Public and personal interests newly favored.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Stimulating vibrations to assist worthy endeavors. Don't make unwise changes suddenly or shift from important projects because they have lost initial interest. Think, fight it out.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—Today's outlook offers opportunity, to exploit your ingenuity, intuition and other valuable Capricorn assets. But we must avoid carelessness in money matters. Have calm attitude.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Some impeding conditions or opposition, maybe from insufficient planning. Studied and well revised action will bring the law of good average to your benefit. Keep trying.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Pursue work, obligations in systematic manner to attain top returns. Purposeful ends realized from rightly carried out effort bring great happiness. Domestic affairs ask care.

YOU BORN TODAY: Usually able and hard working, especially pursuing something you like or have real interest in. Seldom do you get excited. Can go along in steadily improving way. Don't permit lack of purpose at times to cause you to be restless, wavering, misled. Educate your natural desire for higher learning and progress. Your place in the business or professional world can be strong. Once aroused, you will go forward to success many ways. Avoid excesses, unwise associations. Depend upon your religion, and be confident. Birthdate of: Nicolaus Copernicus, Pol. astronomer; David Garrick, famed actor; Adelina Patti, Ital. singer.

Little Benny's Notebook

I had to go to the market for ma for a half a pound of butter, and ma said, Now there's going to be 5 cents change, and right here and now before you start, I beseetch, warn and forbid you to ask if you may keep it.

Yes mam, I said, and ma said, I'm glad that's understood.

Sure, ma, but G, suppose I forget and ask you for it anyways? I said, and she said, Then you may have it on one end and off the other.

Making me feel partly lucky, and I said, G, ma, how do you meen?

I meen I'll cheerfully let you keep it and deduct it with a hundered per cent compound intrist from your next allowance, ma said, and I said, Oh boy, I'll remember.

And I went and came back with the butter and the change, saying, You were right, ma, there's just 5 cents exact change, and I didn't forget, ma, so dont worry.

I'm not worrying, are you? ma said, and I said, No mam, not exactly. Here it is ma, where shall I put it? I said.

Well now that's a serious problem and requires thought, ma said. You could put it on the shelf above the cubberd where the lids are, or right here on the table is a nice prominent place where I can feast my eyes on it. Have you any preferants she said, and I said, No mam.

You might even hand it to me and leave its final disposition to my judgment, ma said.

Which I did, her judgement being to put it in her apron pockit.

Being the sad end.

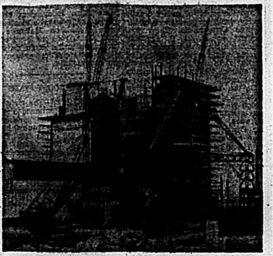
FIGHT DOGS AND FIRE

NEWARK, N. J. (AP)—Firemen had to subdue six dogs with a fine spray of water before they could get busy on a fire in a warehouse here Thursday. The dogs barked and growled as the firemen approached the entrance to the building. The owner explained that he kept the dogs as protection against thieves.

FIRST STEP IN U.K. ATOMIC PROGRAM



This is a view of Calder Hall power station under construction, the first concrete step in Britain's 10-year atomic power program. The first of two 80-foot-high exchangers, or boilers, is hoisted into position here. There will be four of these boilers to each atomic pile, and in them will be created the steam which will run the generating plant. Fuel for the plant will be natural uranium or slightly "enriched" uranium. (Central Press Canadian).

Try to Transfer Lady of Cammo's Riches to Britain

By RON EVANS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Lawyers for the late Mrs. Margaret Maitland-Tennent, the "dark lady of Cammo House"—today said attempts will be made to transfer her Canadian-banked fortune to Britain.

Mrs. Maitland-Tennent named her son Percival, 57, who now lives alone in the family mansion near Edinburgh, sole heir in her will. A second son, Robert, now living in the United States, is entitled to claim one-quarter of the fortune.

Mrs. Maitland-Tennent, who died last month at the age of 95, deposited a total of $270,000 with banks in Victoria, Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal and uebec. In 949 it was reported that she also had sterling to the amount of £41,886 deposited in the U. S.

MARRIED POOR CLERK

Mrs. Maitland-Tennent's life story merits the stranger-than-fiction tag. Daughter of a wealthy sheep farmer, she married David Bennett Clark, a bank clerk earning £150 a year. Four years after the wedding Clark issued a confession of immorality which was registered as a public document.

When his wife bought Cammo House in Dunbarton in 1891, Clark moved in as a boarder, paying 13 shillings a day. His wife, it was reported, rationed out his food from a store kept under her bed.

They were divorced in 1905 on the grounds of Mrs. Maitland-Tennent's desertion, and she resumed her maiden name and retired into the old house with Percival. They emerged only once or twice a week in a curtained automobile to buy food.

Mrs. Maitland-Tennent died 34 years after her ex-husband. She was buried at her request, in the mansion grounds.

U. K. COULD SUE

Canadian finance department officials have said the Canadian banks will pay over the money held in Canada to the legal heir. The money was brought to Canada in a battle by Mrs. Maitland-Tennent over foreign exchange control in Britain.

Canadian authorities say the British government could sue the Canadian banks for the money unless the heir undertakes to bring the dollars back to Britain and exchange them for pounds.

Selling Eggs For Less Than Support Price

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has been selling eggs outside Canada at less than what it paid for them under its price support program.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the Commons Thursday that last December's eggs have been sold on the basis of 37 cents a dozen for grade A large. The support price is 38 cents. Handling charges of about another half cent are involved.

Agriculture department officials said it is the first time price-supported eggs have been sold below cost. They said the December eggs—57,000 cases worth about $700,000 — went mostly to Venezuela.

In reply to a questioner, Mr. Gardiner told the Commons that at the end of 1954 the prices support board had in storage 107,022 cases of 1954 spring storage eggs and 57,000 cases of December eggs. The cases each contain 30 dozen eggs.

Total cost of all the eggs, his tabled answer said, was $2,029,000.

He said the 1954 spring eggs are being converted to melange. This consists of breaking the eggs to sell them unshelled to bakers and other wholesale users.

Child Severely Scalded When Kettle Upsets

PICTON — Charles Smith, 2, was severely scalded when he upset a kettle of boiling water at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Smith. The little boy managed to grasp the kettle which was on the stove and as it tipped over the boiling water poured over his arms and body. He is progressing favorably.

TV THIEVES OPERATING

Television thieves are operating in Prince Edward County, and two instances of such theft have been reported to police. Ross Adams and family, who reside on the third concession of Ameliasburgh township, were absent two hours. When they returned they found both their television and radio sets taken. The home of Claude Marshall at Mount Pleasant was also entered. In addition to taking the TV set, the intruders also took an electric grill.

HAD FIELD DAY

Three juveniles had a field day when they entered a vacant house owned by Mrs. Charles McHenry of Allisonville recently. Furniture, lighting fixtures and windows were smashed. County Constable Earl Marvin investigated and apprehended three boys, two ten-year-olds and the other 14, who admitted doing the damage. Parents have agreed to make restitution.

ANOTHER WOLF SHOT

Another wolf has been shot in the Point Petre area of Prince Edward County. Wednesday, Harry Cowan, who resides at the Outlet, shot a 62-pound specimen. He was accompanied by his son, Charles Cowan. Earlier, the wolf had been chased by another hunting party. Hunters state that there are at least two other wolves in that area and regular hunts are held since the animals molest the many flocks of sheep.

Cyprus Is Rapidly Becoming Headache for Great Britain

By AHAHE GUEBENLIAN

NICOSIA, Cyprus (Reuters)—Cyprus, following a series of riots last December, is fast becoming an administrative headache for Britain.

The disturbances lasted 36 hours and the evidence of shattered shop fronts and smashed windows magnified the old clamor for enosis (union with Greece).

The riots were touched off after the United Nations General Assembly's decision to shelve, for the time being, Greece's plea that Cypriots should be given the right to self-determination.

DEFENCE INVOLVED

Three questions now arise:

1. How long and how far will Britain tolerate a continuation of the open campaign conducted by Archbishop Makarios, leader of the Greek Orthodox Church, for union with Greece despite the UN decision?

2. To what extent is Greece prepared to back the Cypriot Greeks' claim for self-determination?

3. To what extent can the tripartite Balkan alliance remain operative while Cyprus continues to be a bone of contention between Turkey and Greece?

Closely knit with these questions are such things as British colonial policy, Anglo-Hellenic friendship and the efficacy of Western defence in the Balkans.

Early in August, 1954, the Cyprus government put on record its determination "not to tolerate any longer seditious utterances and publications." But the warning remained an empty threat. Archbishop Makarios never ceased to clamor for enosis. His speeches became increasingly violent.

OPPOSE DRASTIC ACTION

Neutral political observers here doubt the prudence at this stage of drastic action such as the deportation of the archbishop and the suppression of the enosis movement.

This, they argue, would bring the government into open conflict with the church and would make the task of administration more difficult.

Another aspect of such a drastic policy would be the attitude of the Cyprus Communists. They, too, support enosis. It is arguable whether a policy of suppression in Cyprus would have the effect of uniting right and left in a powerful alliance "to face the common emergency."

On the Anglo-Hellenic friendship question, the United Nations decision to shelve the Cyprus issue was a British success. But by implication, it brought Greece and the Cypriot Greeks closer than they had ever been

TURKEY IN PICTURE

Turkey has shown restraint in supporting the stand of the 100,000 Cypriot Turks against the Greek demand. But Turkish delegates returning from Ankara after the United Nations decision have given the impression it would not take much for Turkey—in the event of an accelerated enosis campaign—to urge Cyprus Turks to clamor for union with Turkey.

An open dispute between Greece and Turkey then would become inevitable and the efficacy of the Balkan alliance would be to some extent undermined.

All these factors assume special significance now that Britain's Middle East air and land headquarters are based in Cyprus. One immediate task facing the administration is to pacify Greeks and Turks alike. Independent observers here believe that a meeting between Archbishop Makarios and Mufti Dana, religious head of the Turkish minority, could do much to prevent a conflict between their two communities.

WOULD BOOST FINES

TORONTO (CP)—The civic traffic committee recommended to city council Thursday that parking tag fines on rush-hour routes be increased to $10 from $5. Police towed away 2,000 cars found parked on rush-hour routes in only a small section of Toronto last year. About 300,000 parking tags had been issued in 1954.

Detroit Boy, 16, Slays Girl, 9

DETROIT (AP) —A distraught father lifted the slashed and battered body of his curly-haired nine-year-old daughter from an ice-rimmed pond Thursday night. Three hours later a wayward 16-year-old youth callously admitted killing the girl, the county prosecutor reported.

The victim was pretty little Kathleen McLaughlin. Her body was found a short distance from her parents' spacious suburban home in fashionable Franklin Knolls.

Prosecutor Fred Ziem said Floyd Diamond, small for his age and backward in school, admitted stabbing the child repeatedly with a jackknife and crushing her skull with a rock in a fit of passion that built up as he mauled the child in roughhouse play.

The girl's father, John J. McLaughlin, 42, came across the body in the spring-fed pond during a search about two hours after the child was last seen by her family.

Ziem said he probably will seek a waiver of juvenile court jurisdiction so Floyd can be prosecuted for murder.

RECEIVE SENTENCES

TORONTO (CP)—Four men who robbed a branch of the Ontario Savings Bank of $11,095 were sentenced Thursday to a total of 36 years in prison. Sentenced were: Kenneth Churchman, 35, 15 years; Alfred Durham, 29, 10 years; Joseph Lizotte, 27, seven years; and Terry Fanning, 21, four years.

GMC TRUCK NEWS

VALUE-PERFORMANCE-FEATURES KEYNOTE GMC'S NEW POPULARITY

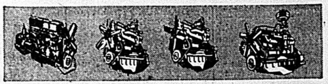
Wide Choice Of Models For Any Hauling Need

Only when you're offered a complete range can you be sure of getting the truck that is precisely right for your needs. GMC offers the most complete range of trucks—from 1,000 lbs. carrying capacity right up to 90,000 lbs.—with engines, frames, axles and transmissions suited to any operating condition. You get a truck that is tailored to your exact requirements, built for your particular job. And GMC is always up to the minute . . . constantly being improved. For instance, there's a brand new Sedan Delivery featuring such things as the Wrap-Around Windshield you see on the latest cars. There's a full-width rear door for maximum and easy loading. And many other improvements that leave other delivery trucks behind. No doubt about it, there's a GMC that's just right for you!

Driver's Safety and Comfort Features

There was a time when all that was expected from a truck was toughness and large capacity. Well, you still need them. But now "driver fatigue" is a recognized factor, and so is safety. GMC trucks feature Comfortmaster double-steel wall cabs, for sure protection. For comfort, such things as No-draft Ventilation, soundproofing and almost passenger-car seating comfort.

Economical Valve-In-Head Engines Cut Running Costs, Build More Profits



GMC offers the widest range of engines in the industry. And GMC high-compression valve-in-head engines are proven most dependable and most economical. Here you can choose from gasoline or diesel and be sure that you are saving money in fuel consumption and, over the years, in service and parts. Here, again, GMC is first with the most to make sure you get the right engine for your hauling job.

Mountain Storm Kills 5 Persons In Denver Region

Seventeen Persons Injured; Snowplows Rescue Missing

DENVER (AP)—Snow still fell in parts of the Rocky mountain states today but the winter's worst blizzard was edging eastward, leaving five known dead and 17 injured.

Snowplows broke through to release the last of 25 persons reported missing as the bitter blow all but halted highway travel.

Rescued near the top of the continental divide in southern Wyoming were 19 passengers and a bus driver, and six men in a station wagon.

Sub-zero cold hung on, however, as many communities were isolated by waist-deep drifts. Snowslides thundered down Colorado mountainsides.

Wismer Libel Suit Against Fraser Dropped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gordon Wismer, former attorney-general of British Columbia, has dropped his libel action against the MacLean-Hunter Publishing Co. of Toronto and Blair Fraser, its Ottawa editor.

The case, before the courts for three years, involved an article published in Maclean's Magazine dealing with the collapse of the B.C. coalition government in 1952.

An order of dismissal of the case without costs was issued by Mr Justice H. S. Wood in the B.C. Supreme Court.

Mr. Wismer agreed to drop the action following a retraction published in the current issue of Maclean's.

"I am quite satisfied," he said. "I have been vindicated. The clearing of my name was all I sought at any time."

During the many court hearings, the freedom of the press was an issue in the arguments.

Mr. Fraser declined to reveal the source of his article, because to do so would be to disclose his "very stock in trade."

House Approvees Tariff Powers For Eisenhower

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's request for new tariff-bargaining powers, approved without change by the House of Representatives after a bitter fight, moved today toward quick consideration in the United States Senate.

The House Friday passed the bil 295 to 110 after beating back 206 to 199, an amendment which would have curbed the president's powers and which its opponents said would have had a "crippling" and "devastating" effect.

the bill would extend the 20-year-old reciprocal trade law for three more years and give the president additional power to reduce tariffs five per cent a year during that period, in return for concessions on U. S. shipments abroad. In addition, he could lower all duties above 50 per cent of the value of the goods down to that level, and could slash by 50 per cent duties on articles imported in negligible quantities.

Chrysler, Union Start Series Of Last-Ditch Talks

WINDSOR (CP) — Negotiators at the Chrysler Corporation of Canada will start a series of last-ditch talks today aimed at settling a contract dispute before a strike deadline next Wednesday is reached.

Teams from the company and the United Automobile Workers (CIO-CCL) are scheduled to meet regularly every afternoon and evening until the contract issues are resolved, or the 6 a. m. EST Wednesday deadline is passed.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: A disturbance west of the Great Lakes moving slowly eastward is bringing milder air to Ontario today. Afternoon temperatures will be in the 30s and low 40s in all but the far north today, and in the eastern half of the province Sunday. With the approach of the disturbance, rain will spread across southern Ontario, and snow or rain across northern regions today and tonight, and will continue Sunday throughout much of the province.

Second Atomic Blast Postponed; Test Small Bomb

By BILL BECKER

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear detonation scheduled for dawn was postponed early today by scientists because of continuing high winds, which earlier caused a three-day delay in opening the spring atomic test series.

At 2 a.m. a straight north wind was blowing 30 to 35 miles an hour, with gusts up to 40. A detonation under those wind conditions, the test chiefs said, would have forced evacuation of the test control point, of Camp Mercury (the AEC support camp), and also of Camp Desert Rock (the army headquarters) because of the danger of radioactive contamination.

A conference was scheduled for this afternoon to discuss a Sunday shot. But meteorologists said the outlook is not good.

INCLUDING TROOPS

Today's shot was to have been the 500-foot tower explosion originally scheduled to open the series last Tuesday. About 450 troops were scheduled to carry out manoeuvres after taking the impact of the blast in trenches 4,000 yards from the tower. Including observers, perhaps 1,100 men were to have taken up trench positions.

The same group watched Friday's show from News Nob, eight miles from a burst beautifully placed above Yucca fat by a B-36 crew from special weapons centre, Kirtland air force base, N.M.

Height of the burst was estimated at 1,500 feet. It was heard in smaller communities to the north and west of the test site, but was not heard or felt in Las Vegas, 75 miles southeast.

Observers classed it with previous small test blasts in the 15-kiloton order or less. The original A-bomb was 20 kilotons. A kiloton is the power equivalent of 1,000 tons of TNT.

5 JUMPERS KILLED SINCE PARATROOP TRAINING BEGAN

8,000 Paratroopers Have Been Trained

OTTAWA (CP) — Five jumpers have been killed since the Canadian army started paratroop training in 1947.

Never once, as far as is known, has there been a case of faulty parachute equipment, the army said Friday. All accidents were caused by bad jumping procedure or through human error.

The army considers its jumping record a fine one, a spokesman said. More than 8,000 army paratroopers have been trained. At a conservative estimate this comes to 30,000 jumps.

RECENT MISHAPS

The army's comments were made in the light of two recent jumping accidents. Pte. Donald Mason, 24, of Victoria, B.C., was killed in a jump Thursday when his 'chute apparently failed to open. L. Cpl. Gerard Gagnon, 23, of Chicoutimi, Que., suffered a leg fracture and broken disc in his back when his 'chute did not open completely during a jump last week near Quebec City.

The army said courts of inquiry into the two cases won't complete their work for at least three weeks.

PACKERS PRAISED

All parachutes used in the army are packed by the ordnance depot at Camp Shilo, Man., one of the army's two jump schools. The other is at Rivers, Man.

"The packers are the unsung heroes of the paratroops," one veteran jumper here said. "We can't speak for the two recent cases but otherwise there has never been a jumping accident caused by faulty equipment.

Last month, the army announced that it has adopted a new type of nylon parachute which will make hitting the silk more comfortable.

The army now has enough paratroops to form the jumping component of an airborne division.

SIX BATTALIONS

Three battalions comprise the mobile striking force: 1st Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry at Calgary; 1st Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment, at London, Ont., and 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, at Valcartier, Que.

The 2nd battalions of each of these regiments, now stationed in West Germany, also are parachute battalions. Besides these six jump battalions, the army has signallers, engineers, medical corps men and others who are trained paratroopers.

It takes four weeks to train a paratrooper, including six jumps from aircraft during the last week. A paratrooper's training extends all the way from heights of four inches to 1,200 feet.

INSIST ON TRIO'S RETURN

VIENNA (AP) — Communist Czechoslovakia has demanded in a new note to the United States the return of three Czech refugees who escaped to West Germany, Radio Prague reported Friday. The broadcast said it was the second Czech note to the U. S. government demanding extradition of refugees Josef and Ctirad Masyn and Milan Paumer.

Compulsory Auto Insurance Is Suggested by CCF Member

TORONTO (CP) — Two opposition members in the Ontario legislature asked the provincial government Friday to consider compulsory automobile insurance and a sickness and hospital insurance plan.

T. C. Thomas (CCF—Ontario) during a debate on the highway safety committee report suggested automobile insurance be compulsory and that the government take charge.

A resolution introduced by Aurele Chartrand (L—Ottawa East) asked the province to set up a select committee to study the feasibility of a sickness and hospital insurance plan which it would sponsor.

The select legislature committee would study any plans or proposals "designed to reduce the financial burden of those people in the province unable to pay for medical treatment or hospital care."

Mr. Thomas said the highway safety committee might have considered the question of compulsory automobile insurance. However, it was felt the matter was not relevant. Mr. Thomas was a member of the committee.

Such a plan would not be popular with insurance companies, said Mr. Thomas.

John Root (PC — Wellington South) suggested the Highway Act be amended to relieve motorists of facing a possible law suit resulting from an accident which might have been prevented by a second or emergency braking system.

Automobile manufacturers have decided to substitute a parking brake for a real emergency brake, Mr. Root said, although the second system was called for by provincial law.

Peter Manley (L — Stormont), speaking on a committee recommendation that speed limits be the responsibility of the minister of highways, said 60 miles an hour was safer on new roads than 50 on some older highways.

The debate on the throne speech will continue Monday. It was adjourned earlier this week.

Soviet Urges Arms Freeze, Destruction of All A-Bombs

MOSCOW (AP) — Reiterating her stand on arms questions, the Soviet Union has called for a world freeze on armaments and the immediate destruction of all atomic and hydrogen weapons.

The Russian declaration was issued Friday night, a week before the scheduled reopening of disarmament discussions in London by a United Nations sub-committee. It announced that Andrei Gromyko, deputy foreign minister, and Jacob Malik, Russian ambassador to London, will represent the Soviet Union in the talks.

Insisting that the Western powers have been intensifying the arms race and the production of atomic weapons by pushing for the rearmament of Western Germany, the statement said:

"The Soviet government considers atomic weapons should be banned and effective international control established for the prohibition of atomic weapons and the reduction of arms and armed forces, first of all of (those) of the major powers.

"An important step in that direction would be an international agreement under which the states would make a solemn pledge to refrain from using such weapons."

The statement proposed that a general international conference on reduction of armaments be held this year and said the Soviet Union wants the countries:

1. To "abolish completely the stocks of atomic and hydrogen bombs which states possess, leading to exclusive utilization of atomic material for peaceful purposes.

"2. Not to increase the size of their armed forces and their armaments as compared with the level of Jan. 1, 1955, as well as not to increase allocations for military purposes as compared with budget allocations for 1955."

The statement said recent decisions of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were aimed at war preparations and "cannot but lead to increased danger of a devastating atomic war."

The statement was issued one day after the British government announced that its scientists are going ahead with production of the H-bomb. So far, the Russians have not commented on the British announcement.

UN circles in New York and United States state department officials in Washington said the Russian statement appeared to be primarily another Soviet attempt to head off West German rearmament. Acceptance of the proposal would prevent the Bonn government from contributing a single soldier to Western defence.

Suggests Britain Throw Away All Nuclear Weapons

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Coincident with the announcement of Britain's decision to build the hydrogen bomb, a respected elder statesman of India suggests that the Western powers throw away all their nuclear weapons—without waiting for Russia to do the same.

Chakravarty Rajagopalachari, India's governor-general and a confidant of Prime Minister Nehru, says such unilateral action might make the worries of the atomic age seem, in retrospect, "an ugly dream that dissolved when it reached its climax in terror."

"To get rid of fear is different from trying to get rid of a danger," he writes in a letter to the New Statesman and Nation. "To seek to remove a danger . . . is really to continue in fear. To expect your enemy to agree to give up what has definitely added to his power of generating terror is a vain thought.

"You should give up your fear without waiting for the other man to give up his power. The only way to get control over the hellish power (of nuclear weapons) is not the retaining of the power for purposes of retaliation but by unilaterally giving it up. . . ."

At another point, Rajagopalachari says it might be better to let the world be destroyed altogether than live in this "hell of continuous fear."

Arctic No Place To Test, Explode Hydrogen Bomb

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian officials Friday expressed doubt that the Arctic could be used as a site for testing and exploding a hydrogen bomb.

"I have never considered that possibility," said Northern Affairs Minister Lesage. "We have a lot of people up there, the weather-station men and Eskimos."

The question of whether the Arctic could be used as a possible site arose among observers here following Britain's announcement that she will build an H-bomb.

A London dispatch said no hint has come from any quarter as to where Britain plans to test the new bomb once it is completed.

WON'T ALLOW THEM

She has tested atomic weapons in isolated Australian territories but the Australian government said it will not allow H-bomb tests in that country.

The United States has carried out her major thermonuclear explosions in isolated Pacific islands and officials here suggested that Britain also might be wise to pick such a site because of the danger of the radioactive fall-out that usually follows such an explosion.

The possibility of using the Canadian Arctic would be complicated by difficulties in getting test materials into the barren areas. Another problem would be that Russian territory is relatively close, making it fairly easy for Soviet scientists to judge results of the bomb tests.

Louis Riel's Grand-Nephew Objects To Reds Claiming Riel as Their Own

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A Manitoba Liberal whose western ties go back to the days of the fur trade says the memory of Louis Riel is being tainted by Communist attempts to claim the Metis leader as a folk hero of their cause.

The tug-o'-war over the man who twice led his part-white, part-Indian people in armed uprising aimed at Metis self-government in Canada's West developed in the Manitoba legislature Friday.

W. A. Kardash, Labor-Progressive member for Winnipeg North and the only Communist MLA in Manitoba, suggested that a monument honoring Riel as a "great man and great statesman" be placed on the legislature grounds.

He told the House Riel had formed the first democratic government in Manitoba with the Red river uprising of 1869.

Roger Teillet, Liberal-Progressive member for St. Boniface and a grand-nephew of Riel, replied that Mr. Kardash did not honor Riel by bringing up the matter. Just the opposite. If the Communist MLA's purpose was to have the "smears on his memory" continued he was taking the right action.

Without elaborating, Mr. Teillet said it has been suggested in some quarters that "authority" be used to prevent what he called the annual pilgrimage of Mr. Kardash and his comrades to Riel's grave at the nearby St. Boniface cathedral.

After the second uprising, in 1884, Riel was convicted of treason. He was hanged in Regina Nov. 16, 1885.

HOUSE ENDORSES IMMIGRATION POLICIES OF GOVT.

Non-Confidence Motion Of P.C.'s Beaten 116-62

OTTAWA (CP)—Federal immigration policies and practice have received majority endorsement in the Commons.

After 2½ days of debate the House voted 111 to 62 Friday to defeat a Progressive Conservative motion of non-confidence in the government.

The motion said immigration policy is not clear, consistent, coordinated or in keeping with Canada's needs and responsibilities, and that its administration denies "simple justice" to Canadians and non-Canadians.

The Liberal majority found support from one opposition member, W. D. Wylie (SC-Medicine Hat) in defeating the motion. The motion otherwise was backed solidly by opposition groups.

SPEECHES EARLIER

Main speeches in the immigration debate were made earlier in the week.

But Finance Minister Harris, former immigration minister, added a postscript Friday.

He rejected opposition arguments that would - be immigrants should have an appeal to the courts against department decisions. The courts could deal with a quota system but that would be too rigid in times of economic difficulty when it was desirable to reduce immigration.

"A flexible policy in which a minister of the government would be responsible to Parliament has always been the basis upon which immigration was permitted into Canada."

ASKS HUMANE APPROACH

A Social Credit member, however, called for a humane approach to immigration.

Ambrose Holowach, Edmonton East, said the immigration department seems to have the attitude that more immigration would bring increased economic liabilities.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) said there is a wide gap between theory and practice in the stated immigration policy of maintaining the fundamental charcter of the country.

He quoted Mr. Harris as saying Canada should avoid immigrants whose viewpoints differed from that of "the average respectable God-fearing Canadians."

No civil servant should have the final say on who was a "God-fearing Canadian."

John B. Hamilton (PC—York West) said not enough has been done to encourage immigrants from the United Kingdom. The government should help pay their ocean fare. To overcome difficulties in British restrictions on removal of capital, Canada would take over the securities of would-be U.K. immigrants in return for Canadian funds.

Nationalist Planes Score New Victory Off Taishan Isles

Reds' Motorized Junks Slaughtered by Air Attack

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — The Chinese Nationalist air force said its planes destroyed 15 of 23 motorized Communist armed junks spotted near the Taishan islands in the Formosa strait today.

The air force said five other junks were damaged heavily.

This was in the same area where the Nationalist air force and navy claimed to have sunk 21 Red ships and a submarine Friday.

Tonight's communique said all planes returned safely. There was no mention of any opposition by Chinese Communist planes.

Another communique reported that Nationalist planes heavily bombed installations on the Taishans Friday night and possibly destroyed one warship. It apparently was the same claim made in a late communique Friday.

REDS BUILD UP

The Reds appear to have been making an intensive effort to build up on the Taishans, in striking range of Nationalist positions on Nanchi island.

Newspapers report that the Chinese Communist troop and supply ships sunk Friday in Nationalist China's biggest naval victory radioed for air cover, but no Red planes appeared.

The Nationalists claimed 21 ships and a submarine sunk in the blazing action 120 miles northwest of Formosa and only 15 miles from the Red mainland.

The newspapers hail the victory as revenge for the sinking of the destroyer escort Taiping by Red torpedo boats off the Tachens in November and Communist seizure of Yikiangshan island north of the Tachens last month.

TOOK INITIATIVE

"Our success Friday proves we could win every battle if we take the initiative," says the China Daily News, an official newspaper. "We shall take it, swiftly and relentlessly in many battles to come."

Admiral Lee Yu-hai, who brought his victorious fleet back to Keelung today, estimated Red casualties in excess of 1,000 dead.

Pilots said they saw a submarine surface about 3:50 p. m. and scored direct hits. They reported it "sank into the sea."

The submarine episode is viewed with some reservation here, because the Nationalist air force has not had much experience in submarine attacks. The Chinese Reds are not known to have submarines, but Russia has many in Far East and northern waters.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former senator Homer Ferguson (Rep. Mich.) is slated to be the next United States ambassador to the Philippines. This was confirmed Friday by Brig.-Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, special Philippine envoy.

Liberal Says Dog Licensed To Drive Auto

TORONTO (CP)—G. T. Gordon, Liberal member for Brantford in the Ontario legislature, said Friday operators' permits are so easy to obtain in Ontario that one man got a driver's licence for his dog.

Rev. D. M. Kerr (PC—Toronto Dovercourt) said Mr. Gordon was exaggerating.

Mr. Gordon said he wasn't, that the man paid $1 and received the licence for the dog.

"The next thing we know the dog will be voting," said Ontario Liberal leader Farquhar Oliver.

"What a government, it will do anything for a buck," said J. B. Salsberg Communist Labor-Progressive member for Toronto St. Andrew.

Pineau Fails In Bid to Win Premier's Post

PARIS (AP) — France's latest government crisis entered its third week today as the National Assembly rejected Christian Pineau's premiership bid.

Pineau, who lost out 31 to 68 in a post-midnight vote, immediately reported his defeat to President Rene Coty. The president, who has given three aspirants a chance since Pierre Mendes-France was voted out Feb. 5, lost no time arranging a series of consultations in quest of a new candidate.

Predictions are that Coty will settle on a member of the Radical Socialist (moderate) party. Seen as likely choices are Edgar Faure, Andre Morice, Maurice Bourg Es-Maunoury and Senator Jean Berthoin. All were former ministers and all but Morice had served in Mendes-France's government.

Ontario Hydro's Steam Plant Blasts Due Same Cause as Loss of Comets

TORONTO (CP) — The breakdown last April of two huge generators in Ontario Hydro's R. L. Hearn station on the Toronto waterfront was attributed Friday night to brittle fractures—the same kind of metal failure that caused the explosion of two of Britain's Comet jetliners over the Mediterranean.

Sir Claude Gibb, chairman and managing director of C. A. Parsons and Co. Ltd., the biggest turbine firm in the Commonwealth, Friday night at a meeting gave details of the investigation into the causes of the explosions the one here closed the $56,000,000 Hearn plant.

A major factor in both the Comet and the Hearn failures was a cycle of unusual stress, Sir Claude said. In the case of the Comets, it was the pressure to which the metal of the aircraft was subjected. In the case of the Hearn plant, it was the cycle of closing down the generators almost daily.

The British industrialist and scientist said the brittle fractures in the Hearn plant took place in forged steel bells on the end of the massive rotor bodies.

The No. 1 unit of the Hearn station failed last April 1 and the second unit broke down two days later while Parsons experts were examining the wreckage of the first unit. Fires caused extensive damage but no one was killed. The breakdowns took 536,000 horsepower from the Ontario Hydro service.

Massive parts of machinery from the plant were flown back to the Parsons plant at Newcastle-on-Tyne for examination. Sir Claude said that no similar failures had occurred in Parsons' equipment before.

"There was no single factor which caused the failures but a combination of factors, never previously experienced together led to a stress which, repeated a sufficient number of times, brought about a failure."

He said the major factor was the brittle fracture. Others included holes bored through the bells for cooling purposes, and scratches on the surface of the metal. A scratch 3-100ths of an inch deep reduces the strength of the metal 40 per cent, he said.

Another important factor was the tremendous stress applied to metal in the daily starting and stopping of the machinery.

Monte Hall, Radio Personality, Will Emcee Big Variety Show

A lot of people especially Monte Hall fans, the followers of that brilliant radio personality who features the 'Who Am I?' airwaves program will get the chance to see and meet their favorite here at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow night.

Monte is coming here with an all-star vaudeville cast to feature the stage show "Varieties of 1955" which is being staged in aid of Variety Village, an institution which teaches crippled youngsters to be self-sustaining.

Monte is looking forward to his first visit to Belleville. He was scheduled to appear here last year but was stricken with illness at the last minute and could not put in an appearance. However everything is set for this year and Monte will be here in person.

With him will be four of the outstanding vaudeville attractions of Toronto. The Len Moss trio a talented threesome of accordionists will be on deck as will be beautiful Peggy Brooks, television star. Peggy is a comedienne of brilliant ability and she should stop the show. Then there is Wally Koster another CBC star and Gerry Leader, comedian extraordinary who will add to the evening's fun.

PICTON STARS

From Picton comes the upsurging "Blue Tones" as a quintet of teen-agers who made an instant hit in their initial appearance of television via station WHAM, Rochester.

The entire show, which also features the latest in motion picture fare is being sponsored by the Bay of Quinte Theatre Managers' Association. This organization, well-known for its community efforts embraces Napanee, Trenton as well as Belleville. Messrs. George Forhan of the Belle Theatre, Tommy Mascara, Capital, and Willard Fawcett of the McCarthy, join with their fellow managers in the other centres in doing a swell job for the crippled kiddies of the province.

The show said to be one of the best footlight attractions brought here in many years, gets under way at nine o'clock tomorrow night, and admission is by "invitation" only. These can be secured at any of the above-mentioned theatres today.

The entire proceeds of the attractions go to Variety Village. Stage artists and Mr. M. Hall are donating their services as are the theatre managers. It is a very worthy cause. So get yourself an invitation and not only enjoy a brilliant entertainment but in so doing help youngsters less fortunate than your children and ours.

5,000 RINGS STOLEN

CHICO, Calif. (AP) — Burglars stole $165,000 worth of rings from a jewelry store here Friday night, police reported. The rings—5,000 of them—were in a salesman's sample case belonging to Arthur Lampert of Los Angeles. He left it in a store which closed at 5:30. Three hours later the door was found jimmied open, and the case gone.

CNRAA Cagers In Montreal For Title Games

Members of the Canadian National Railway Athletic Association will be busy this weekend. The basketball team of Lloyd Kellett, Bill Galt, John Forrester, Ray Mortimer, Bill Foster, Harvey Stolliker, Phil Bridger and in charge of Dave Lockyer, journey to Montreal to engage with teams from Stratford, London, Toronto, and Montreal in a round robin for the championship of the system.

The team representing Belleville is a good fast court team and should give a good account of themselves in tough company.

This Saturday evening three bowling teams from the C. N. R. Telegraphs in Toronto will be in the city to take on the keglers from the CNRAA. The game will be played at the Bowl-O-Drome after which a social hour has been arranged for the visitors.

Bright Weather Increases Trade On Market Here

Activity on the local market perked up with the advent of bright, warmer weather this morning. More traders appeared on the outside market than in many weeks although there was no increase in the variety of the produce.

Carrots sold for 50 cents a six-quart basket; turnips 75 cents a basket and beets 50 cents a basket. Cabbages were five to 15 cents a head and white beans 50 cents a quart. Onions brought 50 cents a basket for cookers and Spanish onions were 10 cents each, two for 25 cents. Potatoes were $3 a 75-lb bag for No. 1, 50 cents a basket.

Apples formed the bulk of the offerings with Spies $3.50 a bushel, 80 cents a basket; McIntosh, $3 and 75 cents; Snow $2.50 and 65 cents; Delicious, $4.50 and 90 cents.

On the inside market eggs were up two cents, with large grades bringing 45 cents, medium 43 cents and small 38 cents. Sauerkraut was 20 cents a quart and poultry 45 cents a pound for fowl, 50 cents for spring chickens.

Snow Sculpture By Pupils Praised

A friendly competition in snow sculpture by pupils of Sir Winston Churchill public school resulted in the production of some 75 snow and ice figures in the school's playground Friday.

C. I. Frederick, principal, reported that the idea, presented students by the staff, resulted in the production of figures ranging from the Nativity Scene and a seven-foot Abraham Lincoln, to alligators, British bulldogs, dragons and snow men of all sizes and types.

"Everyone enjoyed the experience fully," he said.

Pupils started their sculpturing at the morning recess and finished the figures Friday afternoon.

"The teachers inspected the figures and complimented the sculptors," said Mr. Frederick. "The teachers didn't assist in the construction of the figures."

"We thought that something like this might be more constructive for the children than throwing snowballs," he said.

Sir Winston Churchill school has an enrolment of 250 pupils up to Grade 6.

Obituary

ALBERT E. GRINDROD

PICTON.—One of the town's leading businessmen, Albert E. Grindrod, died very suddenly at his home, from a heart attack, Thursday night. He was 54, and owner of Grindrod Motors, service station, garage and show rooms.

A charter member of Picton Rotary club, he was its third president. As chairman of its Underprivileged Children's Committee, he devoted a great deal of time to this work. Members of the club will attend the funeral service in a body, Sunday afternoon in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene.

A member of the Anglican church, Mr. Grindrod was rector's warden for four years and a member of the Laymen's Association.

He was a member of town council in 1944-45-46, serving as reeve in the latter year. He was also a member of Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce, Prince Edward Yacht Club, Prince Edward Lodge No. 18, A.F. & A.M., Prince Edward Chapter No. 31 Royal Arch Masons, and a director of the Eastern Ontario Division of the Ontario Crippled Children's Society.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Alfred Grindrod; his wife, the former Clare Hineman, a daughter, Mrs. Fred Welsh; two brothers, John of Belleville and George of Picton; two sisters, Mrs. George Publow and Mrs. W. H. Hunt, Picton.

MRS. HESTER LETITIA BURKITT

The funeral of Mrs. Hester Letitia Burkitt was held from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home on Friday afternoon. The service in the chapel was conducted by Rev. A. Poulter, who also said the committal rites in Burrs cemetery.

The bearers were Cyrus Tulford, Keith Blakely, William Soble, Ross Burr, Floyd Huffman and Clifford Hough.

DR. MICHAEL FEENEY

MARMORA.— Requiem Mass was held at the Sacred Heart church, Marmora, on Wednesday morning for Dr. Michael Feeney, of London, Ontario, formerly of Marmora, who died in a London hospital on Sunday at the age of 54, following a prolonged illness.

Rev. Father J. Feeney of Erinsville, cousin of the deceased, celebrated the Mass. Also in the sanctuary were Very Rev. L. B. Garvin and Rev. Father Murphy, of Belleville and Rev. W. P. Healey, parish priest. Interment was in the Sacred Heart cemetery. The bearers were D. Cook, V. M. Lynch, F. McKinnon, A. M. Jones, J. W. Hickey, E. Brady, W. Shannon and C. T. Nicholson.

Deceased was the son of the late John Feeney and Elizabeth Gillen, and spent his early years in Marmora. He was a veteran of both World Wars, enlisting at an early age for the first one. Upon his return he worked for a few years in the laboratory of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company Limited. He then decided to enter the medical profession entering Queen's and continuing his labors at Deloro on vacations until his graduation. As he graduated he obtained a Gold Medal for surgery.

The call to service came again as the Second World War came. Following his enlistment as a medical officer, he proceeded overseas spending some time in England and Italy. He was discharged with the rank of major. He was popular throughout life with all classes and his death is deeply and widely mourned.

He was married to Mary Auger, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Auger, who survives. He is also survived by seven children, all resident in London, namely, Mary Elizabeth, Reg.N., Mrs. Charles Elliott (Jane Anne); Mrs. Patrick Mahoney (Josephine), Michael, David, James and Eleanor. Further surviving are two sisters, Mrs. R. E. Lyons, Sudbury and Mrs. B. F. Thompson, New York and one brother, Fred Feeney, resident in British Columbia.

MRS. ROBERT KINLOCH
(Garson - Madoc)

Funeral of Mrs. Welma Kinloch, Garson, Ont., formerly of Madoc, was held this week in Garson, prior to interment at Flinton, Ont.

Mrs. Kinloch died at her home in Garson February 11, she was 48. Born Welma Renaud at Flinton, she was the wife of Robert Kinloch, formerly of Madoc. She was a member of the Roman Catholic Church at Garson.

Mrs. Kinloch leaves her husband, one son, Harold, Hornepayne, Ont., one daughter, Marian, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., her mother, five sisters and four brothers.

SERVANT'S FUTURE ASSURED

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—An Atlanta woman's will has set up a $50,000 trust fund to support a faithful Negro servant for the rest of his life. Mrs. Flora McDaniel Pitts made the provision in the will recorded Friday. Louie Hawkins, about 70, is to receive the net income in monthly installments. Mrs. Pitt's lawyer said Hawkins had served the family "since childhood" and "had never given any trouble."

'The Moon in the Yellow River' Smooth Piece of Work That Missed Being Good Is View

"The Moon in the Yellow River", the Ottawa Little Theatre Inc. entry in the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival here, glowed feebly last night for adjudicator Andre Van Gyseghem. More than 800 attended the performance.

"It was a smooth piece of work that missed being good," he said in a brilliant 25-minute adjudication.

"The settings were really dull," he said. "They showed no imagination. I have never seen the straight line used to such devastating effect. There was no relief to the eye."

"There is no use their telling me they left half their set home," said Mr. Van Gyseghem, "I have seen better sets than this carried farther than this in New Brunswick. They showed no appreciation of design."

"The Moon in the Yellow River", by Denis Johnston, is a story of methodical German practicality trying to cope with the fey logic of Irish rebels. The conflict is centred around the attempt of a group of poetic, but seemingly inept Irish rebels, to destroy an electric generating station, which is managed by a German engineer. Destruction of the powerhouse, eventually accomplished by the rebels by accident, is for them a symbol of the triumph of the human spirit over a materialism which enslaves in the name of progress.

BEAUTIFULLY WRITTEN

Mr. Van Gyseghem termed the play "good theatre that is entertaining with many good character parts. It is beautifully written by one of the finest Irish writers of the English language."

"I found, however, all the best performances in the smaller parts."

Syd Webb, as Tausch, the German engineer was described as "an experienced performer, at home on the stage, with a good strong voice, and easy movements. He shouldn't have let his accent get in the way," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

"It was an assured polished, forceful performance," he said, "but I think there was a lot more to be done with the characterization."

Earl Smyth, as a tippling sailor, "established the character with his solidity, narrow viewpoint and inebriation. He came through as a real person."

Douglas Cooke, as Potts, another alcoholic seaman, "made a very good attempt at the character but his appearance was shocking."

"He was terribly hampered by his appearance," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

Kevin Conlon, as Dobelle, an intellectual Irishman with a warped outlook, lacked warmth.

"He gave an intelligent, sustained reading," said Mr. Van Gyseghem, "but there was more to the character than that. The actor didn't fully understand the character."

Andree Cunningham and Moira Dunbar, as Irish servants with more authority than the head of the house, were praised for "good, forceful voices," and "for the placing of their comedy lines."

"Both played very well. They conceived the characters clearly."

DELIGHTFUL PERFORMANCE

David Battle, as "Willie", a stupid rebel accomplice, gave a "delightful performance." His stupidity was really incredible. Through it all he was a darling broth of a boy. Everything he did helped the character. "He showed a great instinct for the part. He was warm, human and likeable. It was the best performance in the play."

Director Roger Proulx, as Blake the "brains behind the rebels" "didn't get the sardonic clash of wit, words and ideology. He missed the ironic glint and twinkle of the part. When he died in the second act I wasn't terribly upset," said Mr. Van Gyseghem, "and I should have been moved that he had been killed pointlessly."

Nancy Young as Blanaid, Dobelle's daughter, gave "a nice, sincere performance but she was badly dressed. She looked too much like the neat, tidy schoolgirl she wanted to be and not the wild child the playwright made her."

Don Wall, as a policeman who shoots the rebel leader, "had the immobility that brought a sense of menace," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

"The production lacked subtlety. The players did not go far enough into the characterizations. Groupings were good and there was no clumsy physical work by the director," he said.

"The pace was good but unvarying and the climaxes were not developed except for the comedy and there is more to the play than the comedy," he said. Stress on the comedy produced an unbalanced production.

SEVERE IN CRITICISM

"I am severe in my criticism," said Mr. Van Gyseghem, "because this is an experienced company. They gave a performance of good amateur standing but they missed doing a very good piece of work."

The festival continued this afternoon with the presentation of three one-act plays by Canadian playwrights. Companies entered in one-act play competition are from Ottawa, Hull, and Belleville.

Tonight's play is "Malbrough S'En Va T'En Guerre, by Le Theatre du Pont Neuf, of Hull.

The Calvert trophy 'Faun" will be presented to the winning company tonight following Mr. Van Gyseghem's final adjudication. A cheque for $100 will be awarded the winning company by Calvert Distillers.

A feature of last evening's entertainment was distribution of attractive illustrated booklets on the 13 Calvert trophies and the Canadian sculptresses who did the work in native woods.

Auto Association Voices Criticism Of Toll Highways

TORONTO: The Canadian Automobile Assoc. opposes toll turnpikes if adequate free roads can be provided by conventional means, according to a brief sent to Premier Frost by Warren B. Hastings, general manager of the Ontario Motor League.

In his brief, Mr. Hastings notes that his submission is, in part, a response to an inquiry by the Premier as to the attitude of the American Automobile Association on the question.

Toll turnpikes, according to Mr. Hastings, are the most costly to finance, to construct, to maintain and operate.The position of the association is that "toll turnpikes are wrong in principle and wrong in practice, except in extraordinary circumstances."

LOTTERIES BILL FAILS

LONDON (Reuters)—A personal bill to legalize running of small lotteries for charitable and sporting purposes was talked out in the House of Commons Friday. The bill was sponsored by Conservative member Sir Eric Farrington, who argued that lotteries run by supporters of athletic teams and religious bodies would do valuable work in financing such activities.

Less Than Ten Days to Secure Auto Markers

With less than ten days until the deadline for 1955 auto markers a long lineup for new licence plates is expected between now and the end of the month.

Fred Symons, local licence issuer, stated today that less than half of Belleville and district motorists had so far secured their 1955 licences and operating permits. "Unless there is an extension beyond Feb. 28th, and apparently there will be no extension, there is bound to be a long lineup for markers," he said.

Mr. Symons urged motorists to secure their markers as soon as possible and thus avoid the almost certain last minute rush. Extra girls will be on duty to issue licences during the last week, it was stated.

Two Employees Of Detective Agency Charged

OTTAWA (CP)—Two employees of a Montreal private investigation firm were accused Friday in the Commons of impersonating police officers illegally in getting divorce evidence.

They were identified as George C. Hider and Charles Charron, employed by the Maxham Investigation Bureau of Montreal. Commons members said they posed as police to get into hotel rooms to trap husbands with co-respondents in two divorce cases before the House.

Thomas Goode (L — Burnaby-Richmond) and Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre) suggested they should be prosecuted for impersonating policemen.

SIMILAR ELSEWHERE

Mr. Knowles, a long-time advocate of having Quebec and Newfoundland divorce actions transferred from Parliament to the courts, said similar deception is being practised in other cases.

"I don't think that is the proper basis on which to ask Parliament for a divorce," he said.

Last Nov. 4 two other Montreal private detectives were sentenced to 15 months when convicted in Ottawa of trying to set up a phony love nest to gather evidence for a divorce case.

Maurice Pichette, 36, and Paul Santerre, 35, were convicted of attempting to fabricate evidence and of operating as private detectives in Ontario without a licence. They pleaded guilty to the latter charge and were fined $200 apiece.

SCRIVEN. — In loving memory of our dear grandson, Irving John William Scriven, who passed away two years ago, February 19th, 1953 at the age of three months and twenty-two days.

Fondly loved and deeply mourned,
Heart of my heart I miss you so.
Often, my darling, my tears will flow,
Dimming your picture before my eyes.
But never the one in my heart that lies.
The stars seem dim as I whisper low,
"My own darling boy, I miss you so!"

—Ever remembered by grandmother, grandfather, Uncle Mick, Aunt Kay, Aunt Sandyra. F19

SCRIVEN. — In loving memory of our dear son, Irving John William Scriven, who passed away suddenly two years ago February 19th, 1953 at the age of three months and twenty-two days.

Two years have passed since that sad day,
When one we loved was called away.
God took him home—it was His will,
Within our hearts he liveth still.

—Sadly missed and dearly loved by mother, father, brothers Gary, Reggie and Eddie. F19

RORABECK. — In loving memory of my dear husband, Cortland (Dave) Rorabeck, who passed away February 20th, 1953.

Beside your grave I often stand,
With heart both crushed and sore.
But in the gloom the sweet words come,
Not lost but gone before.
God knows how much I miss you,
He counts the tears I shed
And whispers that he only sleeps,
Your loved one is not dead.
So I'll be brave dear Dave,
And pray to God each night,
And when He calls me home with you
Your smile will guide the way.

—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by his wife Loyola. F19

WATCH. — In loving memory of a dear cousin, Linda Karen Watch, who passed away February 17th, 1953.

A silent thought, a secret tear
Keeps her memory ever dear.
Time takes away the edge of grief,
But memory turns back every leaf.

—Ever remembered by Joyce, Fred, Perry and Craig. F19

WATCH. — In loving memory of a dear daughter, Linda Karen Watch, who passed away February 17th, 1953.

Deep in our heart is a picture
More precious than silver and gold;
It is the picture of our dear daughter
Whose memory will never grow old.

How Chipmunks Got Their Name

By NANCY CLEAVER

"I would rather be the children's storyteller than the queen's favorite or the king's counsellor," Kate Douglas Wiggin, the famous author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," once declared.

Today, there are so many stories which children can listen to on the radio, on TV, at the public library, at school! But there is still one special story, the Bedtime Story, which belongs especially to parents. Mother and Dad can take tips on how to tell this last story of the day to little folk from their child's favorite story teller. They should never make the mistake of concluding that the Bedtime Story has lost its charm!

There should be a special place on the bookshelf for these stories. A very little child loves picture book stories, nursery rhymes and the old favorites such as the Three Little Pigs or Goldilocks and the Three Bears, Kipling's Just So Stories, Hans Christian Andersen's Fairy Tales and The Tar Baby Stories by Uncle Remus are loved by older children.

GREAT HELP

The childrens' librarian at the public library is a great help in suggesting suitable stories. Bible stories should not be forgotten and Hurlburt's Stories of the Bible contains a fine selection. Nature legends are another source of stories and they form part of our heritage from "The First Canadians."

This is the Red Indians' story of How the Chipmunk Got His Stripes. Read this aloud or tell it from memory to your small son or daughter—or have your school age child read it aloud to you!

Once there were no chipmunks, only squirrels, and the squirrels were the same bright merry little animals they are now. Unfortunately, a strange disease broke out among a certain tribe of indians. As they had no Medicine Man, they were in a very sad plight. Day by day, more fell sick, and although they tried all the remedies they knew, none of them seemed to do any good.

HELD COUNCIL

The animals in that district heard about this sickness and they held a council to discuss it. The big council-ring of all the animals was not at all friendly to the poor Indians, for, as the Bear said, "Why should we worry about his troubles? He never does us any good, and he even kills some of us for food with his bow and arrow."

There was only one animal who dared to speak up in favor of the Indians and that was the small Red Squirrel. Glancing a little nervously at the big animals near him, when it came his turn he said bravely, "Well, this sickness is pretty tough luck on the tribe. If we can do something to help them — I think that we should!"

The Bear glowered at him. "Who are you to oppose me?" he asked.

"I, too, have one vote in this council," the Squirrel replied.

The Bear became frightfully angry and in a gust of passion he leaped at the Squirrel and grabbed him in his two front paws. He would teach this impudent little fellow a lesson!

FRIGHTENED

The Squirrel was terribly frightened, but he struggled hard to get away. The Bear's claws dug into his sides. With a last frantic effort the Squirrel scrambled out of his clutches and ran away as fast as he could. The Bear followed him for a short distance. But he soon gave up the chase and grumbling to himself, he returned to the council ring.

The little Squirrel ran on and on until he was out of breath. He was afraid to hide in the forest for fear one of the animals should catch him in the dark. His scratches were hurting. In desperation he went to the door of a wigwam and sought refuge.

The Indian asked him in and took care of him. They became good friends. The great god, Manitou, gave to the Squirrel, as a reward for his courage at the council-ring, the gift of knowledge and the ability to use the Indian's language.

SOON HEALED

So the Squirrel was able to tell his host how to make medicines from the gums of pine, spruce and balsam and the bark of the slippery elm. The sick Indians were gradually healed by taking the medicine. At the same time, the Squirrel's sides got better, but the scars remained.

Next year, the Squirrel built his home beside the wigwam. The new little family of squirrels had stripes on their sides just like their father's. The Indians named them "Chipmunks." Ever since that time both the squirrels and chipmunks have been friends of man and like to live near his home.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

Faith of Our Fathers

Faith of our fathers! living still
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword;
Oh, how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word:
Faith of our fathers! holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death!

Our fathers, chained in prisons dark,
Were still in heart and conscience free;
How sweet would be their children's fate,
If they, like them, could die for thee.
We will be true to thee 'till death.

Faith of our fathers! we will love
Both friend and foe in all our strife;
And preach thee, too, as love knows how,
By kindly deed and virtuous life;
Faith of our fathers! holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death!

Protestantism has no finer or more popular hymn than "Faith Of Our Fathers", written nearly a century ago by a Catholic—Frederick William Faber—just after he had given up an Episcopal rectorship to join the Roman Church.

The hymn first appeared in "Catholic Hymns For Singing And Reading," published in 1849, and in a preface to that volume Faber explained that all of the songs in the collection had been written to give his fellow Catholics some hymns marked by the same simplicity and religious fervor that characterized those used by the Wesleys in their famous English revival meetings.

It was at Oxford, from which he was graduated in 1836, that Faber found his first interest in Catholicism—an interest which was whetted by a European tour which he made in 1839, following his ordination to the Episcopal priesthood.

Returning from his trip he served very successfully for a time as rector at Elton, England. But always he was troubled by religious doubts and misgivings and finally, one mid-November Sabbath evening in 1845, he told his parishioners that he had decided to become a Catholic. That very week he joined a Catholic church in Northampton.

Faber's hymns, free from limiting creeds and denominational barriers and prejudices, are precious to Christians of every faith and sect. In most of his songs, the hymnist has sung of his own spiritual reactions and longings. Discussing his hymns, he once said: "It is an immense mercy of God to allow anyone to do the least thing which brings souls nearer to Him. Each man feels for himself the peculiar wonder of that mercy in his own case. That our blessed Lord has permitted these hymns to be of some trifling good to souls, and so to contribute in a very humble way to His glory, is to the author a source of unmerited consolation".

A Lift For Living

On Being Broad Minded

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

We all desire to be thought broad-minded. We resent being called narrow or bigoted. We are almost as afraid of getting into a rut as into the grave. But how do we keep our minds broad and open?

Suppose we start out with an easy-going attitude, going along with the crowd's thinking but not giving much straight thought to our own beliefs. We listen to what we hear from every side. We may get quite a wide collection of second-hand ideas. But that doesn't make us broad-minded.

Some people fool themselves by thinking they are broad-minded merely because they are scatter-brained. Listen to some of the conversations on trains or at dinner tables and see how many people just repeat the prejudices they have picked up. We human beings became herd-minded so easily.

When our minds just go along with the crowd, we usually drift into dark narrow alleys of ignorance and distrust.

A LITERARY COMMENT

Some years ago Sinclair Lewis in his book, "Main Street," described the state of mind into which one of the town's doctors had drifted. He had gone along as a conventional member of the church, without taking it seriously. When his wife finally rebelled at the rut into which their church life had fallen, the husband was flustered and confused.

Lewis said of him: "He believed in the church but seldom attended its services. He believed in Christianity but never thought about it. He was worried over his wife's lack of faith, but was not sure just what she lacked." His thinking had become shallow but not broad.

We must do some deep, hard thinking if we are to develop real breadth of mind. The Master of Life declared, "Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life." That is the narrowness of the athlete, the artist, the thinker.

The athlete must go through the discipline of self-denial. He must forego the midnight suppers. He may seem to lead a very narrow existence during the training season, but thereby he acquires the full, free use of his body. In a like manner, the muscian must go through endless finger exercises if he is to express himself artistically.

CONCENTRATION BRINGS MASTERY

In all living there is a certain narrowness of application which leads to breadth and power. We have to concentrate on a thing in order to master it. Then we must be broad enough not to be narrowed by our specialties.

Several years ago a great but obscure scientist died. His vision was not confined to the area of his office. He was chief engineer and vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in charge of research.

A friend of mine, who knew him, describes him thus: "John J. Carty was a broad-minded man of vast talents. He liked baseball and kept records of every player in the major leagues. He knew the batting average of most of the players. His horizon was broad. He could discuss science, philosophy and sports—and he possessed a sly humor."

Such is the breadth of interest which can be combined with effective specialization to make great living.

A BROAD OUTLOOK NECESSARY

Alfred Noyes said that one trouble of our time is that we are "misled by small, clever minds." That is, we specialize so that we come to know our own lines of work. But we are not broad enough in our outlook to see where our lines fit with others to make the whole pattern. We should look up if we are to see life in its entirety, for only then will we see God.

Would we be truly broad-minded? Then let us think through our own opinions and let others think theirs. The more we prize our own convictions, the more we respect theirs. Let us be loyal to our own religious group, but remember that the Divine Shepherd has other sheep not of our fold.

Who Was This?

By A. A. M.

Who was the foreigner who came to Jesus with a request as He entered Capernaum, and Jesus exclaimed to his disciples, after talking to him, "Truly, I say to you, not even in Israel have I found such faith!"

The Master had been teaching the people on the montain side and great crowds followed him. A leper had come and knelt before him, saying, "Lord, if you will, you can make me clean." Jesus stretched out his hand and touched him, saying, "I will; be clean." Then he warned him, "Say nothing to anyone. Show yourself to the priest. Offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a proof to the people." Quite possibly this man heard of this miracle.

He approached Jesus in anxiety about the health not of himself nor of a member of his family, but about an employee. Stepping forward to the Master, he beseeched him, "Lord, my servant is lying paralyzed at home, in terrible distress." Jesus answered, "I will come and heal him."

This man carried heavy responsibility in the Roman army. He said of his position, "I am a man under authority, with soldiers under me. I say to one "Go" and he goes; to another "Come" and he comes. To my slave I order "Do this" and he does it."

In these words he expressed his own feeling of humility and his faith in the power of the Master, "Lord, I am not worthy to have you come under my roof. Only say the word and my servant will be healed."

Jesus answered, "Go, be it done for you as you have believed." The servant was healed at that very moment.

Read this man's name and this story in Matthew, Ch. 8, vs. 1-13.

BRITAIN'S ACT OF FAITH

Churchill has referred to those days after Dunkirk, when Britons stood practically alone and defied Hitler across a narrow strip of water, as "their finest hour."

It is not now certain that the statement, true at the time, is still valid.

The world, if it survives, may one day value even more highly the courage and faith which has led Churchill's present government to plan the erection of twelve atomic generating stations within the next decade.

In pubs and papers, it is evident that this act of faith has caught the imagination of the British people. Well it might.

It is, alas, not so evident that this faith will prove justified.

The same day's news told the whole story in graphic headlines.

1. Canada's Dr. Hugh Keenleyside predicting that the world is on the verge of war and extinction or, alternatively, of peace and unparalleled prosperity.
2. The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission announcing that Bikini tests last year had shown that a hydrogen bomb would kill every exposed person within an area of 7,000 square miles.
3. Britain planning the largest nuclear power program yet drawn by any nation.
4. Chinese Communists massing forces before the isles of Quemoy and Matsu.

There are all the ingredients, Dr. Keenleyside says that even a few years of real peace could bring a material paradise. But we should not forget that even a few hours of atomic war could bring a hellish holocaust.

CONTROLLER VS. WOMEN

Controller Ford Brand of Toronto has resigned in a huff from the position of chairman of the Metropolitan Personnel Committee.

The circumstances are interesting.

A woman employed by the roads department in 1953 gave her age as 40. She was actually 47, two years over the age limit for employment. Penalty for false information is dismissal. But the committee decided to keep her on the permanent staff. So Controller Brand resigned.

One must have sympathy for his viewpoint. Penalty for false information, in this case, is a job, which the woman would not have got if she had told the truth.

What really interests us, though, is the true story of why she was hired when she gave her age as 40 while she was really 47.

Was the person who hired her too much of a gentleman to call attention to an obvious error?

Or does he not know much about how women look at 47 and at 40?

Or can it be that here is a woman who at 47 really looked like 40?

If the latter is the explanation, the Metropolitan Personnel Committee's decision to keep her on the permanent staff is understandable. It is a richly deserved reward for an outstanding achievement.

THE WORLD HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIPS

Before the world hockey championships start in Germany on February 25, it might perhaps be advisable to go on record as to the reaction which readers of The Ontario Intelligencer can expect on the editorial page, win, lose or draw.

We hope the Penticton V's win and regain the world title for Canada.

But if they do we shall not regard it as a major victory for the West nor as a solution of any important problem facing the world today.

We were not dismayed when the Toronto Lyndhursts lost to Russia last year. We shall be disappointed but not dismayed if the Penticton V's suffer a similar defeat this year.

We were not convinced last year that the victory by Russia meant that Russia had the best hockey team in the world. If the day comes when we are convinced that Russia has the best hockey team that will not alter our opinion about Russia in the least.

Still, it would be nice to see those V's come through with a victory. Come on Penticton!

BRITAIN'S VARIED EXPORTS

Something old, something new.

If the British are exporting something blue — and doubtless they are—then they are supplying the world with all the ingredients for a wedding, including brides, of course, for people, as well as goods, are seeking new homes.

Something new is provided by plastics. In 1954 the United Kingdom produced 200,000 tons of plastics, about 25 per cent more than in 1953. Exports amounted to 70,000 tons, valued at more than $56,000,000, an increase of $8,000,000 over 1953 .

Something old? Jewelry and silverware with a distinctive Scottish flavor. The designs are based on old Scottish patterns and Scotland's own stones, cairgorns, amethysts, garnets and beautifully marked pebbles, are used.

THE FLU

When your stomach starts to vex,
  It's the flu.
Though they call it "virus X,"
  It's the flu.
When you say in manner sad
That all over you feel bad,
That is what your grandma had.
  It's the flu.

When you have a throbbing head,
  It's the flu.
When you spend all day in bed,
  It's the flu.
When you have an aching frame,
Called by any other name,
Once your grandma felt the same.
  It's the flu.

Germ or virus are you told?
  It's the flu.
New the cure; the ailment's old.
  It's the flu.
Do you cough and do you wheeze?
It is not a new disease.
It's what made your grandma sneeze.
  It's the flu.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 19, 1935

The Canadian Girls In Training in connection with John Street United Church presented one of Barrie's lovable plays, "A Kiss for Cinderella" to a very appreciative audience last evening. The adventures of the wistful little wartime Cinderella and her big-hearted policeman captivated the audience, and the cast, all of whom played their parts with real understanding, are to be congratulated on the success they attained. The play was under the direction of Miss Sylva Ross and Miss Robina Templeton and Miss Jean Catcher acted as pianist. All those taking part received much praise for their splendid efforts, but to Phyllis Archibald, the very appealing little Cinderella, and Baden Kiser as the policeman, go special credit for the performance of the major parts. The following composed the cast in the order the names are given on the programme: Shirley Brown, Bryson Leslie, Baden Kiser, Phyllis Archibald, Malcolm McClennand, Margaret Miles, Willet Kilbank, Shirley McIntosh, Jean Archibald, Ruth McClennand, Peggy McLean, Harriet Cronk, Margaret Leslie, Mary Louise Kinnear, Connie Williams, Doris Juby, Dorothy Douglas, Jean immerman, Annis Collins, Catherine Williamson, Doris Pyme, Pauline Kelly, Margaret Drummond, June Buck, Fern Rawlins, Doris Whitten, Gwen Irvine, Edith Donaldson, Laura Snyder, Charlotte McGie. Between the acts delicious home-made candies were sold from a booth by Canadian Girls in Training under the supervision of Miss Helen Findlay.

30 YEARS AGO

February 19, 1925.

Mr. Arthur McGie has been awarded the contract by the city council to make the suits required for the members of the Belleville fire department.

The Shell Company of Canada has erected three gasoline tanks on C.N.R. property at the foot of George and John Streets. Work on the erection of an office building will be commenced at once.

Cannot Judge Men by Riches

(Windsor Star)

Too many reckless ideas often enter into discussions about wealth or poverty. Accusations are made against rich men, and likewise against poor men, which are unfair and inaccurate.

There is a tendency among those of modest circumstances to attribute their poverty to being upright in character. They are "poor but honest." They are likely to regard rich men as having compiled wealth by dishonest means. The more dishonest these are in their dealings the wealthier they become. So runs the argument.

Conversely some rich people are inclined to regard all poor people as lazy, ne'er-do-wells. They cannot understand a man be poor because he hasn't been provided with the talents, or perhaps the opportunities to become rich. Or that he may have family or other obligations which prevent him from saving money.

Both these attitudes are wrong. Because a few have achieved wealth by unethical means doesn't imply all rich people, or many of them, are naturally dishonest. They may have acquired wealth just because they have used to the full their natural talents.

Because some poor people are thriftless doesn't mean all poor people are that way. There are many reasons why a man, even though industrious, may never become well-to-do. Poor health is an obvious example. The quality of a man's character cannot be measured in terms of the money he has, or hasn't.

Bank Opening, Texas Style

(St. Catharines Standard)

Canadian banks, in recent years, have shed quite a lot of their old-time starchy dignity. They have added chrome and flashing lights, and proclaim with a certain amount of modest fanfare, the opening of new branches.

But, as points out The Financial Post, in comparison with a colleague in Texas, they are still safely conservative.

Down in Uncle Sam's largest state, the Republic National Bank opened a new building in Dallas the other day. It was quite a structure, dozens of stories high, all aluminium on the outside and with gold-plated drinking fountains scattered about the main floors.

When it was finally ready for business, down the street paraded 100 high-kicking dancing girls in 10-gallon hats and cowboy boots preceded by bands and floats.

Inside there was a 750-foot bar that dispensed milk punch and other beverages from 8.45 a.m. on.

The party is reported to have lasted for several weeks. It was finished off with a banquet featuring two tons of roast beef, a symphony orchestra and $200,000 worth of flowers.

Some bankers, these Texans.

Healthy and Lonely

The best way to avoid catching cold we're assured, is to keep away from persons having colds. On that basis, a healthy life will be terribly lonely.

Farmer's Buying Power Is Vital to Economy

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

From the angle of the farmer. I was more than casually interested in that $400,000,000-question in your lead editorial of a recent issue—"Are You Poorer This Year?"—and feel like thanking you for that forthright interpretative opening paragraph: "You are not? Then you are one of the lucky ones. Canada's gross national product in 1954 is expected to be worth half a billion dollars less than that of 1953. There was thus less wealth to share this year amongst more people. If your slice of the national cake was no smaller, it is obvious that somebody else had to take a double cut....There is not much difficulty in locating these unfortunates. They are the unemployed and the farmers".

This latter, surely, is a strange and uneven team. In my book, they represent the lightest workers and the heaviest workers in the Canadian scene. I am sorry for both; though there are curious contrasts in "the unemployed and the farmers" which seem to merit the study of the nation's social, economic and political leaders. One startling disparity in this uneven team would be in terms of their purchasing power; there being little or none in the former; while, according to a recent study, it was found that the farmer is 2.4 times as good a customer for the nation's industries as the city man.

It is sincerely to be hoped that ways and means will be devised to keep farm buying power in reasonable alignment with that of other gainfully employed Canadians. If this is not done, by one means or another, the trend could easily reflect itself in lower living standards all around Jack Canuck's table—either above the salt or below it.

It seems worth recording the findings of a group of economists in the United States, namely, that each dollar of gross farm income multiplies itself by seven in the national income, by the time it completes full-circle in the nation's industrial veins!

BLUE JAY

Martian War Not Imminent

(Vancouver Province)

In this danger-laden world, where madmen are biting right and left, like dogs with rabies, the ordinary citizen seems condemned to spend his life amid excursions and alarms.

But there is one danger we can push into the background for awhile, thank goodness. A Dr. Otto Struve, addressing the Victoria chapter of the Royal Astronomical Society, says any likelihood of an invasion by spacemen from Mars in the next million years is very slight.

Conditions on Mars at present, he assures us, are not suitable for producing life. With the zeal of a steadfast soul he lays bare the state of things on that planet, going so far as to conclude that it is "highly unlikely" a higher type of plant life has ever existed on Mars, although it is possible there are lower forms, like green moss.

What with atom bombs, and rude Russians making our insides quake day after day, it is nice to have a little re-assurance now and then. It is hard to imagine anything more depressing than a threat from outer space materializing on top of it all.

Dr. Struve is to be warmly commended for doing his bit to relieve the strains and tensions of the times.

Why Are These Punks Punks?

(Hamilton Spectator)

A few days ago two thugs forced their way into a woman's home in the south-west of Hamilton, beat her, threatened her with death if she resisted, left her bound and in pain, and made off with what money they could find. They have not yet been caught.

We do not bring this up as a criticism of the police, in whom we have enough confidence to believe that the men will eventually be picked up. We are simply getting in a word before they have been arrested and charged and their case has become "sub-judice" and therefore barred from comment.

When they are caught, a great deal of machinery will go to work, a great deal of money will be spent, and a good many worthy souls will fret over them. They will be assured of an absolutely fair trial, at the taxpayer's expense. They will be studied by psychologists, at the taxpayer's expense. If they are convicted, they will be lodged in jail for a time, at the taxpayer's expense. An effort may be made to teach them a useful trade, at the taxpayer's expense. When their sentence has been served (with time off for good behavior) there will be an attempt to fit them back into ordinary life, at the taxpayer's expense.

A good deal of money is going to be spent, one way and another, on those two punks. A great deal of thought is going to be given to them—a great deal more thought, in fact, than will be given to the good woman who was their victim.

We are not objecting to this expenditure of money and thought on two worthless samples of the dregs of the community. This is a civilized country, and that is the civilized way of handling such cases.

But we can't help a feeling that something is out of proportion.

Might it not be a healthy exercise, this once, to spend a bit more money and thought and not to stop—as is usually done—at solemn psychological tut-tutting about the motivation and causation and the various other -ations of crime and at a rather woolly do-gooding attempt at rehabilitation; but to go on and really dig into the origins of these two punks' punkdom—delve back into their home lives and their schooling and their previous brushes with the law and find out exactly who made the mistakes, and where, and why?

Isn't it about time, in fact, to take one such horrible example and pound it down the gullets of the parents who are too lazy to bring up their children, and the educators who confuse discipline with frustration, and all the do-gooders in the community who insist on seeing crime in abstract terms, as if it were a sickness, and not as the concrete reality of a woman left bound and bleeding on her living-room floor?

Then maybe we can begin to get somewhere with the job of preventing the same thing from happening to other women.

Prince Philip Typical Male

(Detroit Free Press)

If Prince Philip ever wants a theatrical job and lists himself with a casting bureau, we know just how to distinguish him in the card file on characteristics.

Philip's ex-valet says Queen Elizabeth's husband wears monotonous underwear and darned socks, combs his hair to cover a bald spot, shows annoyance when he misses a bird with a shotgun and doesn't like a valet fussing over him.

With that information, the casting bureau can write him down simply as: "Male, typical."

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE IMPORTANT POTENTIAL

How often we read the story of some man or woman who has made an outstanding success, but who in youth showed no promise of this—yet the potential was there! Who of the early associates of Abraham Lincoln ever dreamed that some day he would become the ruler of the country which is today the most powerful one on earth?

Lincoln was tall, ungainly, and without education but the potential of greatness was there. It only took a few great events, like the Cooper Union speech and the debates with Douglass, to reveal a unique personality and a mind that God surely must have educated. To read his speeches to day is to read compositions that were touched with genius.

A city can make no greater investment than to invest in its youth. Its boys' clubs, its girls' clubs, and its outdoor parks and playgrounds pay rich dividends in later life. From many a sordid slum have come leaders in our cities and states, as well as nation, that prove the evidence of potential growth cannot be hidden, but is sure to reveal itself sooner or later.

Where there is potential there are hope, risks worth taking, and that something which no man has yet been able to adequately appraise. A business man hires an employee not alone for what he considers him worth at the time, but what he will be worth years from then. I am informed that the President of General Motors got his job with that great concern by answering a Want Ad. The potential was there and so he grew and grew.

We can forgive, and overlook, a great deal in a person if we are convinced that he or she has capacity or potential. Many a valuable worker has been lost to many a business because this potential was not noted or discovered.

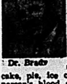
LOW BLOOD SUGAR



Dr. Brady

More than 8 hours after taking food a healthy person has from 0.07 per cent to 0.12 per cent sugar in his blood. An hour or two after a full meal, including natural sweets — (fruit, honey) or sweetened things (sugar in beverage, syrup on pancakes, molasses on fried corn meal mush, cake, pie, ice cream) a healthy person's blood contains no more than 0.14 per cent of sugar. If measurement of the blood sugar level shows 0.16 per cent or more, either fasting or after a full meal, the individual probably has diabetes — which, it is well to remember, is merely a functional trouble, in capacity to metabolize (assimilate, oxidize, burn, utilize) carbo-hydrate (sugars and starches) as well as one should.

As Dr. Don H. Duffie expresses it, in his invaluable Book For US Diabetics, the diabetic cannot make use of the sugar in his blood, so "his blood-sugar rides 'round and 'round on the delivery wagon instead of being delivered." The popularity of this guidebook for diabetics is attested by the fact that it is now in its fifth edition. It is scientific and eminently practical. For instance, Dr. Duffie tells how to make your own urine tests for sugar at one-tenth of the cost of the ordinary Benedict's solution test although he mentions both "Clinitest" and "Galatest". A copy of the book would make a fine valentine for anyone who is training for diabetes. Price $2. Publisher Dr. Don H. Duffie, Central Lake, Michigan.

As most diabetics who use insulin know, an overdose or even one's regular dose under some circumstances may have unpleasant, embarrassing or dangerous consequences — unless one takes some kind of carbohydrate food, such as candy, fruit or fruit juice, a sweetened beverage, chocolate, cookie, ice cream, cereal, immediately upon feeling at all faint, dizzy, confused or "queer."

This state is known as insulin shock. Identical manifestations may occur in persons who are not diabetic, and then the state is called hyperinsulinism. In either case the immediate cause of the symptoms is reduction of the level of blood sugar, and this low blood sugar level calls for the same first aid of emergency treatment as does insulin shock in a diabetic — any kind of carbohydrate food, pronto. For instance, hot tea or coffee, but sweetened with plenty of sugar.

Now I have lain awake several nights trying to decide whether it would be Hippocratic to describe the manifestations or symptoms of this state in greater detail than "faint, dizzy, confused or queer." I have been unable to come to a decision.

But I'll tell you what I'm going to do. At no extra charge I'll include this illuminating bit of information, namely, that doctors have an impressive name for low blood sugar — hypoglycemia. And I believe it will be all right with Hippocrates if I recommend to persons with hypoglycemia (hyperinsulinism) a book titled Body, Mind and Sugar by E. M. Abrahamson, M. D. and A. W. Pezet, (Henry Holt & Co., N. Y., $2.95).

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

WHEN DEDICATION IS COMPLETE

Dwight L. Moody has sometimes been called the most successful evangelistic preacher in the history of the Christian Church. It is believed that at least a half-million people were converted as the result of Moody's preaching. He was an uneducated man, a layman; but he had been soundly converted when he was a boy, and he dedicated his life to a great project.

As a young man he preached and had considerable success but nothing phenominal. Then one day as he was walking along the streets of New York City, he had a spiritual experience known as the baptism of the Holy Spirit. He describes it as follows: "Oh, what a day. I cannot describe it; I seldom refer to it; it is almost too sacred an experience to name . . . I can only say God then revealed Himself to me, and I had such an experience of His love that I had to ask Him to stay His hand. After that I preached. I did not present any new truths, and yet hundreds were converted. I would not now be placed back where I was before that blessed experience if you were to give me the treasure of the world—it would be as the small dust of the balance."

Moody was an example of what God does to an even modestly endowed man who puts his life completely at the divine disposal. God had all of him.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of my schoolboy friends was the homeliest human being I ever saw. He was so strikingly homely that most of us went out of way to ation. He had a nose like a small wiener, a cocktail wiener. His cheeks were two bright pouches, between which the absurd nose was embedded. His chin was small. His face was usually rosy red, as if scrubbed a minute ago. And his pale eyes peered out anxiously from amidst this confusion of features with a final effect of the grotesque that melted even schoolboy hearts.

From time to time, after my school days, I saw him briefly, usually in passing, or in time for no more than a greeting. His looks had not improved. His nose had increased to a full size, or hot-dog, wiener. His high round cheeks still appeared to be pouches, as if filled with peanuts, like a chipmunk's. The anxious pale eyes still appeared confused amidst the mixup. The face was scrubbed red, as ever.

Then thirty years passed by; and if I ever thought of him, I wondered if perhaps he has been killed, as so many of my schoolmates were, among the 58,000 of the first war.

Last week, on the train to Chicago, a distinguished-looking man walked up the chair car and sat down opposite me and held out his hand. It took me several seconds of almost earthquake confusion to pull myself together and recognize my ugly duckling friend of long ago. He had jowls now, the jowls of a sixty-year old. His nose had filled out, somehow, and had a bridge. His eyes were pale still, but level and dancing and gay. Whatever his hair had been like, maybe a nondescript brindle, it was now snow white, profuse and tumbling. The red was in his face, but it was a ruddy glow that lent him an air of vibrant health, a thing most becoming to men of sixty. Without the least exaggeration, he was an extremely handsome and striking-looking man.

Since the handsomest of us grow less handsome with the years, it is encouraging to know that some of the homeliest of us have our innings in due time.

HI-Y SCOREBOARD:
BASKETBALL

The high-flying B.C.I. Juniors decisively trounced Bancroft 69-21 at B.C.I. The game started out very cautiously with B.C.I. holding a slim 10-6 edge at the end of the first quarter. In the second quarter B.C.I. finally hit their stride and surged out in front by a score of 35-8. They increased this 27-point margin to 36 in the third quarter leading 47-11. This was the fourth victory in five games for the Juniors. Jackson with 25 points and Burleigh with 12 paced the winners' attack. Wasmund and Williams each hooped 6 for Bancroft.

Players and Points: B. C. I.: Jones 2, Burleigh 12, Calnan, Cornell 6, Moravelk 4, Deacon 2, Barber 10, Hagerman 2, Jackson 25, Aselstine 2, Parkhurst 4, Green. Bancroft: Crosby 4, O'Marra, Williams 6, Latchford, Murphy 3, Wasmund 6, Robinson 2, Spracket.

Last Wednesday in the boys' gym the B.C.I. Juniors scored their third successive victory by defeating O.S.D. 66-34. The winners led 16-10 in the first quarter and increased the score 28-18 by half-time. Of course they held the edge in the third quarter 48-28. It was B.C.I.'s fifth victory in six games.

Burleigh with 17 points and Jones with 13 paced the winners' attack. Hillman was high scorer for O.S.D. with 14 points.

Players and points: B.C.I.: Jones 13, Calnan 4, Cornell 4, Moravak 2, Deacon 8, Barber 8, Hagerman, Jackson 6, Aselstine 4, Burleigh 17, Irwin. O.S.D.: Meany 8, Dorschner 4, Legue, Fossum, Murphy, Hillman 14, Bourget 4, Barrett 4, Henshaw, Giffore, Ruttan.

The powerful B.C.I. Seniors racked up another huge score while defeating O.S.D. 75-36. It was only last week that they slaughtered Bancroft 108-29. The big red team surged out in front 22-9 in the first quarter and increased this margin to 39-22 by half time. They shot ahead 30 points in the third quarter, leading 57-27. Parkhurst, Gault and Smith led the winners' attack each with 14 points. Skinkle scored 10 points for O.S.D.

Players and points: B.C.I.: Farnsworth 6, Geneja 2, Smith 14, Deacon, Gajdicar, Bennett 11, Craig 3, Gault 14, Kells 4, Varcoe 6, Hill 1, Parkhurst 14. O.S.D.: Bradley 6, Skinkle 10, Drury 8, Searson 2, Sticks 6, Sattler 2, Hemphill 2, Carey, Dennie.

Both the Seniors and Juniors have recorded five wins and one loss each for the season thus far. The Seniors have scored a total of 359 points while the Juniors have collected 311 in the same span. 198 points have been scored upon the Seniors, while the Juniors' opponents have managed to score 183.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL
(By Barb McElrath)

The B.C.I. Juniors defeated the Picton Juniors 38-16 last Tuesday. This game was close compared to B.C.I.'s 67-7 victory two weeks ago in Picton. B.C.I. dominated Picton in all departments except fouls. Picton received ten out of the sixteen fouls imposed in the game. Patricia Rowland was the high scorer in the game. The officials were Barb Annis of B.C.I. and Alice Maybee of Picton.

ICE HOCKEY

The Buzzards edged the Mohawks 3-2 last Tuesday. White's two early goals were matched by Plane and Duvall of the Mohawks. Horwood fired the winning goal for the Buzzards. Buskard had three assists while Reid, Hazard and Hawthorne each received one assist.

On Thursday the Canucks, playing the worst hockey of the season, managed to eke out a 5-4 victory over the Blackhawks. Little, Brant, Frederick and Wright each scored one goal and one assist for the winners with Brant getting the other. Cornell scored two goals for the Blackhawks with Keary and D. Brant firing the others. Dalrymple and Foster received assists.

The Buzzards and Canucks are positively in the play-offs with only two games remaining in the schedule. At present the Mohawks and Blackhawks are tied in the cellar. A win for one of these two teams will make them eligible for the play-offs.

FLOOR HOCKEY

On Tuesday the Lower School floor hockey championship was won by Gary Little's Orioles. The Orioles won the first game of the series and the second game ended in a tie.

The third game was a hard-fought battle with the Beavers edging the Orioles 7-6 last Monday to tie up the series. Roseberry paced the winners' attack with three goals. Dickson and Foster each scored two goals while Morris received an assist. Rowbottom fired four goals for the losers with Vaughan and Irwin scoring the others. As a result of the Beavers' victory another game had to be played in order to declare a champion.

On Tuesday the Orioles roared back with a decisive 8-4 victory. Irwin led the winners' attack scoring five goals and two assists; Rowbottom fired the other three goals while Davis picked up an assist. Roseberry had two goals for the Beavers while Thomas and Dickson also managed to score. This was the final floor hockey game of the year.

COMING EVENTS

Don't forget to attend this year's "Greatest Show on Earth." I'm referring to that outstanding performance "Kampus Kampers" next March third and fourth. It's completely comprised of school talent and whether you, the students of B.C.I., get out and support it or not, depends heavily on its success or failure.

Association Of Kinsmen Clubs 35 Years Old

The Association of Kinsmen Clubs, organized in Hamilton Feb. 20, 1920 by H. A. Rogers, is now 35 years old. The members of Canada's only young men's service clubs will celebrate this week, with special anniversary meetings, the growth of the organization they have helped to build, recalling past endeavors and planning greater projects for the betterment of their local community in its greatest need. In many cases, the Kinette auxiliary clubs will join the parent club in the birthday festivities.

During this week the 295 clubs in the association from St. Johns, Nfld. to Vancouver Island, B. C. will recall past successes, nationally, among which are the milk for Britain campaign, which provided 50,000,000 quarts of milk for the children in Britain; the European, Winnipeg and Southern Ontario Flood Relief campaigns in which a total of approximately $150,000 was made available; the Cancer Scholarship Fund and other projects.

Each club too will recount efforts made for the local community's greatest need which embrace service projects for young and old, from playgrounds for the tots to apartments for the old folks.

This week each member in the association will renew his pledge service by personal self-sacrifice in the project which, in the opinion of the club, represents the community's greatest need.

It is estimated that nearly three quarters of a million dollars are raised each year by the combined efforts of the member clubs and spent to help those who cannot help themselves without regard for race, creed or color. The thanks of all Kinsmen go this week particularly to all citizens of Canada, who have supported their endeavors in the past. And thanks are due the Kinsmen club: for their efforts in helping to make this Canada of ours a better place in which to live.

The Kinsmen Club of Belleville sponsors "The Belleville Memorial Swimming Pool", The Kinsmen Boys' Band and the Eye Clinic.

Canada Drama Award Made To Charles Southgate

Charles Southgate, president of the Canadian Repertory Theatre in Ottawa, for 5½ years, was presented with the Canadian Drama Award for "significant contribution and achievement in the theatre" last night at Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival here.

The award, given by the Canadian Drama Awards committee, was presented by Michael Meiklejohn, chairman of the Eastern Ontario Drama League at the conclusion of last night's play—"The Moon in the Yellow River" by Ottawa Little Theatre Inc.

In making the award, Mr. Meiklejohn stated that Mr. Southgate, the "angel of CRT", was "the man most responsible for rescuing Canada from the abysmal position of being the only civilized capital in the world without live theatre."

"He is a representative of the professional theatre," said Mr. Meiklejohn, "but we in Ottawa amateur theatre look upon the professional theatre there as our companions. Without amateurs, professional theatre would have no source of talent. Without professional theatre we, amateurs would not see professional standards as a goal towards which to strive."

Mr. Southgate, in accepting the award, said "It belongs to the actors, actresses, directors and crews for their hard work at low pay."

"I don't know why they choose repertory," he said. "But they have abiding faith in themselves and in living theatre and believe that drama is the primacy of all arts. I am proud to have been associated with them."

DISCENDO OMNIBUS CRESCEMUS

DANCE

The Girls' and Boys' Athletics sponsored the second dance of the year on Friday. The name of the dance was the "February Frolic" and it featured Aubrey Haines' orchestra. "Cokes" were sold in the cafeteria and prizes were given for novelty dances. The Frosty Frolic was a huge success and we are looking forward to having another dance at the school in the near future.

Wednesday, February 16, 1955, was the official opening of the Quinte Secondary School. It was certainly a memorable evening.

The program was opened with the singing of "O Canada," followed by the welcoming speech of chairman Roy Sills. Mr. Clifford introduced the distinguished guests, among them Mr. George Currie, former principal of B.C.I.V.S.

Mr. Wright led his Glee Club in two songs and we would like to congratulate Mr. Wright and the Glee Club on their fine performance.

The transfer of the building followed.

The school was dedicated by Rev. E. J. Kersey.

Next, our honored guest, L. S. Beattie, B.A., LL.D., superintendent of Secondary Education in Ontario, was introduced by Mr. G. Wishart.

Mr. Beattie described the school as functional and economical, supplementary and complementary to the Belleville Collegiate, and evidence of the co-operation between urban and rural taxpayers. Mr. Orr expressed appreciation to Mr. Beattie.

Jim Phillips, of Grade 11C, accompanied by Helen Burkitt, favored with two trumpet solos, one of which was an encore.

Presentations were a highlight of the program. A Bible for the school was presented by Rev. J. S. Spearman. Mr. Spearman was representing the Belleville Ministerial Association. Mr. Norman Smith, on behalf of the BCIVS, presented the school with a beautiful bell for the auditorium. The bell was made by the boys in the shop, and the motto was inscribed on it. The Argyll Chapter of Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire, represented by Mrs. W. Ponton and Mrs. K. Vaughn, presented a new flag.

The program was closed with God Save the Queen.

GIRLS' SPORTS

The girls' junior basketball team played one game this week against Bancroft High. The game was played at the Quinte Secondary School. It was a fast game with a spectacular Quinte forward line of Musclow, Smith and Thrasher. At the end of the first half Quinte was trailing by two points but they went ahead in the second half to take the game 24-17.

Scorers for Quinte were: Smith 8, Hatfield 6, Musclow 5, Lang 4.

Scorers for Bancroft were: LaBarge 6, Merritt 4, Baumhauer 4, Weiss 3.

The Grade 11 inter-form basketball games started this week. They have four teams, which will play off and the winner will play against the Grade 10 winner. The Grade 9 and 10 inter-form will be starting very soon.

BOYS' SPORTS

The boys' junior basketball team played one game this week against Bancroft High at Quinte Secondary School. It was a fast moving, well checked game with a final score of 55-24 in favor of Quinte. Quinte took an early lead and kept it right through. Bancroft had little hope to guard off Quinte's onrushing forward line.

Scorers for Quinte were: Dicky 20, Walmsley 13, Beeby 10, Green 5, Armstrong 2, Musgrove 2, Gatland 2, Phillips 1.

Scorers were Bancroft were: Rupnow 6, Wasmund 6, Murphy 5, Hibbard 5, Gaebel 2.

Quinte has come out unbeaten in all their games and are now in line for the COSSA championship finals.

Red Fox Seen Trotting Along On Town Street

TRENTON — (Special) — A large bushy tailed red fox looked out of place yesterday as he trotted along the roadway to the water purification plant between Williams and Williams factory and the Central Bridge plant. He appeared unconcerned however as he ambled up the abrupt hill dotted with the remains of British Chemical plant foundations heading toward the Hinde and Dauch premises.

Reynard caused quite a commotion in the office of one plant as employees craned their necks to get a view of the unusual visit from a member of the animal kingdom.

23 Sidney Residents, Who Get Services from Town, Against Annexation Into Municipality

TRENTON — (Special) — A delegation of 23 Sidney township residents who receive services from the town of Trenton last week asked Reeve Harry Morrow and his Sidney Township council to intercede for them if the Town of Trenton presses to annex the part of Sidney township, where their homes and places of business are situated.

Following the meeting, Lewis Wilson, former owner of Wilson's Dairy, spokesman for the delegation, said the majority of residents, who would be affected by annexation are not in favor of the town's proposal to take them into the corporation. The piece of the Sidney township Trenton would like to embody in the municipality lies between the town's eastern boundary and Middleton Park the Department of National Defence housing project.

Non - residents of Trenton became perturbed about their future when they received a circular signed by Public Utilities manager Campbell pointing out that service to out - of - town customers was at the Commission's direction and could be cut off at any time. Mr. Wilson said fringe residents considered the Commission's attitude a threat and scheme to influence approval of the proposed annexation. "None of us has a well", he explained, "and naturally would not want to have our water service discontinued."

In council last fall councillor N. J. McNair urged to have the town propose annexation to the neighboring land owners in Sidney township.

Midgets Defeat Port Hope In Playoff Series

TRENTON (Special) — Joe Gould's Midgets are on their way. In overtime last night the Jewellers eliminated Port Hope Spitfires, winning the goals to count two-game series 8-7 on the round. Winger Roger Drake, unassisted, scored the most important goal of the evening after seven minutes of play had elapsed in the extra period.

In regular play Trenton appeared to have the edge, particularly when the chips were down and the Spitfires surged in on Wright. In the first meeting at Port Hope, Trenton lost the game 4-3 and entered the 'sudden-death' engagement last night at a one-goal disadvantage.

Port Hope fought back desperately after Scaletta and Yardy combined in the third period to give Trenton a two-goal lead. In two minutes they turned the tables and tied the score. H. Scott restored Gould's fading hopes with a solo drive. Then all Wright had to do was hold off Spitfire sharpshooters. Needless to say he did.

The game was exceptionally clean throughout.

Next on the program for the Jewellerymen is a trip to Gananoque for the first game of the O.M.H.A. finals. Winner of this two-game points to win series takes the Eastern Ontario championship and gets a shot at the provincial title.

John Ross Robertson

Of John Ross Robertson as of Sir Christopher Wren, it may be said "if you seek his monument look around you". John Ross Robertson's greatest monuments are two that served and continue to serve the public . . . the Toronto Telegram and the Sick Children's Hospital. To perpetuate his name and memory a school has been named after him and children have gathered on the anniversary of his death to commemorate his passing.

John Ross Robertson was born on December 28th, 1841, just seven years after the Town of York had become the City of Toronto and died May 31st, 1918. Early in life his bent toward journalism became apparent. While attending Upper Canada College he founded and published "The College Times" and later, while still a student at the Model Grammar School, published "Young Canada".

His first contact with daily newspaper work was with the Daily Leader. Then came the job of City Editor of the Globe. Following this he spent three years in London, England, as that paper's representative. On his return in 1876 he founded the Evening Telegram.

A tragedy in his own home directed his attention to the need of medical care for little children. While the Hospital for Sick Children was then in existence, Mr. Robertson threw his dynamic personality into the work and brought it new life . . . the result being that the hospital became a model of its kind on the Continent. He then established the Lakeside Home at the Toronto Island as a summer place for the children in the hospital. At his death he left an annuity of $10,000 to the hospital and, after the death of his wife and children, directed that the Telegram should be sold and the proceeds used for its upkeep and maintenance.

Mr. Robertson was a devoted Imperialist but always shunned honours. In 1917 he refused a knighthood and senatorship. His keen interest in things historical has taken permanent form in the collection of Canadian historical pictures which is housed at the College Street Reference Library in Toronto. In things athletic he is best remembered by the title "Father of Amateur Hockey in Ontario". From 1899 to 1905 he was president of the Ontario Hockey Association. He has been named to "Hall of Fame" at Kingston, Ontario.

Simple and sincere, John Ross Robertson fought for things he believed to be right. His motto "I shall pass through this world but once" is amply illustrated by his life of devotion to children and his many kindnesses to others. His works have indeed followed him as living monuments to the service of humanity.

Weddings

CARSON—JONES

A quiet wedding was solemnized in Victoria Avenue Baptist church, Belleville, Ont., on Saturday, February 5, at 3.30 p.m., by the Rev. L. Keith Daniel, when Fannie Marie Jones, of Belleville, daughter of Mr. Manson Jones and the late Mrs. Jones, became the bride of William Robert Carson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Carson, also of Belleville.

They were attended by the bride's sister-in-law, Mrs. Joyce Jones and Mr. Bruce Nickle.

Mr. and Mrs. Carson are residing on Dundas Street East, in Belleville.

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. Elects New Officers

The St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. held its annual meeting at the chapter rooms on Thursday evening, with the Regent Mrs. L. B. Fonger, presiding. A large number attended.

The annual reports showed a substantial bank balance carried over for the year, after donations were made to the Provincial and National funds, such as Lucy Morrison Memorial fund, I.O.D.E. Convalescent Home, Hospital, Korean Projects fund, Hurricane Relief and National Pension Fund.

The chapter has adopted a school this past year and is now giving a $100 bursary to a Grade 13 student, son or daughter of a war veteran to continue their formal education. Flags and calendars were presented to a new school.

Life membership was presented to Mrs. W. Gilbert for her faithful and sustained interest in the chapter, having been a member approximately 35 years.

The Regent, Mrs. L. B. Fonger, expressed her appreciation for the co-operation of the members and the executive for the past year.

Mrs. R. Brettingham, who resigned as treasurer, was presented with a token of appreciation from the chapter members.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Mrs. G. Watkin took the chair for the election of officers with the following executive elected:

Hon. Regent, Mrs. P. Rutherford; Hon. Vice-Regent, Mrs. F. Carscallen; Regent, Mrs. L. B. Fonger; 1st Vice-Regent, Mrs. G. Vince; 2nd Vice-Regent, Mrs. R. V. Daniel; treasurer, Mrs. W. Gilbert; recording secretary, Mrs. C. Vince; corresponding secretary, Mrs. E. Doolittle; educational secretary, Mrs. G. Watkin; press secretary, Mrs. Raymond Fonger; Echoes secretary, Mrs. William Easton; Standard Bearer, Miss M. Fairbairn; Services at Home, Mrs. C. Bishop; E. and W. Affairs, Mrs. R. M. Patterson; membership convener, Mrs. R. V. Daniel; marathon convener, Mrs. H. Thompson; flower convener, Mrs. R. Brettingham and social convener, Miss D. Thompson.

Family Life Film Shown At H-S Assoc.

A film on family life, problems and solutions, featured the monthly meeting of Avondale Home and School Association held Tuesday evening.

The film, prepared by the Ontario Department of Education, highlighted a program under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. James Musgrove. A lively discussion period followed the showing of the film.

Mrs. Ralph Knowlton, president of the association, was chairman of the meeting.

Refreshments were served by the mothers of Grade 3 pupils.

World Tour by Cargo-Liner

Singapore

As one goes more and more about the world it becomes more and more interesting to find out how the various colonies, Federations, protectorates, spheres of influence and so on, became part of the Empire. That story of the island and port of Singapore is increased by the life history of Sir Stamford Raffles of the East India Company for it was he who had the vision to foresee the commercial value of the situation as a port on the great trading route between India and China. It is at the extreme Southern tip of Asia, the Federated Malay States, and one of its greatest assets is the fact that is a free port, that is there are no import duties paid except on a very few products.

The island is only 26 by 14 miles and the city itself is situated on the southern side. The island is separated from the mainland by a strait only three-quarters of a mile wide and is joined by a causeway with road and railway.

I arrived in the city 90 miles from the equator, on a sweltering hot August day but soon found myself comfortably installed in the Raffles Hotel, another of those hotels of the Orient with large rooms and lofty ceilings that make you feel cool even when there is considerable evidence to the contrary. The fans in the ceiling hummed in action, ice water was brought and the bouquet of flowers in the sitting room admired. It was then noon and no time for shopping or sight seeing but no more charming sight could be found than the view over the strait with its many boats of all sorts, Johore on the other side, and the amusing Traveller's Palm in front of the hotel.

Even with his foresight Raffles could hardly have imagined the view spread before modern eyes. In 1819 he was commissioned to establish a trading station on the mainland of Johore. But Raffles had seen the great possibilities of the harbor at Singapore. Six ships of the East India Co. made their way up the strait until they reached a native village.

RAFFLES MEETS CHIEF

The inhabitants met the white men as they landed, with welcome gifts of fruit, and they were led to the Chief's palm-thatched house where they talked with the aid of an interpreter. They talked, and talked, Raffles and the Chief Temenggong, and as a result, Raffles "sent for" the Sultan. There was more talk. Even those who are most averse to talk must admit that it has its uses. The Sultan agreed not only to the building of a British factory, or warehouse, on Singapore Island but to the exclusion of all other powers.

Raffles, a self-educated man, was well informed. He had delved into the almost forgotten past of the island when the village, Singapore, had been destroyed by Java in 1377. If it had once been prosperous, why not again? He believed that it should be a free port and had the sensible belief that trade is an honorable occupation and he meant to increase that of his country. Finally Holland and England settled their difficulties and the Sultan and his Chief ceded legally and peacefully the island of Singapore to the East India Co. A code of laws, a police force, trading regulations and a town planning scheme were arranged. Most of all, more than successful trade and commerce, Raffles desired an educational system that would make the island the intellectual warehouse of S.E. Asia.

In his report of 1823 he wrote, "Education must keep pace with commerce in order that its benefits may be ensured and its evils avoided. "He advocated a college to educate the higher classes of the native population and to encourage the study of the history, condition, and resources of this part of the world and very soon after, the foundation of such a college was laid and a liberal endow ment provided.

BOOKS GIVEN PROTECTION

As he died soon after he happily did not see how all his efforts and the endowment were dissipated but a hundred years later he could have seen the present University of Malaya and especially the library built two years ago a new two-storey building so very modern with its good proportion of glass bricks. That implies air conditioning and it is so from roof to basement but imagine my surprise when the professor of history said it was not so much for the benefit of the students as for the books to prevent mildew, fungus and damage by insects. He went on to say that the books are more difficult to replace than the staff or students. (Whole series of volumes are by means of microphotography packed into space of miniature cam era negative and these can be enlarged when wanted and read on a screen by the student. For two years this system has been at work as we see it done in the New York Public Library where tons of newspapers are replaced by a similar means and so kept in a very small space.

Thus the library is on a par with the greatest in the world. Among other things science can bring to Singapore the first folio of Shakespeare.

Of the 954 students, 585 are Chinese, 90 are Malay, 116 are Indian 112 Ceylonese and 34 Eurasians studying arts, science, medicine. They all seem to be getting on well together and it gives you an idea of the many social adjustments that have to be met.

In that respect we shall be hard put to it to keep up with them and as we wish them well we can remind ourselves that we are at least first cousins even if we are of a variety of color. But reflect on the difficulty of having four languages to consider. It is now proposed to move the university over to Johore and the political and emotional problems connected with that move were too complicated for me to understand.

VISIT JOHORE

Sunday morning with a young friend, we drove over the causeway to Johore which I had often wanted to visit. I reciprocate the affection of the Sultan for the British. There are at present the terrorist pests to be found. The government has had to control the movement of vessels so that they would not supply them with food and other necessities, chiefly arms.

Nothing can be delivered on the coast except at an authorized control point and it takes 300 officers and men of the Singapore police to enforce the law. They must also guard important installations against Communist sabotage. Many commercial companies hire them for the same purpose, a quarter of the whole force being employed on duties directly connected with what is called the "Emergency."

It was a bright clear and not too warm day and one bowled along easily and had time to see closely the rubber trees and to collect some leaves and a nut for future study.

We went first to a Hindu mosque, a refreshingly simple building and after removing our shoes and leaving them on the steps outside we entered the large cool room which seemed to be cooler by the lofty ceiling from which hung huge chandeliers of icy brilliance. To my astonishment the roof was held up by colums in the Greek Corinthian style and Johore is a long way from Greece. There were of course no chairs or benches and as there was no service the uninteresting carpets were for the most part rolled up but it was pleasant walking on the cool floors in one's stocking feet, my dainty young companion in her bare feet.

NO LEAFLESS TREES

As in all of Malaya, trees are the dominant feature and green the dominant color. Although there are very few of what we call evergreen yet the broad leaved trees shed their leaves and acquire a new set so rapidly they are never standing leafless for more than a few days. That seems incredible but it is so.

The Batonic Gardens is not only a centre of research but is a very popular park where the number of species of trees, palms and shrubs on the lawns and in the jungle area is simply enormous. There is also a great abundance of plants and orchids growing wild on the branches of the trees and having no connection with the ground . . . The zoo also was interesting and the usual distressed looking creatures but to me the chief interest was the great variety of races looking at the animals. A very beautiful native tiger was sleeping on a stand in the space allotted to him and wanting a closer view I was conscious of something touching my gloved hand. It was the muzzle of another tiger walking close to the bars which were not wide enough for him to get a nip at me but I moved away with all speed.

I refused to do more than glance at the outside of the Sultan's palace but did look carefully at the houses of the people along the roadside. When I returned to my hotel I read in the newspaper an account of the Sultan's reply to a farewell address at the Royal Johore International Club. It was a right royal scolding. Pointing to several senior government officials who contemplated retiring next year he told them that they were capable of many more years of usefulness to the State and they should continue to serve at such a difficult time as the present.

He was going over to England and told his Malay subjects to make up their differences and get together. If they disregarded his advice he might not return to them at all and would stay in England for the rest of his life! Otherwise he intended to return next year and he hoped nothing would happen to make him change his mind. He also reminded them that pre-war workers were paid less than at present and they did more work. Before he became Sultan the worker was getting only fifteen dollars a month and usually payment was three months in arrears yet in those days workers did not keep an eye on the clock as most of them seemed to do nowadays.

All this was very true, sensible talk and his distress over the many political parties in the state which had divided the Malays could be duplicated in many lands but his threat that if they did not make up their difference within the stay in England was something new in my reading of history. It is a sidelight on the present conditions in Johore.

OCCUPIES IMPORTANT ROLE

So often in Singapore and throughout Malaya I was struck by what we consider a new-world activity, new industries, aluminum, copra, glass, oil refineries, springing up so that the country need not import as much from abroad. On the island of Pulau Brani there is one of the largest tin smelting works in the world. Most of the raw rubber is exported but more and more rubber goods are manufactured with the colony. It will be seen that the city of Singapore occupies a very important place in the trade of the world.

A farewell look at the statue of its founder, Sir Stamford Raffles and I took plane to Malacca, a small plane and a short distance.

First Meeting Of So-Ed Club Much Enjoyed

The first meeting of the Belleville So-Ed Club was held at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday, February 16. Registration were received with about 66 members joining.

Scott Denton made a few remarks on So-Ed and introduced Jim Pearson, chairman of the So-Ed committee.

H. ARNOLD WARD

The speaker for the evening was Mr. H. Arnold Ward, secretary Adult Program, YMCA National Council. Mr. Ward has been with the YMCA for 25 years and is co-sponsor of United Nation Seminar and a member of Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

He brought greetings from National So-Ed Committee.

Mr. Ward's topic was "So-Ed and What it Means to You." There are over forty clubs in Canada with 8,000 members. There is a So-Ed conference in Peterborough on April 22 and 23 and anyone is welcome to attend.

Mr. Ward suggested a series of choices for lectures such as "Everyday Living," "How to Lose Friends and Alienate People," "This is Their Faith," "Preparing for Marriage," "Psychology." As a choice for crafts he suggested ceramics, skiing, chess, cribbage, bridge, jui-jitsu, and first aid, courses for men or women only, motor mechanics, designs in driftwood and weaving.

The objectives of So-Ed were outlined by Mr. Ward, which were depicted by four circles of opportunity with Christ at the centre, friendship, opportunity to learn new skills, service and leadership.

ADAPTABLE TO ALL

Mr. Ward quoted from the Ford Foundation booklet on So-Ed which read, "Doubtful if any other adult education program has been so popular with young people." So-Ed is adaptable to all communities, it opens new doors and establishes continuing groups.

Mr. Ward was introduced by John Luscombe and a vote of thanks was expressed by Archie Boyd.

The craft classes met to become acquainted with their instructors. The Belleville So-Ed club has many interesting crafts, such as motor mechanics, taught by Ardell Wilson, motor mechanics teacher at Belleville Collegiate; photography taught by the Belleville Camera Club; bridge, taught by the Belleville Bridge Club, and ballroom dancing, taught by Harry Morrison of the Morrison Dancing School.

Games and dancing were held for the rest of the evening after a serving of coffee and cookies. Scott Denton kept everyone gay and did a great job of getting everyone mixed up and having a lot of fun. It was a very successful first night.

There is still an opening for more young men who are interested in meeting people and having a good time for eight hilarious evenings. They may register at any time at the YMCA or next Wednesday night at the next So-Ed meeting.

PILOT KILLED IN JUMP

RAPID CITY, S. D. (AP)—Air force Capt. David E. Baker, 33, was killed Thursday when his parachute failed to open after he jumped from his disabled Sabre jet 60 miles north of Rapid City.

Going Places

Traveler Scores Air Terminals

By SHIRLEY AND BOB SLOANE

A West Coast reader, who identifies himself as a veteran traveller, has asked if he might add his pet peeve to the list of travelers complaints we ran a few weeks ago:

"I am rather concerned about the rash of oversized, pretentious, poorly designed and expensive airport terminals with which taxpayers all over the country currently are being burdened and passengers inconvenienced.

"Apparently the sole excuse for these glass-and-chrome barns is a peculiar sort of civic pride which leads city fathers to feel their city will be considered behind the times unless it has one of these monstrosities.

"In most of these cities, railroad commerce exceeds air traffic considerably, with a greater variety of passengers arriving and departing to and from a greater variety of points. Yet the railroad stations become progressively more dismal and dingy and nobody seems to care. Railroads are old hat. Bus stations —the poor relations of the travel industry—are altogether unspeakable and completely snubbed.

NOT ATTRACTIVE

"These ostentatious overgrown hangars might not be so bad if, at least, they were either, or both, as attractive and functional as they are supposed to be. But usually they are neither.

"Many of them are built to handle more plane traffic than, in all probability, the city will ever have. One small midwestern state capital I sometimes visit was served by four airlines. Shortly after its new terminal was opened, two of the airlines abandoned operations in that city. There scarcely seems to be any grounds for optimism that air travel will increase here.

"One might expect that some of the inconveniences of old air terminals would have been eliminated in these new buildings, but many of them have been compounded instead.

VAST TERMINALS

"The terminals are often so vast that the walk to the ticket counter and thence to the plane gate seems endless, particularly if you are carrying your own baggage as so many travelers do these days. Many of the buildings require you to walk upstairs to the ticket counters and in nearly all you have to go downstairs to the plane and up from it. There are also inclined ramps everywhere which passengers must climb.

"At one eastern field the parking lot is tantalizingly just on the other side of a locked fence bordering the loading apron, but you've still got to lug your bags up and down to escape this open-air prison.

"Doors seem to be placed strategically and pointlessly at the entrances to and along the hallways of the terminal, or piers, or concourses as they are called, so you have to push fiercely with your shoulders or, worse yet, put down a bag and pull it open.

"I've tried hard, but have been unable to think of an reason why these doors could not have been designed so, at least, they might be opened by pushing from either side. Some have to be pushed at the exact spot or they won't open at all.

NO PROPER PARKING

"Hardly any new terminals have adequate provision for temporary parking to load or unload passengers and baggage from cars. Most of them have dramatic-looking ramps for arriving cars, but they are invariably too narrow for any volume of temporary parking.

"Invariably, too, baggage claiming service is much slower because of the greater distance checked baggage must travel from the field to the claiming area. And because of the long walk you've got the plane, you've got to arrive at the field a few minutes earlier than you would ordinarily plan.

"Perhaps there is no place for esthetics in designing airport terminals, but why must all of them be so unimaginatively similar, cold and sterile-looking?

QUAINT CHARM

"I mourn, for example, the passing of one of the really pleasant old terminals, that in San Francisco. Sure, it was small and crowded, but with its characterstic Spanish architecture and ever-present note of lively gaiety it had the indefinable charm of San Francisco written all over it. Now you wouldn't know whether you're there or in Philadelphia until you get into town.

"I suppose some people do use the beauty parlors, gift shops, newsreel theatres, pinball emporiums and other conveniences with which the new terminals are supposedly blessed. But I—and a great many other travellers I've talked to — would just as soon have some attention paid to the railroad and bus stations, which we also use,, or at least see some of the more basic conveniences designed into the new airport buildings if they must be built."

Prince Charles School Exhibits Art Work at McCarthy Theatre

An interesting collection of pencil drawings, crayon work, and cut-out art work by the pupils of Prince Charles School is now on view in the lounge of the McCarthy theatre, and will continue until next Saturday. This display includes work by the various grades from grade II up to and including grade six.

Beginning with those drawn by grade II, one sees the use of imagination, as in the drawings of the Eskimo igloos and the setting sun; a whole fence of Valentine hearts with little children apparently presenting each other with a Valentine gifts; and various interpretations of a snow storm in degrees of intensity. Other pictures were "Timbering", showing the woodmen sawing down the sturdy trees; relief pictures and skating and skiing scenes.

COLOR APPRECIATION

Color appreciation was shown in the Mexican boy with the red sombrero, blue shirt and brown pants, standing amid the desert cacti; "Mr. Blackbird", was nicely drawn with his checked waistcoat, and brown hat, not to mention the big brown cigar.

A motion picture depicted a boy and girl skating; and the pencil drawings of deer though faint, showed a sensitivity of detail, while the crayon rodeo was full of action, and strong in concept. The finger painting pictures, one in red, and one in blue were clean cut; but those pictures depicting the fairy stories held the attention and included, "Little Red Ridinghood with her basket and the sly wolf following behind, and in the distance, the little house where her sick grandmother lived.

Other scenes showed the 'ski jumper' in the take-off; and one which might be called "The Gift", showed a young girl one in pencil holding a nicely wrapped package. This showed care and attention to detail. The scene of the "Seven Dwarfs", on their way home at the end of the day to their little house in the wood, was arresting.

VASES OF CARNATIONS

Something different was the handwork of pressed leaves; the blue vases of white carnations; the lacey Valentine cards with their little cupids; and the box pictures—one showing a snow scene with children sleigh riding; another of a pool with under-water creatures. Two eye-catching pictures were done in mono chrome—black and white depicting a winter scene of the "lonesome pine" and "a winding road" These were by a grade six pupil.

The wall mural, entitled "Community Helpers", was full of life— boys and girls, older folks, a milkman, houses, trees snow-touched. The room interiors done with cut-out paper, showing dresser and other furniture; the girl watering flowers in the garden, and "Jack and Jill", shown tumbling down the hill; "Humpty Dumpty" sitting in state on the fence, and the "Three Blind Mice" still had their tails, presumably the farmer's wife had not as yet caught up with them, were all well done.

Not a large display, but nicely arranged, showing much promise, and a fund of imagination and color appreciation.

In the alcove two new paintings were noted: one of a flowering Sunset geranium in pot, realistic and carefully colored, by R. Allen, and a seascape, in sand color, depicting rolling surf and a beached skiff by John Bennett of Northern Vocational school, Toronto.

Bethany W.A., W.M.S. Hold Joint Meet

The February meeting of the Bethany W.M.S. and W.A. was held recently at the home of Mrs. Frank Walker, Belleville, with an attendance of 32 members and seven children.

The president of the W.M.S., Mrs. Bert Martin, opened the meeting with the worship service.

Mrs. Bruce Martin, Mrs. Herb. Howes, Mrs. Russell Ritz and Mrs. Clare Sills, assisted the leader with readings, who read several Scripture passages.

Mrs. Grant Cole and Mrs. Harold Pound were in charge of the program. A reading "The World's Bible", was given by Mrs. David Martin, while Mrs. Duane Martin read "Why". A story "The Artist Who Forgot Four Colors," by Mrs. Gordon McPherson, and poems were given by Mrs. Clare Sills, and Mrs. George Sills. Mrs. John Ritz gave the study book "The Church in India."

Mrs. Martin conducted the business for the W.M.S. Rev. Mr. Throop led in prayer.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Clapp sent thanks for the basket of flowers sent to them on their 50th wedding anniversary.

It was announced the World Day of Prayer is to be observed on February 25. A quilting and dinner will be held in the morning in the kitchen after which the members will retire to the church for the service.
home of Mrs. Bert Martin.

The March meeting is to be held in the afternoon at the W.A.

Mrs. Grant Cole, president of the W.A., conducted a business period. Mrs. David Martin gave the treasurer's report.

It was decided to buy new drapes for the church kitchen.

Mrs. Clayton Eggleton and Mrs. Horace Casey were appointed as a committee to look for a piano.

It was decided to buy choir books for the Junior Choir.

Mrs. Bert Martin moved a vote of thanks to the hostess.

The 3rd line ladies served refreshments and a social period followed.

Cannifton CGIT Holds 'Mother Daughter' Banquet

On Wednesday last the annual "Mother and Daughter" banquet of the Cannifton Canadian Girls in Training was held in Cannifton United Church school rooms.

Guest speaker of the evening was Mrs. Varcoe, past president of the Girls' Work Board.

After a delicious meal the CGIT president called upon Margaret McLeod to propose a toast to the church. Margaret said, in part, "This church to me means the body of Christ." Rev. L. S. Throop, in replying said, "We should all be one in Christ."

Myrna Milton gave the toast to the Sunday School, noting that "we should follow the words 'I am the way, the truth and the Life'." Mrs. Brenton answered the toast by saying that the influence of CGIT attendance at Sunday school gave to the school a bright future.

Marlene Latchford welcomed the mothers to the banquet and thanked them for coming. Mrs. Williams replied by pointing out that fortunate mothers were blessed with daughters.

GUEST SPEAKER

The guest speaker was introduced by Mrs. Throop. Knowing that Mrs. Varcoe has a close connection with CGIT she was welcomed with open hearts. She thanked everyone for the privilege of addressing them and chose as her text "Be Glad." She wished that everyone be glad because they were a Canadian, living in this free country; that they be glad they were now "in training" to meet the problems of the future, and to exemplify this she closed with the story of the "Shining Star."

Group leader, Mrs. E. McLeod called on Mrs. Berry, present president of the Girls' Work Board, to outline some of the work of that body of girls.

Pictures were taken of the guests and members and the evening closed with "Taps" and the benediction.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. Holds Attractive Valentine Tea

Tall white pillars entwined with red bands, and interspersed with tiny red hearts and cupids; windows enhanced by large red hearts, while little red cupids with darts and bows held sway across the soft green curtains of the stage, and guarded the clock at the rear, formed a truly Valentine atmosphere yesterday afternoon in the Sunday school room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, for the afternoon tea sponsored by the Women's Missionary Society.

Meeting the guests at the door were, Mrs. V. Weir, president of the society, and Mrs. F. Parsons, vice-president.

LOVELY TEA TABLE

The tea table, which occupied the central portion was lovely as a dream with its exquisite Scotch lace cloth, centred by a crystal bowl of red tulips, white stocks, white snapdragons, interspersed with spikes of downy pussy willows and feathery asparagus fern, from which tiny, red cupids peeped forth. Flanking this charming arrangement were tri-branched silver candelabra with tall red candels, and at either end the gleaming silver services.

The little guest tables were pleasingly arranged round about, each with its snowy-white coth, centred with an attractive plate having a white lacey doily holding aloft a dainty red cupid, dividing the tempting sandwiches from the equally delicious little cakes.

Those presiding at the tea table included, Mrs. D. L. Fleming and Mrs. I. L. Moore; Mrs. A. Cameron and Miss M. E. Mackintosh.

SERVING

Those who served were, Mrs. M. Barlow, Mrs. G. Shaw, Mrs. J. MacKenzie; Mrs. D. McDonald, Mrs. E. Powell, Mrs. W. Marner, Mrs. H. Arnott, Miss M. Waters, Miss J. MacKintosh; Mrs. O. Reed, Mrs. H. Cowie, Mrs. M. Ward and Mrs. J. Darvell. Those who replenished were, Mrs. B. Beans; Mrs. J. Webb, Miss H. Blair and Miss L. Weir.

The tea room hostesses were Mrs. N. E. Pigden, Mrs. R. Carmichael. Assisting in the kitchen were, Mrs. J. Browning and Mrs. P. Thompson.

As usual, the homecooking table, with its white cloth, and garlands of red, was a most attractive spot. Convening the luscious looking cherry pies, the pink-iced angel cake; the date loaves, little individual meat pies, cookies, raspberry, taffy and cherry tarts; maple creams, Turkish Delight, marmalades and mustard pickles, homemade bread and buns; date swirls, banana cakes and maple chiffon cake were Mrs. H. Yorke, Mrs. D. Kane and Mrs. J. Miller. At one end of the homecooking table were a number of little boxes of cards for every occasion, as well as boxes of wrapping ribbon in colors of rose, yellow, green, blue and mauve.

The treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. J. Diamond and Mrs. C. J. Fisher.

A most attractive tea bringing commendation to the conveners, Mrs. A. Bell and Mrs. W. Mantle; to the decorating committee, Mrs. M. Barlow and Mrs. G. Shaw, for the pleasing atmosphere created, and to all those behind the scenes who gave of time and assisted in its successful conclusion.

Kiwanis L.A. Holds Valentine Tea and Bridge

Festoons of red and white streamers adorned the stately pillars of the Kiwanis Centre, while smiling cupids and red hearts added a glowing note to the Valentine atmosphere for the delightful tea, and bridge held on Wednesday afternoon under the sponsorship of the Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary.

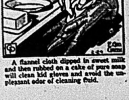
Receiving the guests were: Mrs. W. Cook and Mrs. A. D. Drysdale whose gracious welcome and warm handclasp were most cheering.

There were 40 tables in play with prizes going to Mrs. Ireland, Mrs. L. Shields and Mrs. C. Thorn. The door prize was won by Mrs. Clark, and the grocery baskets went to the holders of the lucky tickets, Miss L. Courneyea, and Mrs. C. Argue.

Refreshments were in charge of Mrs. C. Argue, Mrs. K. Pinder and Mrs. R. H. Widdifield, while Mesdames L. Maraskas, A. Wilson, Eaton, S. Domenico, A. Lloyd, G. Hosang, W. Allen, L. Reid, G. Wallbridge, J. Kuntze, W. Stovin, J. Walton, H. Cross, E. Finkle, G. Lee, J. Black and Chipman served the dainty sandwiches and delicious cakes cups of tea.

Mrs. W. Slade was the convener to whom apprecative thanks are tendered for a most enjoyable afternoon.

Wife Preservers



A flannel cloth dipped in sweet milk and then rubbed on a cake of pure soap will clean kid gloves and avoid the unpleasant odor of cleaning fluid.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHOULD THEY MARRY NOW, OR WAIT FOUR YEARS

A young woman of 20, and a chap of 18, who have been going together for three years, are eager to marry now. But they are hesitating because, as she tells it:

"Bob plans on going to college next fall, and all along we have planned on marrying before he went, and then I would work while he goes to school. But we don't think we will have enough money to do this, so it is either skip college, or wait four years before we marry. Since I am a year and half older than Bob, that would make me almost 25 before we could marry. You may think that since Bob is only 18, he is rather young to be in love but, actually, he is much older than other boys of 18.

"Maybe you think me selfish, and maybe I am, but I love Bob and don't want to wait four years. I want him to have all the advantages of a college education, so that he can get a good job, but I also want him. We already find it hard to control ourselves, and to wait four years would be impossible. Bob doesn't want to wait four years, either, but he realizes the value of an education, too."

Well, let me ask this:

Are these young people any less intelligent and smart about practical things than a lot of other young people their age who marry and arrange their lives so the husbands can go to school?

It is true, of course, that many young husbands now finishing their educations are former GIs, and so are studying at government expense. But that is not invariably the case, by any means. For there are numerous modern marriages in which the husband continues his schooling while the wife earns their living until he is through, and if others have done it, why not these two?

I suggest that this girl and her Bob see how smart they can be about drawing up sone comcrete plan by which they could live if they did decide to marry while Bob is still in school, taking into consideration the foreseeable problems that might arise, as, for instance the coming of a baby. Nobody can plan for the unexpected, but they should at least have some sort of financial margin to rely on if they unexpected occurred.

It would seem to me a pity for Bob not to go through with his college plans, for to have this kind of background would certainly get him farther, as a job-holder, than he might if he went to work without it. Moreover, however they themselves may feel about it, an 18-year-old boy is pretty young to take on the full responsibility of marriage. So I think that college should not be tossed out impulsively.

Waiting four years would, of course, be a difficult thing to do. Still, if the goals eventually desired can better be served by doing that, these two would, in my opinion, be well-advised to do it. And it is rather adolescent, I think, for the girl to say that, since she and Bob find it hard to control themselves, it would be "impossible" to wait four more years for the intimate relationship of marriage. It all depends on what kind of young people they are; what sort of standards, principles and ideals they believe really worth while and whether or not they are mature enough to face realities and think straight about them.

They will simply have to make up their minds what will mean most of them in the long run: doing as they wish right now, or postponing their immediate desires for the sake of long-range good.

No mention is made, in the letter, of what attitude the parents of the young people hold on the subject of an immediate marriage. Has the subject been talked over with them, I wonder, and, if not wouldn't it be a good idea? Given a chance, they might have some really useful ideas to contribute.

The wisest plan, it seems to me, would be for the two to draw up the very best "design for living" in a combination marriage-college setup that they can devise; then talk it over with both sets of parents and see what comes of it. And if no practical way of effecting the combination can be worked out, then they will have to choose whether they shall sacrifice the college project for the sake of marraige now, or wait awhile and have both.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

BOY GUEST SHOULD BRING ..HOSTESS A BIRTHDAY GIFT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A very dear girl friend of mine is giving a party to celebrate her sixteenth birthday, a party for both girls and boys. She is inviting her best girl friends who in turn are to invite their own escorts. Should each girl be expected to buy only the present she is giving, or a present for her and the boy to give also? And if the boy doesn't chip in on this present, should the card be signed with the girl's name only, or with both the girl's and the boy's names? — Puzzled Teen-ager

Really a boy should have sense enough to know that if he accepts an invitation to a birthday party, whether or not he knows the girl whose birthday it is, he should take her a present. A most simple inexpensive present will do to show he knows what's what, just a merry present from the five-and-ten, or a box of cards, perhaps, from the corner stationer, or an addition to party-fodder, a small box of peppermints or even one or two candy bars.

If a boy whom a girl has invited to share the birthday girl's hospitality isn't willing to "give" with even a most inexpensive present, the girl can, if she wishes (and I should think she would wish to do this(cover up her escort's thoughtlessness by providing for him a trifling something to give to his hostess when he arrives at the party.

TELEPHONE INQUIRY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When someone whose voice I don't recognize calls on the telephone and asks for me . . . "May I speak with Miss Smith?" . . . I am not sure whether I should answer, "This is she" or "This is Miss Smith." Which is correct? — V.K.

Either is correct. However, I think that "This is Miss Smith' is somewhat preferable, since it repeats the name for the assurance of the one calling.

CEREMONY, RECEPTION, DINNER . . . BETTER THAN CEREMONY, DINNER, RECEPTION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are planning to have a dinner after our church wedding. Would it be correct to invite the guests-not-invited-to-the-dinner to the reception after dinner? — E.

It may be "correct' . . . there's no rule against it! . . . but, in my judgment, this is one of the most inconsiderate plans that can be made by those planning a wedding. For what in the world are the guests-at-the-ceremony supposed to do in the interim between the ceremony and the reception? If they are so eager to go to the reception and so patint as not to mind either waiting or traveling back-and-forth from their homes or wherever . . . good. If not, they may decide not to return for the reception, so inconsiderately and inconveniently planned as to time. Why not have the reception immediately following the ceremony, and then the dinner "for the few' after the reception? Or have the dinner as the rehearsal dinner an evening or two before the wedding.

HOSTESS SHAKES HANDS WITH DEPARTING GUEST

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one is leaving a party is it considered good form to take the hostess' hand as one is telling her good-bye and thanking her for the delightful party —— N.

It is the hostess who should immediately extend her hand to the guest if she realizes that the guest has come to her to say good-bye. However, it is quite proper for the guest to extend her hand first to the hostess, to indicate that she is leaving and that she wishes to say her thanks for the hospitality.

QUESTION:

Could you please give recipe for very hard gingerbread?—S.O.

ANSWER:

There are several types. I hope the following suits.

HARD SUGAR GINGERBREAD

Three-quarters cup butter, 1 1-2 cups sugar, 3-4 cup milk, 5 cups unsifted but not packed flour, 3-4 tablespoon baking powder, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 3-4 tablespoon ginger. Cream butter, add sugar gradually while creaming, the milk, then dry ingredients sifted together. Place a ball of the mixture on a cookie sheet or inverted shallow pan and roll out as thinly as possible to cover pan. Mark the dough with a coarse grater. Sprinkle with sugar and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. Before removing from pan, cut in strips 4 1-2 by 1 1-2 inches.

QUESTION:

. . .after bringing chops from the store how long should they remain in the frig. before being cooked. . . we had chops, they were very thin. . . they were hard. . . I don't know if it was my cooking . . .would you have time to tell me how to cook them on a heavy iron frying pan—lamb chops, pork chops? This is the way I cook them: I put a little bit of fat in the pan, fry the chops till a little gold, then I sprinkle tomato juice, add a little bit of water, cover, but the lid isn't tight fit. . .wishing you God's blessing. . .

ANSWER:

I was pleased to see your handwriting and to hear from you again. I know the great majority of cooks panfry chops and steaks. A friend of mine asked me how the hotels had their chops and steaks cooked. She said "theirs are always so good, but no matter how much I pay for mine they are hard and not juicy." The difference is that chops and steaks are broiled by chefs and cooks, trained to broil by dry heat. When you add moisture to your chops it is called fricasseeing. Flavor and texture of meat is much improved if one chop 1 inch thick is served instead of 2 chops 1-2 inch thick. Lamb chops are at their best when 2 or 1 1-2 inches thick and broiled.

Lamb and pork chops should never be underdone (as steak usually is) but on the other hand should never be cooked any longer than is necessary to just cook them through. Test chops with point of sharp knife at the bone. A 1-inch lamb chop directly from refrigerator requires 7 minutes under very hot preheated broiler element or burner; 1 1-2 inch chop 11 minutes; 2-inch chop 17 minutes. Braised Pork Chops are delicious—brown salted and peppered loin or shoulder chops in barely greased heavy hot frying pan, on both sides. Add a very little water—not more than 2 tablespoons—cover tightly, and cook over low heat until tender—thick chops require 30 minutes, thin chops 10 to 15 minutes.

QUESTION:

. . . do you have a recipe for rice and mushroom stuffing for duck. My son was home from Toronto for Christmas and wanted a duck stuffed this way.—Mrs. F. V.

ANSWER:

I don't blame him for wanting it—it is wonderful.

RICE AND MUSHROOM STUFFING

One and one-half cups raw long grain rice, 2 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons minced onion, 1-4 (or 1-2) lb. sliced fresh mushrooms, 4 cups soup stock (this may be chicken broth or diluted canned consomme), 2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning, 1 egg. Fry gently in butter until transparent the onion, then add the mushrooms and rice. Saute gently stirring until rice takes on gold tinge, then add soup stock (which should be very mild) and salt and seasoning. Cover and steam gently 20 minutes. Remove from heat, add beaten egg and mix. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cool a little before stuffing into fowl. Stuff fowl, truss it and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. without any water, lid or basting—3 1-4 hours for a 5-lb. duck.

TO ATTEND JAMBOREE

OTTAWA (CP) — A contingent of more than 800 Boy Scouts from France will attend the world jamboree at Niagara-on-the-Lake, August 18-28, the Canadian Boy Scouts Association announced Wednesday. Six patrols of deaf, blind and partially paralyzed Scouts will be included in the contingent. It is hoped that the French boys will stay at the homes of Canadian Scouts before the jamboree, the association said.

Beauty

DEEP BREATHING BRINGS COLOR TO THE CHEEKS

Give your lungs the air! Get out in the fresh air, inhale deeply, and you can chuck the rouge pad away. You will have naturally rosy cheeks.

Pause a moment and think. Do you ever inhale deeply, filling your chest with air? Probably not. If you will do this for five minutes, night and morning, all these interlacing muscles from the neck down over the ribs will be strong and resilient. Your chest will be high, wide and handsome.

Opera singers are usually chesty because they give their lungs work to do. They know how to breathe properly.

When you breath correctly, there is a rhythical lifting and descending of the diaphragm that draws air into the lowest cells of the lungs and expels stale air. Light breathing reaches only the upper lobes and the diaphragm scarcely moves. Deep inhalations and the thorough expelling of stagnant air compresses the liver, stimulates the processes of the digestive organs. It tenses and tones all the fibers and tissues of the mid section.

By clavicular breathing is meant the lifting of the collar bones and the shoulders. You extend the spinal column and that strengthens the muscles of the back. Fine for the girl with rounded shoulders and thin girls who would take to curves.

Costal breathing is achieved by expanding the lungs to the limit, inhaling slowly through the nostrils, exhaling through the lips.

Diaphragmatic breathing, which means pulling the abdominal muscles inward and upward at each intake of air, is a world-beating waist-slimmer. Overweights should include this practice in the reducing program.

I WILL BE GLAD

I will be glad though winter winds are wailing,
I will be happy though the skies are gray,
For there are those who need my joy and gladness
Burdened and weary on life's toilsome way.

I will not dread the dark and dreary future,
For by the waters still He leads me on,
With God to guide I'll laugh at toil and danger
Till life is past and earthly days are done.
—Helen B. Anderson.

"A real old-fashioned winter", a friend writes in a recent letter. And today, February 16, the snow is still falling. But the young folk enjoy the winter with hockey and skating, for there is a zest in the cold of a Canadian winter—a joy that the tropics do not know. And beauty too in the snow-mantled earth!

Oh, sweet the silence of the snow,
The ermine-covered cedar spires,
The vigor in the winter's blow
The homely light of friendly fires;
The ringing strokes of skater's steel,
The laugh and shout of restless youth—
To native hearts make sweet appeal
These joys that winter brings in truth.

But as we grow older we long for the summer, and then the warmer countries attract. Miss Helen Arthur writes from St. Petersburg, Florida, of the fine days that came with February 1, following cooler weather. I recall, on visiting St. Petersburg for the first time after a cold motor drive from the north, what a beautiful place it seemed, and rightly named the Sunshine City, and how I enjoyed the band concerts in the park, and also meeting the friendly people on the green benches.

THE GREEN BENCHES IN ST. PETERSBURG, FLORIDA.

They rest upon the benches green,
The folk both old and young,
And bask beneath the welcome rays
Of the glorious southern sun;
With migrant birds from northern lands
They sought a tropic clime,
And thus escape the storm and snow
Of a northern winter time.

And so upon the benches green
They meet from day to day.
The sprightly matron and the maid,
And grandma, old and gray;
With eye alert the bachelor
Selects a seat beside
A young and winsome widow
In whom he would confide.

'Tis true that cupid hovers
About these benches green,
The ardent youth of sixty years
And amorous mien is seen;
And women of uncertain age
Re-live their long-lost youth,
Capture again the wiles and smiles
They long had lost, forsooth.

The southern sun gives healing power
To all the aged and ill,
And spirits crushed in sorrow's hour
With peace again are filled;
The Southland is a refuge rare
When winter winds blow keen,
But would it be one-half so fair
Without the benches green?
—H.B.A.

Garden Notes

February Garden Pointers

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

The days are lengthening and that means renewed growth in houseplants. Nip out the tip of spindly branches and pick off dead leaves and blooms. Soak the soil and stir up the surface gently with a table fork. When the moisture has drained into the container apply liquid fertilizer mixed according to directions on the bottle, or bury a tablet of concentrated plant food in each pot and let it disolve slowly. Most plants in six inch pots can now be fed every two weeks before being placed outside.

It is now time to start new cuttings, from house plants, to planting in the garden. These should be four to six inch lengths of branch tips, from geraniums patience (sometimes called house balsam), begonias, necklace vine, and coleus. Small pots filled with a mixture of sand, peat moss and top soil, are good for rooting all of these. Roots will start quicker if the cut surface is allowed to dry slightly, then dipped in rootone, a root inducing hormone powder. A 25-cent package will be enough for all of your spring needs. I prefer to root cuttings in gallon jars obtained from a cleaner. firm. (These contained cleaner fluids.) They are square and have large mouths which makes planting and care easy.

In the jars I place three inches of vermiculite, obtainable at seed stores.

USE TEPID WATER

Pour tepid water in slowly until the whole mass is damp. Any excess water can be drained off. Make a hole with a pencil and put in the cutting, firming the vermiculite around it. Test for moisture with the finger after five days—if the vermiculite feels dry, tip the jar and slowly run tepid water down the inside of the jar so the cuttings will not be washed out. Do not keep wet, merely sightly damp. The temperature can be from 50 to 75. They need not be near a window an open shelf in the kitchen will do.

When the roots have formed and a new pair of leaves have developed, the plants can be moved to small pots. Do not feed heavily, or water too generously. Sturdy roots are more important than lush top growth for bedding plants. But, since the soil in small pots dries quickly, and over-drying means a set back, place a number of small pots on a tray, pan, or seed flat with a two-inch layer of sand. Keep the sand damp and the plants will not dry out.

GOOD TIME TO TEND TOOLS

This is a good time to oil up and sharpen garden tools and give the handles a coat of bright paint. Clean off any rust which has formed before applying the oil. If you are the handy type perhaps you could take the lawn mower apart and put it in good order for spring use.

Watch for a warm day, when the temperature reaches 40 degrees and apply a dormant spray to lilacs and other shrubs which are subject to scale insects.

Examine your dahlias, cannas and gladiolus to see that they are not drying out, or suffering from thrips, or rot. Examine stored fruits and vegetables too using up, or destroying any that show spots, preventing spreading of the infection.

TEND HOUSE PLANTS

Shift your house plants around, bringing out the best-looking plants where they will be seen and admired. Spray houseplants with tepid water every two weeks. They will respond with a new burst of growth. Ivy and philodendron leaves take on a fine gloss if rubbed lightly with a little margarine. Kate Aitken reminded us of this a week or two ago. I used it and all the ivies in the kitchen window look like new. By the way, all kinds of ivies love the humid atmosphere of the kitchen, where boiling water and food keep the air moist. They also thrive well in a north window, another point in their favor.

Little Gary Nugent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Nugent underwent a tonsilectomy in Belleville General Hospital on Monday.

SHANNONVILLE — Mr. and Mrs. Eric Husler and Judy of Milltown, spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Robert Kincaid, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Wilson and Mary Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Garrison of the fourth of Thurlow were recent tea-hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Hogle, Toronto, have returned home after spending a couple of days with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boulstridge.

Mr. Robert Arnold Porrt of this community died suddenly on Saturday. The deceased was a highly respected farmer and had lived his entire life in this district. The funeral service was held Tuesday afternoon in Holy Trinity Church and was largely attended.

Bancroft Area Phone Companies Will Be United

TORONTO. — Fourteen rural telephone companies in the Bancroft area will become the first group of such systems to be united into one company by telephone authority proposed in legislation tabled in the Legislature this week by Hon. George Challies.

Lacking funds to privately undertake the cost of engineering and equipment needed to join them into an economical and satisafctory service to their subscribers, the 14 would be linked by the authority along lines which, Mr. Challies said, it was hoped would lead to a complete rural telephone service comparable to the present rural hydro servce.

The government's plans for better rural telephone service were contained in two bills submitted by the minister and given first reading. One provided for amendments to the Telephone Act, legislation enacted by the assembly several years ago when it was proposed by the Frost government to advance assistance to rural telephone companies which were in difficulty or which were unable to extend or replace obsolete services. The second bill would establish the new authority, giving it powers to acquire the numerous small companies and join them into adequate units which could fit into a provincial pattern.

The Bancroft area would be the first to experience the effects of the legislation, Mr. Challies said. The 14 small companies had already discussed the situation with the government and had requested that something be done.

3rd Hillier

3rd HILLIER — Mrs. Clifford Panting and Miss Florence Miller called on Mrs Ross Benway Wednesday. Rev. C. P. Heaven called the same afternoon.

The Hillier Institute will be entertained at the home of the president, Mrs. Delbert Boyle on Friday evening February 18.

Mr. and Mrs. M. McIntosh and Linda of Belleville, Mr. Austin Lusk and friend, Miss Bernice Lucas of Belleville, spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Benway and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hamilton and family were at Picton Saturday.

Friends of Mr. Hamilton's sister, Mrs. Morley Baker, of Picton, are sorry to hear of her illness and being in Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Wright of Hillier spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Will Dainard.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Benway and girls were recent visitors with Mrs. Benway's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Ward of Wellington.

Ivanhoe

IVANHOE — Mr. and Mrs. F. Campbell, Foxboro; Prof. Ralph Campbell, Guelph; Mr. and Mrs. William Shaw were Saturday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. Shaw.

Mrs. Harry Benson, Miss Helen Kerby spent the week-end in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Arthurs, Teddy and Barbara, of Foxboro, spent Sunday with Mrs. Henry Wallace.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Prest, Mr. and Mrs. William Shaw attended the Federation of Agriculture banquet held in Stirling on Friday evening.

Mrs. C. B. Hamm of Belleville, spent the week-end with Miss Annie and Miss Bessie Fleming.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw and Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. William Shaw spent Thursday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Walton Reid and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Reid.

It was with sadness and regret that this community learned of the sudden death of Mrs. John Gay on Saturday, February 12th. She was a devoted wife and mother and since coming here to reside sixteen years ago has made a host of friends.

In the passing of Eva Gay this community has lost a good neighbor and a loyal friend who will be long remembered for her kindliness and gracious hospitality.

Mrs. Arthur Green, Miss Ethel Brodie, Toronto; Mr. Harper Gay, Mrs. Robert Kemp, Mr. and Mrs. Chisholm, Miss Betty Chisholm, Miss Frances King, Niagara Falls; Miss Edith Dunn, Salamanca, New York, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. John Gay on Tuesday afternoon.

Extra Police Protection Given Under By-Law

STIRLING — The village council held special meetings last week and they issued a by-law for extra police protection. Sam Eggleton will be on duty in the daytime at a salary of $1,500., and transportation allowance of $300., while Donald Tucker was hired at a salary of $1,700. for night duty as watchman. Mr. Tucker will begin his duties as soon as he receives his new uniform which is being ordered through Patterson's Men's Wear. Mr. Eggleton, also, has several other minor jobs such as sanitary officer, truant officer, weed inspector and dog tag officer.

Knighthood Capped Distinguished Career of Sir Leslie Knox Munro

By WILLIAM HARCOURT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—On his 51st birthday three years ago, Leslie Knox Munro of New Zealand presented to President Truman his credentials as New Zealand ambassador to the United States. The same day he was appointed his country's permanent representative at the United Nations.

But two of his country's most important diplomatic posts did not end the honors coming to the big, amiable, bushy-browed New Zealander. Last New Year's Day, the Queen made him a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

The knighthood capped the distinguished career of Sir Leslie, lawyer, lecturer, journalist, editor, broadcaster and, most recently, diplomat.

When the knighthood was announced, a veteran UN correspondent, speaking for all of them, said:

"It couldn't have happened to a nicer guy."

LIKED AND ABLE

One of the best-liked as well as one of the ablest of the UN diplomatic corps, Sir Leslie recently occupied the UN spotlight as president of the Security Council the day it voted to take up the question of a Formosa cease-fire.

His duties that day pointed up his ability to handle two jobs at the same time, something he has been doing ever since that birthday, Feb. 26, 1952.

As New Zealand's representative on the Security Council, he supported his country's proposal for a cease-fire, and as council president he acted as chairman of the debate. A somewhat similar situation arose a year ago when Sir Leslie was president of both the Security Council and trusteeship council at the same time.

CHRONIC SHUTTLER

But shuttling back and forth between UN council chambers is not difficult for one used to holding down simultaneous jobs in Washington and New York.

"I suppose I know the Washington-New York route as well as anyone," he says. "I couldn't begin to say how many times I've made the trip—both by plane and by train. I spend at least half my time in New York. I go to Washington and back usually twice a week. Often I go down at night and come back in the morning.'

He and Lady Munro keep residences in both cities. Living and working in two cities doesn't seem to strain the quiet-voiced Sir Leslie.

"I'm fortunate to have a good constitution," he said.

IMPRESSED BY CANADA

From his vantage point in international affairs, he says he is continually impressed by "Canada's judgment."

"New Zealand has a very high respect for the moderate and reasonable way in which Canadians approach international matters."

Nor is his aquaintance with Canadians limited to the diplomatic level. In 1946 he was selected as one of New Zealand's delegates to the Empire Press Union conference and it was on this trip to Britain that he first visited Canada "which much impressed me and where I made many friends."

He visited Vancouver, Banff, Toronto and Montreal and recalls that while visiting the House of Commons in Ottawa he met a civil service official in the gallery who later became his good friend and UN associate, L. B. Pearson, Canada's external affairs minister.

Born in Auckland, Sir Leslie won a university scholarship and obtained his master of laws degree from Auckland University College with honors in contracts and Roman law. He started practising law at 23 and at 37 was dean of the law faculty.

SUDDENLY AN EDITOR

"I was in law for 20 years and then I was suddenly offered the editorship of the New Zealand Herald—I'd been doing legal writing for the paper—and after much thought I accepted the offer."

He retained his post as associate editor of the paper until late 1951, when he received his appointment as ambassador.

For three years before the Second World War he gave a twice-weekly broadcast on international affairs over New Zealand Radio and from September 1939 to Noevmber 1951, except when he was abroad, contributed a weekly article on world affairs to the Auckland Weekly News.

He has found time to visit most parts of the U.S., to speak to many different groups, students, lawyers, rotarians, women's clubs, and make radio and television broadcasts.

It's all in a day's work to the indefatigable knight from New Zealand.

DIPLOMAT

Sir Leslie Knox Munro, New Zealand ambassador to the United States and his country's permanent representative at the United Nations, shuttles between homes in Washington and New York to keep up with his two jobs. Sir Leslie, 54, was knighted in the Queen's New Year's honors list, capping a career as lawyer, editor and diplomat. Before coming to the United States he was editor of the New Zealand Herald in Auckland. (CP Photo.)

5th THURLOW — Mr. Harold Peters held a farm sale on Wednesday. Neighbors will be sorry to learn they are moving to Newburg in the Spring.

Mr. Ralph Swan has gone to Toronto Hospital for medical treatment. All wish him a speedy recovery.

All are glad to welcome the milder weather and hope it is the harbinger of "Spring just around the Corner."

The sympathy of the neighborhood goes to Mrs. Will Hodgen in the death of her husband, in Belleville General Hospital on Friday evening last, after a lengthy illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Boomhour, of Petawawa Military camp, spent the weekend at the home of Mrs. Will Hodgen. Mrs. Boomhour is a niece of the late Mr. Hodgen.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Montgomery, Toronto, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yorke.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Yorke, Tweed, and Mrs. J. O. Rollins and boys, Plainfield, attended the funeral on Monday of their uncle, Mr. Hodgen, at Belleville Burial Funeral Home.

The films were held at the school on Tuesday evening for the first time this school term.

Mr. and Mrs. Gibson Hodgen, Belleville, had supper on Monday evening, with Mrs. Will Hodgen.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Yorke, Belleville, were Monday evening supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yorke.

Music Critic Denied Press Facilities

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stanley Bligh, music critic for the Vancouver Sun, who once described Erna Sack's famed high notes as "eeks," has been denied press facilities at the singer's concert here Saturday.

The order to deny Mr. Bligh press tickets for the concert came from Hermann Sack, husband and manager of the blonde, buxom coloratura soprano in a letter to the management of Famous Artists.

Mr. Sack said the ban was because "every word was a personal insult" in a review by Mr. Bligh of Madame Sack's concert here in 1949. He said his wife "does not want to be insulted again."

The Sun said advertising of the Sack concert was run as scheduled Thursday although it had been advised earlier that advertising would be cancelled if the ban on Bligh was made public at this time.

The Sun headed the story:

"Bligh Upset by Singer's Eeks; Mr. Sack Upset by Bligh Critique.

Bulletins From Birdland

OUR ARCTIC

People do not realize how many kinds of birds are to be found in our Canadian Barrens. Churchill may be said to be the point at which those of the north and those with less frigid taste meet and overlap. From there up to the North pole stretches a vast tundra, which extends from the Mackenzie River to Hudson Bay.

Similar barren land is found in northern Quebec and Labrador, and in the northern tip of Yukon. This wide-spread desert might well hold little bird life; but in reality over 200 species make it their home.

First of all, there are those that spend the entire year there, like the Gyrfalcon, only the occasional bird wandering beyond the northern limit of trees. And the rock ptarmigan is to be found from the Arctic Ocean as far south as Newfoundland.

WINTER ELSEWHERE

Then there are some kinds that breed in the frozen north but regularly winter elsewhere. One of the strangest examples is the golden plover, nesting from as far north as some of the Arctic Islands to the southern boundary of the tundra, and wintering in the southern half of South America.

Another, perhaps the commonest bird of this frigid area, is the Arctic tern, whose breeding grounds have been found from within a few miles of the north pole; yet it spends the winter in the oceans of the southern hemisphere.

There are individuals breeding in the tundra region whose brothers and sisters regularly nest as far south as to be near civilization. It is possible to find a horned lark in the summer wherever the ground is barren or the soil impoverished, whether this be on Arctic islands, or way down near the Gulf of Mexico. But those choosing the farthest north posts for their homes move to a more moderate climate, as southern Canada, for the coldest months of the year.

REMAIN IN BARRENS

A number of species remain in the tundra the greater part of their lives, but when a food shortage comes along a few of them leave their habitual territory for a brief period. Such is the snowy owl, and then we have a chance of seeing one.

Visitors to the far north expect to come across hoary redpolls, lapland longspurs, pipits, dowitchers, northern phalaropes, stilt sandpipers, or ravens; but are surprised sometimes to meet the more familiar rusty blackbird, tree sparrow, blackpoll warbler, pintail duck, and herring gull. The fact is that birds are not as much afraid of the cold as are human beings.

Cannifton

CANNIFTON — Mr. and Mrs. Allen Soble of Port Hope attended the funeral of his brother's wife.

The Women's Institute held its monthly meeting on Monday night with a good attendance. Visitors attended from Quinte and Foxboro Institutes.

The Cannifton - Corbyville Euchre Club held its weekly euchre in Corby's Cafeteria with ten tables playing. Prizes were won by: Ladies, Mrs. Windsor; Annie DeMille, Lorraine Curlette; gents Mrs. Sharpe, Barb Lyon, Garnet Windsor and the draw, Bruce Latchford. The lone hand, Mrs. Walsh.

Clancy Does Noggin-Scratching As Boston Bruins Threaten Third Spot

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

AT LONG LAST!

We're in!

The hockey die is cast.

The Belleville Memos wrapped it up last night with a 3-1 victory. Thanks to Vern Goyer. Kingston, not aware of the fact, handed the Memos an indirect assist last night by edging the gallant Brockville Magedomas 6-5.

And three other teams this morning started scratching their figurative noggins. For none of them want to meet the Memos in the semi-finals. And if you don't believe that just watch the jockeying from here in.

Cornwall wants no part of the Bouchermen in the first round. Neither does Whitby—and least of all Kingston. The best defensive team in the league and the only one with a win record on foreign ice, has the opposition in a dither.

The Memos? Non-committal. They're in—and it is going to take a helluva good team to push them out. And the rest of the pack knows that.

Okay, Mr. Rodden, okay. Let the Goodyears, the Colts and the Dunlops do the worrying. The Memos are sitting pretty with a more or less cocky air, "Bring 'em on."

And here, sir, is what Cornwall thinks of this gang from the banks of the Moira:

> "The Whitby Dunlops will be a formidable force in the playoffs; we are more than willing to concede that. However, to our way of thinking, the biggest obstacle to Colts' chances of taking the title is going to be the Belleville Memos. The Memos are a well balanced, hard checking aggregation and their tight defensive tactics are going to present a great deal of trouble come playoff time. Another factor that worries us about the Memos is their record on the road. The Kingston Whig-Staandard dug up the at home and away records of each club as they stood at the end of last week and the Belleville team boasts the best average of any of the seven clubs."

Kingston, through the medium of its newspaper twins, is left in the lurch. Michael J. Rodden and Der Maxie Jackson could be hanged for disloyalty for they pick the Whitby Dunlops to bring home the group gunfalon. Have the Goodyears fallen to such sorry ways that their newspaper benchmen have deserted them, as far as predictions go?

Here is another excerpt from the Cornwall paper which speaks for itself:

> "The Kingston Whig-Standard, through the medium of the sage Max Jackson, is calling Whitby Dunlops to capture the EOSHL title. Mike Rodden, relaying Jackson's opinion in his column, reports that the Dunlops appear to be stronger than when they won the league championship last year. In fact, says Mike, 'The aggregation (Whitby) that beat Goodyears by 7-2 in the Whitby arena last Wednesday evening was such a revelation of power and finesse that the astute Mr. Jackson says they are now the team to beat for the group title.' Well now, that is quite a mouthful of prediction. We wonder what Mr. Jackson and Mr. Rodden think of the 9-2 puncturing received by the Dunlops at the Cornwall arena last Sunday. Just one of those games, no doubt."

So, there you are, as Mr. Gobel might say.

And don't sell this Memo team short. They are about due for a resurgence that would help immensely. And it couldn't happen at a better time. They have been playing consistently good hockey, enough to get them a playoff berth, and if they flash their potential in the forthcoming playoffs, the rest of the senior "B" gang had better look to their laurels.

They travel to Cornwall tomorrow to take on the group-leading Colts and the result will have something to do with the standing. The Memos have had the Indian sign on the Colts all season and none knows it any better than the down-east organization. They have handed the Colts their only two shutouts of the season, one 2-0 on their own ice and the other a 5-0 setback here.

So from here in it will be mighty interesting to see how the foreign brass juggles its figures. As we said before, and we repeat, none of the three teams in competition want to meet the Memos in the semi-finals. And after all, you can't blame 'em. So all to do is sit back and watch the masterminds of the loyal opposition figure ways and means to get into the finals series without meeting our side. It should be good.

Toronto Golfer Moves Up Notch In Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (CP)—Al Balding of Toronto moved up a notch among the leaders Friday with his second brilliant round in succession—a 67 but burly Mike Souchak still led the field by a stroke at the halfway mark in the $12,500 Texas open golf tournament.

Souchak, the ex-Duke University football player from Durham, N.C. Thursday took the first round lead with a record-tying 60. Friday he scrambled to a three-under-par 68 to give him a 36-hole total of 128.

Freddie Haas of Claremont, Calif., turned in a 67 to nudge Souchak as the field was cut to the low 60 shooters and ties. Haas had a total of 129.

Balding moved up from a deadlock for fourth place Thursday with a 64 to a tie for third with Jack Burke of Kiamesha Lake, N.Y. Each had 131. Paul McGuire of Wichita, Kans.; Bob Rosburg of San Francisco, and John Barnum of Grand Rapids, Mich., were next in line with 132s.

Balding, the thin man, would have been right on the neck of Souchak if he hadn't hit one out of bounds. It was on No. 12 and he took a two-over-par six. But otherwise he was hitting them well. At No. 17 he hooked his tee shot into the rough but his second rolled through a sand trap onto the green 20 feet away and he sank it for a birdie.

Souchak saved himself from losing the lead by his work on the back nine. He birdied 12, 13 and 14 in a row with some fancy putting and parred the rest of the way in.

Another Canadian in the tournament, Jerry Kesselring of Kitchener, Ont., was bracketted with five other players with 135. He had rounds of 69 and 66.

GIANTS ALL SIGNED

NEW YORK (AP)—The world champion New York Giants beat the field to the starters' post Friday night by becoming the first major league club to sign all its players to 1955 contracts.

Although no figures are announced by any club, it was estimated the Giants signed their 36-man roster at an average increase of about 15 per cent. That should bring their payroll for players to about $550,000.

Only Four Points in Front Of Upsurging Bean-Eaters Clash in Toronto Tonight

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach King Clancy wants to hit the road. He figures on getting a better break that way.

Clancy was doing a little pencil work Friday on the chances of his Toronto Maple Leafs hanging on Hockey League when he came up with his preference for road games if Leafs expect to stop Boston Bruins from overhauling them.

"We've got a flock of road games left and that's one department in which this club does well," Clancy said.

Reason for the growing interest about road games and Bruins, who were one of the hottest clubs in the league before they were clobbered 10-2 by the last-place Chicago Black Hawks last Thursday, is obvious.

ONLY 13 LEFT

Leafs are four points ahead of the Bruins with only 13 games left in the schedule. Each team must play seven of their remaining games away from home and one of the most important clashes comes when Leafs take on the Bruins in Toronto tonight.

Leafs' road record is good. Half of their 22 wins and nine of their 17 ties have been produced on the road. But so have 10 of their 18 losses.

Bruins, on the other hand, have won about a third of their road engagements with six wins, 13 losses and nine ties.

A win for the Bruins tonight would give them a good chance of overtaking the Leafs. They are virtually guaranteed of staying in the fourth and last playoff spot ahead of New York Rangers and the Hawks.

In another game tonight, the fifth - place Rangers meet the league-leading Canadiens at Montreal. Leafs are at Chicago and the second - place Detroit Red Wings are at New York in two Sunday games.

Saturday will be a bit of a give-away night. In Toronto, Boston rightwinger Leo Labine will receive the key to his native Haileybury, Ont.

A group of 35 businessmen will take in the Toronto-Boston clash and give the key to Labine, the first Haileybury boy in nearly 30 years to graduate into the NHL. Leo has scored 24 goals so far this season.

In Montreal, Canadiens fans will honor 32-year-old centre Ken Mosdell in a special "Mosdell Night." Ken, fifth in the individual scoring race this year with 21 goals and 26 assists, will be given among other things a new car, a combination television and radio set.

Teepees Edge Biltmores 5-3; Dutchies Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks won another hockey game in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league Friday night but there weren't many fans around to appreciate it.

Only 511 customers, including a couple of hundred out-of-towners, were on hand as the last-place Canucks defeated the Hamilton Cubs 5-2 at Kitchener. It was only Canucks' eighth victory of the season but a refreshing change for the faithful few who watched it.

The loss left the Cubs in fifth spot with 47 points, six behind the fourth-place Toronto Marlboros, idle Friday night.

TEEPS BEAT GUELPH

In the only other junior A game, St. Catharines TeePees scored twice in overtime to edge the second-place Guelph Biltmores 5-3 at Guelph. The win gave St. Catharines sole possession of first pace with 62 points, two up on Biltmores and eight ahead of the third-place Toronto St. Michael's Majors.

At Kitchener, Canucks held an edge all through the game. Bob White scored two first-period goals to give Canucks a lead they never relinquished. Howie Young, Stan Baluik and Irv Spencer added the other goals. Brian Smith and Bill McNeil scored for Cubs.

There were hard feelings between the two clubs. At the end of the game, a fight broke out in the corridor as the boys headed for their dressing rooms. It lasted for several minutes but no damage apparently was done.

SCORES WINNER

Bob Butler scored the winning goal at Guelph at 6:16 of the overtime period. Barry Cullen added another for TeePees with 28 seconds remaining in the period.

Hank Ciesla, Nels Bullock and Elmer Vasko also tallied for St. Catharines. Tom McCarthy, Bill Graham and Ron McMillan scored for Guelph.

McCarthy was given a 10-minute misconduct in the third period when he tripped referee Hugh McLean. There was also a fighting episode. McMillan and Matt Thompson.

'Blue Ruler' Favored In Rich Stakes

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—It was Texas-owned Blue Ruler against the field today as Santa Anita prepared to stage the 17th running of its $100,000-added derby.

Blue Ruler, seeking his sixth straight and most important victory, was the individual favorite, and with his stablemate, Jean's Joe, promised to be the betting choice. Both are owned by Mrs. Clint Murchison and Mrs. Wofford Cain of Dallas.

Fourteen colts were named but there was a good chance that the field would be less by post time—approximately 5 p.m. EST — in view of the changing condition of the race track.

RUNNERS MEET AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Wes Santee, Gunnar Nielsen, Fred Dwyer and Co. go at it again in the mile today in the national AAU championships, but their performances for a change won't be of the foremost concern to the track and field set.

This is the big meet for the runners because the results, to a large extent, will determine who does and doesn't go to the Pan-American Games next month in Mexico City. Thirty athletes are to make the trip and this meet is the final shakedown. The squad will be announced Sunday.

Out-of-Towners Win Three Spiel Trophies

TORONTO (CP)—Out-of-towners won three of the Ontario bonspiel's six trophies Friday as rinks from Peterborough, Hamilton and Unionville captured events.

Stan Jones of Hamilton won the Birks, A. C. McCartney of Peterborough won the Parker Pen and George Lake of Unionville won the Monarch Knitting Trophy.

All three—plus the Royal York, North American Life and Seagram Trophies—were won by Toronto rinks last year.

The bonspiel wound up Friday after five days of competition.

WINS GRAND AGGREGATE

Verne Matthewman defeated Bill Wyse of Toronto 12-11 to win the grand aggregate jewels. Matthewman's Granite Club rink was down 9-0 after four ends, but pulled even by the 11th. In the 12th end, Matthewman scored one point and Wyse, with the last stone, missed his chance to recover when his shot was heavy.

The grand aggregate draw was made up of semi-finalists in the Royal York and Birks Trophies.

The Royal York, main event of the bonspiel, was won Thursday by Stewart Graham of Toronto. Graham defeated Owen Loveless of Brantford 9-6, scoring three points in the final end.

ALSO THURSDAY

The Birks final was also played Thursday. Jones overcame a 5-3 lead by J. W. Reid of Toronto after five ends to win 9-6.

McCartney built up a five-point lead in the fifth end and was never threatened in defeating Sid Smithers of Galt 13-7 Friday for the Parker Trophy.

Lake defeated Mac Butcher of Orillia 10-7 for the Monarch Trophy. W. S. Tomenson scored three points in the final end to defeat G. S. Murray 10-7 for the Seagram Trophy. Both are Toronto rinks.

Andy Gant won the North American Life Trophy by defeating Jack Tolton of Toronto 15-12. Grant's Granite Club rink recently won the 1955 Ontario curling championship at Galt.

Pentictons Score 27 Goals In Two Exhibition Games

BERLIN (CP) — Penticton V, Canada's entry in the world hockey championships, were to leave for Prague where they hope to meet some real competition.

In two exhibition games here Wednesday and Friday, the Vs scored 27 goals, even though the opposition was padded out with Canadian players.

In Prague the Vs will play two more exhibition games Sunday and Monday in preparation for the world championship games opening in West Germany Feb. 25.

In Friday night's game against a team made up of Canadians, Swedes and Germans, the Penticton club won 16-1. They took Wednesday's game 11-4.

Manager Clem Bird is looking forward to the Czech competition. After the Wednesday game, Bird said the team was a bit disappointed.

He had hoped the exhibition game would help familiarize the Canadians with European - style hockey: More emphasis on speed and less on bodychecking.

At Friday night's game, spectators included the Soviet team which will defend the world title. Hungary and France, without saying why, have already withdrawn from the competition in the junior group.

In senior play, Russia defends its title against Canada, the United States, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Switzerland, Poland, Finland and West Germany. The matches will be played in Cologne, Duesseldorf, Dortmund and Krefeld.

Friday West Berlin's city government received the Canadians in city hall and presented them with an image of the Liberty bell, original of which hangs in the hall tower and was given by the United States in recognition of West Berliners' pluck during the 1948-49

Even though the Vs submitted their applications for Czech visas rather late, a Canadian military spokesman said Friday there should be nothing to prevent the team from taking off on this morning's flight to Prague. The Sunday match will be televised.

The Canadians have met one snag in their travels so far. They left London Monday expecting to stay in Duesseldorf but were told there to go on to Berlin.

In Berlin they were unexpected and had to make do for a while without some things they had left behind in Duesseldorf — warm clothing, Volkswagens, electric razors, mail and a half-ton of hockey equipment.

Despite the mixup the Vs are content. Bird said Friday the team had no complaints about German hospitality or food—contrary to a Berlin newspaper report. But they'd like some competition.

Memos Grab Playoff Berth; Defeat Clinton 3-1; Brockville Loses 6-5

Vern Goyer Paces Offensive With Winner, Insurance Goals; Magedomas Edged by Kingston

By GEORGE H. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

The Belleville Memos clinched a playoff berth in the Eastern Ontario senior "B" group here last night, defeating the Clinton Comets 3-1, while the Kingston Goodyears edged the Brockville Magedomas 6-5.

The Memos racked up 50 points to draw on an even keel with the Whitby Dunlops in third place, while the Goodyears, by virtue of their win, took over second spot with 51 points, three behind the league-leading Cornwall Colts.

Both the Brockville Magedomas and the Clinton Comets put on a desperation drive in a home-stretch effort to enter the charmed circle. But it was too little and too late and that was that.

VERN GOYER
Won It. . .Clinched It

Vern Goyer, playing one of his best games of the season, was the hero as far as the Memos were concerned. The big fella, who has been transplanted from a defence job to the front lines, drove home the winner after five minutes in the second period and then, stealing the puck from a Comet defenceman late in the third period, wangled his way around two Clinton players and slipped the puck over the line for the insurance marker.

Nearly 1,100 fans saw the Memos stage another of their fine defensive efforts while Tony Parisi and Danny Coxon, especially the latter coming up with brilliant efforts at times. Coxon was by far the busier man of the pair as the Memos outshot the Comets 34-22.

The Memos took the sting out of the Comets' offensive early in the first period when they rapped home the only goal of the heat after 43 seconds of play. They made it 2-0 after five minutes of play in the second chapter and after Clinton narrowed the margin to a single goal, fired the insurance goals with seconds to go.

STARTED QUICKLY

A lot happened in the opening minute of the first period. The Memos drew first scoring blood when Ted DeGray drove the puck home with a screened shot from 21 feet out. Seventeen seconds later Bob Taylor got the first penalty of the game but the Memos failed to take advantage of the extra manpower.

Play speeded up with Parisi and Coxon, especially the latter, kicking out hot drives. Houston went off for hooking at 13.05 but again the Comets defence held the fort as the Memos swarmed around Coxon.

MacDonald got the heave - ho at 18.08 but the Memos defence held until the gong rang.

The Memos drove to the attack opening the second period and at 5.01 Vern Goyer took Keith MacDonald's pass on a pretty play to put the Memos two up. The game developed into a rough and rugged affair and Bob Wilson laid out Clinton's Porteous cold, with a stiff but legal bodycheck.

After twelve minutes Menchini drew a minor for charging and Gennings arguing the point too strongly and was banished with a misconduct penalty. Both teams started throwing the body around and play got rugged.

A Clinton player raced in on Parisi and the light flashed on, but the Memos goalie coolly tossed the puck out. It landed in his glove. Keith MacDonald drew a sentence for elbowing at 17.30 and the Comets poured on the power but the Memos defence held tight.

Play speeded up in the third period and the Comets, battling desperately, threw the play in the Memos end. The Memos roared back and Coxon kicked out three shots in a row to hold off the Belleville attack. Then after nearly twelve minutes of play, Jack Timmons picked up a loose puck near the Memos goalmouth and the puck went into the net on what looked like a deflected shot.

The goal gave the Comets a new lease of life and they fashioned several dangerous sorties. Parisi stopped three blazing shots from close-in that drew the plaudits of the crowd.

Then came Vern Goyer's fine effort to clinch the matter. He stole the puck from the stick of an outgoing Clinton defenceman and with some smart stickwork, eased the rubber over the goal-line behind Coxon. There were no penalties in the third period.

The teams:

Clinton — Goal, Coxon; defence, Jamieson, Holliday; centre, Taylor; wings, Defelice, Steele; alternates, Menchini, Gennings, Houston, Timmins, Breen, Porteous, Johnson.

Referees — "Moon" Flanagan, Ken Partis, Kingston.

SUMMARY

First Period

Belleville—DeGray 0.23
Penalties—MacDonald, Taylor, Houston.

Second Period

Belleville—Goyer (MacDonald) 5.01
Penalties—MacDonald, Menchini, Gennings (misconduct).

Third Period

Clinton—Timmins 11.47
Belleville—Goyer 18.12
Penalties—none.

Toronto Blues Clinch Senior Hockey Title

MONTREAL (CP) — The unbeaten University of Toronto Blues Friday night clinched the senior intercollegiate hockey championship by edging McGill Redmen 4-3 on Don Cossar's third-period goal.

The win was the ninth of the season for the Blues. Their only other contest ended in a tie. They now lead the second-place Redmen by 10 points and McGill has only four games remaining to play.

The Redmen didn't let go of their last chance at the title without a fight. They led 2-1 at the end of the first period, but Toronto scored three goals before McGill got its final tally.

McMaster Loses To Assumption

HAMILTON (CP) — Assumption College cagers blasted McMaster Marauders 85-67 in an Intercollegiate Senior Basketball League game here Friday night and also collected the individual senior scoring record.

In a preliminary game, Assumption Intermediates also won out 56-50 over McMaster.

George Joseph was the big man for the senior winners, and the man who set the record. He dropped home 35 points to beat by one the old mark set three years ago by Lorne Wrigglesworth of Hamilton. Wrigglesworth scored his 34 in a game against Queen's.

Bert Raphael of McMaster collected 21 points ,the highest ever scored by a Mac player in a home game.

Hornets Move Up

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The way to build up fat leads is to lick the underdogs and that's just what the Pittsburgh Hornets of the American Hockey League had in mind today.

Before Friday night's game with the last-place Providence Reds the Hornets were in first place by just two percentage points. But they clobbered the Reds 7-2 to gain two more points over the idle Springfield Indians.

Ray Timgren and Gerry Foley each notched two goals for the winners. They scored four of their seven goals in the second period.

Western League Will Expand Next Season

VANCOUVER (CP) — The professional Western Hockey League is branching out again after seven years of sudden growth and shrinkage.

Decision of the present six-team all-Canadian loop to embrace Winnipeg and Regina next season restores some of the prestige it had in 1949 when it was the largest professional circuit in Canada or the U.S.

At that time, working under the banner of the old Pacific Coast League, 11 teams stretching as far south as San Diego, Calif., were in action.

The next year the southern section of the league disbanded, leaving only six northern teams in operation as the PCL.

KEPT UP STRENGTH

Another American team, Portland, dropped out in 1951, but the addition of Edmonton, Calgary and Saskatoon kept league strength up to eight. The name was changed to the Western League in 1952 as the loop coasted through the season with all its members and recorded the first "1,000,000-attendance" mark.

Tacoma withdrew in the 1952-53 season and the directors decided to hold the 1954 East-West playoff, the first since 1926, in the West.

The WHL became all-Canadian in status when Seattle folded before the opening of the 1954-55 season.

President Al Leader of Seattle, in announcing the official acceptance of Winnipeg, indicated that one other coast city was under consideration for a franchise. He didn't name it but the word was out that Seattle may be back.

Queen's Gaels Defeat Western By Two Points

KINGSTON (CP)—Queen's University Golden Gaels took 67-65 victory from the University of Western Ontario Mustangs in a senior intercollegiate basketball game here Friday night.

It was the Mustangs' first loss after four consecutive wins and dropped them from a first-place tie with Queen's. The Gaels now have five wins.

University of Toronto Blues and the Assumption Purple Raiders of Windsor are tied for third place, each with three wins and two defeats.

The Gaels were ahead 31-23 at half time.

Bob Purcell with 16 points, Paul Fedor with 15, and Frank Donnelly and Jay McMahon with 14 each were Queen's high scorers. Paul Monnot of Western was the game's top point-getter with 20. Western's Bob Ellis added 19 points.

Hockey Is Not Producing Enough New Talent

CALGARY (CP)—Frank Selke, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, says hockey is not producing enough new talent, despite the fact that more youngsters now are playing the game than ever before.

"We in Montreal spend a great deal of money each year fostering amateur hockey," said Selke, "yet we are not deriving as much benefit from it now as in past years."

One of his aims, he said, was for the "rekindling" of the National Hockey League's Hall of Fame.

"I don't care where it is—Kingston or anywhere else—as long as it's there and operating," he said.

Selke's remarks were included in an address to a meeting earlier this week of the Calgary Old-Time Hockey Players' Benevolent Association.

Pudgy Cockell Thinks He'll Win

LONDON (AP)—Sure that he will win the heavyweight boxing crown, pudgy Don Cockell sailed Friday aboard the liner Queen Mary for New York to sign contracts for a title fight with champion Rocky Marciano.

"I'm confident I will win," said Cockell, pudgy, 26-year-old British Empire titleholder.

Cockell and Marciano are expected to meet in a 15-rounder in San Francisco's Kezar Stadium in May.

Maple Leaf Hockey Club Honors Man Who Led Them Since 1927

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Conn Smythe, a man who admits he was often "unkind" in his nearly 30 years of building the Toronto Maple Leaf hockey empire, wept openly and unashamedly Friday as the men who work for him paid their "boss" special tribute.

"You'll have to excuse a little 'heart trouble,'" Smythe said, wiping away big tears that trickled down his cheeks. "But I'm not ashamed of it."

He turned 60 two weeks ago in Florida.

Smythe and others present were visibly moved Friday as Canada's "Mr. Hockey" accepted a 10-carat gold miniature of the Stanley Cup, a trophy which is Maple Leafs won seven times during his career as active general manager in the National Hockey League.

The trophy, two feet high, was presented on behalf of the Maple Leaf Hockey Club at a dinner meeting of Leafs and press and radio representatives as "a token of his great achievements as manager of the Leaf team."

Hap Day, who succeeded Smythe Feb. 1 as Leaf general manager, presented the trophy, recalling that things were rough occasionally during his 30-year association with Smythe.

As Day related some of the good and the bad since they first met in 1924, Smythe's eyes grew red. Tears formed as Day said:

"After 30 years, if I had to do it all over again, I wouldn't change a minute of it."

And as those assembled around the table broke into a chorus of "Bring Back My Connie to Me," Smythe wept.

In accepting the trophy, Smythe recalled the year he and Hap Day joined the Leafs. That was in 1927, when Smythe organized a group of businessmen, bought the old Toronto St. Pats, renamed them and built Maple Leaf Gardens, of which he still is president.

"I'd be the last one to ever admit that I haven't been unkind over the years," Smythe said, remembering times when he instilled fear into many a young hockey player's heart.

"But the team is the thing, not the player."

He said he had always had the team interest at heart, even though it meant he had to be mean to individuals to get the best out of them.

Smythe termed Sweeney Schriner, Calgary forward who starred for years with Leafs, "the best leftwing who ever played in the NHL."

Of Ted Kennedy, current Leafs' captain who returned to action this season after announcing his retirement a year ago, Smythe said:

"Ted Kennedy is the kind of a hockey player a young man should want to be."

In his praise for his new manager, Hap Day, Smythe reversed an earlier prediction that Leafs would finish the current season no better than fourth. They now are in third place.

Friday Smythe said:

"To me they (the Leafs) are the club that has the best chance to win the Stanley Cup this year . . . because they have a manager . . . who is going to make you players find out you can deliver a lot more than ever came out of you before."

Solunar Notes

What Is 'Pellet Shock?'

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Solunar Tables.)

Some years ago a friend and I went to a private game farm to enjoy a day of pheasant shooting. We took with us two little cocker spaniels, both of them trained for field-trial competition.

You may or may not have shot over a field-trial cocker. If you haven't, take a tip from one who has—wear your track shoes instead of hunting boots. The little scamps are fast and they cover an amazing amount of ground. Moreover, they don't point and wait for the gun. It is up to you to be there, right behind the little dog, if you want the shot.

During the course of the day I watched my friend shoot several ringnecks. The bird would flush, then came the shot, and the beating wings would stop, just as you would stop a motion-picture film. Every bird came down stone-dead.

That evening my friend called me and asked if I had noticed how his birds came down, completely dead, with not a wounded bird or a cripple. I said I had. Then he told me that in the haste of departure that morning he had picked up two boxes of nines, hurriedly reading the numbers upside down and mistaking them for sixes.

SPECIAL SHELLS

About 12 years ago an inquisitive sporting goods dealer in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, my home town, arranged with one of the ammunition companies to load for him a case of special shells. These loads, twelve gauge, three and three-quarter dram equivalent of powder, and one and one-quarter ounces of number ten shot.

These shells were distributed among several of the local grouse hunters. Several of these fellows told me that a grouse which was hit by the shot charge from one of these loads would stop in mid-air, just as though it were paralyzed. I used some of the shells on woodcock and the results were the same.

Some of us were talking one day about the relative merits of large shot and small shot and a friend came up with this one. He said that he could not remember where he had picked it up but that it seemed to work out in the field.

The theory is, he said, that multiple pellet shock acts on the nervous system of a bird or an animal in a ratio calculated in geometric progression with the number of effective pellets. Let's see if we can't clarify that somewhat in plain English.

SHOCKING POWER

Suppose that the shocking power of one pellet is "X" foot-pounds. Geometric progression, as you know, increases as the square of the number of units involved. Thus, if nine pellets are effective, the shocking power against the nervous system of that bird is not nine times "X"; instead it is the square of nine—eighty-one times "X" foot pounds. No wonder those birds came down dead as doornails if the theory is correct.

Determining to find out something definite about pellet shock, I wrote to the ballistics departments of several of the ammunition companies. The scientists in charge were very nice and replied to my letters—all of them in the fanciest scientific double-talk which, when translated, meant not one single thing.

During the past hunting season we have been experimenting with shot sizes and loads. We have shot woodcock with high-speed fours and pheasants with low-base nines—skeet shells. The results have been identical, straight across the board.

In the very high percentage of cases, at ordinary wing-shooting ranges of from 25 to 50 yards, small shot will kill outright while large shot tends to wound and cripple. The multiple pellet shock theory seems to stand up under practical field conditions.

Only yesterday I learned that some of the duck shooters are going over to the small-shot theory. These men shoot puddle ducks—mallard, black duck, pintail and such—over decoys at reasonably short ranges. No longer are they using high-speed sixes; instead, they have found low-base eights to be more effective.

I realize that the above is highly controversial and in no way supported by good, solid, mathematical fact. Just the same, there is more to the theory than meets the eye at first glance.

Dancing Title In Skating Goes To British Team

VIENNA (CP)—Britain's brilliant skating team of Jean Westwood and Lawrence Demmy quickly shook off a bad spill during rehearsal and won the dancing title for the fourth time Friday night as the four-day world figure skating championships came to an end.

Canada's first brother - sister team, young Lindis and Jeffery Johnston of London, Ont., finished 11th among the 15 couples from eight countries.

About five minutes before Miss Westwood and Demmy were to take the ice, they fell badly while practising. Miss Westwood was carried from the rink, crying.

Granted a 15-minute rest, she recovered and returned to Vienna's open-air rink with her partner to complete the compulsory figures in a drizzling rain and then gave a dazzling exhibition of free skating.

Britons also took second and third place to make it a sweep while the United States took the next three spots.

Ezzard Charles Easily Defeats Charlie Norkus

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Ezzard Charles isn't the fighter he used to be but he still is much too good for the likes of Charley Norkus.

Slow and wild after a five-month layoff and two beatings by Rocky Marciano, the former heavyweight champion Friday night exposed Norkus as a crude but willing workman who was "in over his head."

After winning a unanimous decision in 10 rounds and dropping Norkus with a "sneak right" for an automatic eight count in the early seconds of the ninth, Charles said he was ready for anybody.

Ezzy, now 33, has been sending no telegrams, circulating no petitions and writing no campaign letters but anybody who wants to fight Marciano will find him spoiling for action.

FOR ANY OF THEM

That goes for Archie Moore, Nino Valdes, Don Cockell or anybody you can think of, according to Charles and his manager Tom Tannas.

"I'm making no claims on any Marciano bout," said Charles. "I'm ready to take them as they come. . . If I don't catch too many, I'll be around a long time."

As Charles hurt his left hand, which was swollen around the knuckle after the fight, they don't know when he'll be ready. A cut over the right eye, opened in the fifth, required two stitches.

Harry Markson, director of boxing for the International Boxing Guild, said he had March 18 and March 25 open at Madison Square Garden where 5,304 paid $17,230 to see Friday night's scrap.

At 191½ pounds to Norkus' 195½, Charles was a bit heavy. He was a pound lighter than he scaled Sept. 17 when he was knocked out by Marciano in the eighth round, but six pounds over his weight for the June 17 match in which he outboxed the champ in the early rounds but lost the decision.

Sports Roundup

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — We learn that the proprietors of the Masters golf tournament at Augusta are making plans to present that wonderful competitor, Gene Sarazen, with a new bridge at special ceremonies April 6, the day before the opening of this year's event.

It is not to be an oral bridge, either, but a genuine structure of steel and wood which Gene can cross any time he feels like it. The more we think about the matter the more we are inclined to feel this is the greatest honor ever done a golfer. Sarazen richly deserves every foot of it.

The bridge, designed by a distinguished Augusta architect and just completed, spans a small pond fronting the 15th green on President Eisenhower's favorite golf course. Its dedication will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the doggondest shot ever hit in the history of golf. By Sarazen, who else?

CRAIG WOOD VICTIM

The story of that homeric swat has been recounted many a time, but there's always another generation coming up which might not have heard of it. This looks like a good excuse to tell it again.

The situation on that last day of the second Masters tournament in 1935 was this: Craig Wood, who had lost the previous year by only one stroke, had shot the last eight holes of his final round in four under par and was sitting in the clubhouse with an apparently unbeatable 282.

Only one player remained out who could even hope to catch him. That was Sarazen. Teed up on the 485-yard, par five 15th hole, he needed to pick up three strokes in the final four holes to tie Wood.

IN TWO STROKES

Gene busted a good drive, the ball rolling to a stop about 220 yards from the green in a slightly downhill lie. Gene smote it again with his spoon, and this time the ball soared over the water hazard and rolled into the cup for a double-eagle 2. You never heard such a racket.

In two strokes Sarazen had reduced his deficit to nothing. All he needed to tie Wood was par on the last three holes, and he did that without even relaxing his broad grin. Wood, shaken to his soles, proved an easy victim in the next day's 36-hole play-off, losing by five strokes.

Gene will not be able to take his bridge home with him because of its bulk, but the club will compensate him with a silver cigar box bearing the engraved signatures of all the other players who competed in the 1935 tournament.

Wood will be given one, too, a memento of the day he should never have gotten out of bed.

Fess Parker Blessed With Luck That Favors Texans, Irish

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—"I reckon I'm just about the most fortunate person in all of show business."

This was Fess Parker speaking, and I reckon he could be right. The 31-year-old actor has been blessed with the kind of luck that seems to favor the Irish and Texans (he is part Irish and all Texan). He already holds the record of being nominated for a TV Academy Emmy as the most outstanding new personality — after only two appearances on TV! He has starred in the Davey Crocket films on "Disneyland."

ANTS TO DISNEY

The saga of Fess Parker is a parlay from Adolphe Menjou to Mister Roberts to giant ants to Walt Disney.

Born in Fort Worth, Fess "scooted all around Texas.' He landed at the University of Texas where one day Adolphe Menjou arrived to narrate "Peter and the Wolf.". When he met the rangy, handsome Texas boy, he encouraged him to come to Hollywood.

Fess landed in Hollywood in 1949. Despite Menjou's help, he couldn't make headway as an actor. So he enrolled in a theatre course at the University of Southern California. One day the word came to the campus that Josh Logan was seeking some big types to bolster the crew of "Mister Roberts." Fess got a job and he was a goner. From then on, he had to be an actor.

A dozen film roles followed, none very big. One brief bit in the story of giant ants, "Them," turned his luck. Walt Disney was seeking a fellow to play Davy Crockett in three one-hour films for TV. He ran "Them" to look at another actor, but chose Fess.

"I'm itching to get back to work," he added, "but right now there isn't much for me to do. There's talk about doing another film for the Disneyland series and maybe a feature that Disney has planned. But I don't expect anything will happen before April or May."

Will Ask CRU For Help

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Rugby Union's intermediate committee met here Friday and voted to ask the CRU for aid in furthering western Canada intermediate football.

The CRU now makes certain financial guarantees toward intermediate playoffs between the Ontario Rugby Football Union champions and the Quebec titlists, and also for the Dominion final.

Intermediate football west of Winnipeg is non-existent, mainly because travelling costs for a playoff series are prohibitive. It was felt if the CRU could make a guarantee for a western playoff, it would stimulate activity in that region.

The CRU's junior committee meets today.

Myer Insky of Montreal was reelected chairman of the intermediate committee. John Nelson of Toronto was named ORFU representative; Ed Fennell of Montreal, Quebec union epresentative; and Bill Fry of Toronto secretary-treasurer.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

When your partner responds with a bid to your opening, waste no time in feeling sorry for yourself. Get a picture of what your partner is telling you. It will take the fear out of you.

Your opening is one spade with this south hand:

♠K Q 10 4
♥A K 9
♦9 6 4 2
♣J 7

Suppose your partner responds with a takeout to a new suit of his own. What is he telling you? What is he asking you? What are you required to do in return after getting such information?

The order of choice of bids is takeout first, assist second, no-trump last. The fact that your partner used the first choice is an indication (but not a promise) that he may have assist or no-trump.

To find out if he has such other information to give you, the takeout to a new suit forces you to bid again. And this force is in effect for one round only, even if you have nothing more to show.

You can not have security in life or business or games from the cradle to the grave. So, when forced to do something, make the best you can of it under the circumstances. Do what partner asks.

Do you have another suit or a rebiddable suit to show? No. Do you have adequate support for the suit your partner has bid? If so, have you tricks enough to raise as an assist of his suit?

Your opening bid of one promised five tricks and you have no more than five tricks. So, even if he bid a red suit for which you have adequate support you dare not raise.

Thus, you are unable to takeout or assist. But remember there is a signal afloat that says you dare not pass the takeout. And the only bid left is no-trump. So, bid no-trump.

Occasionally you find your pair left in a contract that does not make in such circumstances. Would you prefer to use instinct? Partner will leave the "in" off to describe your decision.

Bill Chadwick Will Retire

NEW YORK (AP)—Bill Chadwick, for 14 seasons a referee in the National Hockey League, today announced his retirement effective at the close of the Stanley Cup playoffs to become general manager of the Pine Hollow Country Club in East Norwich, N.Y.

Chadwick, 39, broke in with the NHL as a lineman in 1939 and now is the league's top-paid official at $12,000 a year.

May Win Screwy Bet

LONDON (AP)—If Britain's Don Cockell meets and beats Rocky Marciano for the world heavyweight title, London promoter Jack Solomons will win $28,000 on a $28 bet made in May, 1952.

The bet was that Solomons couldn't come up with a world-heavyweight champion within five years.

Solomons, who helps handle Cockell's interests in the United States, disclosed the bet—legal under British laws—Thursday night. He made it with bookmaker William Haill.

AT THE McCARTHY

Director Goes for "Different" Themes.

An unusual approach to "different" motion picture themes distinguishes the work of the young veteran Kurt Neumann, whhose potent Lippet Pictures presentation, "They Were So Young," stars Scott Brady and Raymond Burr with Johanna Mats, opens Monday at the McCarthy Theatre.

Produced, directed and co-authored by Neumann, the new film deftly blends high style and deep mystery in a provocative story of European mannequins trapped in a sinister Rio fashion house that fronts for the underworld.

Neumann's off-beat movies include the highly successful "Rocketship X-M", which touched off the science-fiction cycle, and "The Carnival Story," a recent sensation. In his early directorial days, he violated Western tradition in "The Dude Goes West" when instead of the cavalry, Indians came to the rescue in the final reel. Other credits for the ace director range from the popular Tarzan features to "Badman of Brimstone" and "Son of Ali Baba."

Production of "They Were So Young" was one of Neumann's most ambitious projects. He travelled more than 25,000 miles by air before the picture was completed, and did the actual filming in four countries, including Brazil, the principal setting, and Italy, where all three principals performed in location scenes.

I CAN'T EAT STARCHY FOODS WHICH DIET DO YOU USE?
YOU SHOULD TRY SKIM MILK AND SPINACH!
I HAVE THAT FULL FEELING ALL THE TIME
OH COME ON, FOLKS YOU'RE NOT EATING!
GOSH, WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO WITH ALL THESE LEFT-OVERS?
I DON'T KNOW THEY ATE HARDLY ANYTHING
SAY, I TELL YOU WHAT! NEXT TIME WE'LL INVITE A LOT OF YOUNG FOLKS. THEY HAVEN'T DISCOVERED WHAT THEY CAN'T EAT

Look in the section in which your birthday comes, and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, for

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 20, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Time never tells unkindly on an inwardly cheerful, hopefully progressive, religious individual. Today think about these great assets —all free, God-given, and awaiting the user.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus) — The right start is at church, then come first-duties, obligations. And getting in mind- and body-building exercise and relaxation are part of our life-chores, too. Keep this day in order.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini) — You, Taurus and Libra have similar aspects in regard to admonitions and suggestions today. Note words to them and profit wherever you rightly can from anything useful in life.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Being truly friendly never means jeopardizing principles for any one or thing. And be reasonable about others' faults and discrepancies, too. Pray, think carefully, and smile.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — The gift to be able to make others laugh is innate in this Sign, if you are in tune with happiness and the good things in life — still all free. Don't let your fine nature down.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — You can start this day best with prayer, attendance at your church services; bring someone to church with you, if possible. Know when not to answer and this day will be "all set."

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Be not overvigorous; be steadily but not too strenuously active, and enjoy family and the small things you of Libra can so aptly appreciate and which others often overlook.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Think well before speaking, then say it carefully, but surely. If you've a point, express it with tact, but don't fear to express it. Where there's a will, it can be done ably.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — It's a shame ever to waste time when you've so much innate ability and talent. However, Sagittarians are seldom offenders this way, so don't be so tempted now. Respect the Sabbath.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — There is more to be said for this day than appears on the surface. You do some digging — into yourself first. Start right at church and be strengthened in mind and heart.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Don't rush to get more attended to than reasonable, it only wears down health, ruffles attitude. Prayer, disposition toward the right duties, and general cheer are day's high points.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — How many of us do the things the way we meant to do them? How many mistakes we didn't mean to happen! But a fresh start is always welcome, in fact it is our life's daily chore. Faith!

YOU BORN TODAY can achieve more than you know; look into your qualifications, God-given assets. Put them down on paper, and review carefully. Where have you not applied them as you could, should, have? This is the big thing for you: The talents, many of them, are present, but too often left sleeping, getting rusty, dusty. And every time you use your accomplishments, you are invigorated to do better. So why wait for outside encouragement? Ask God's help, know that you can succeed, no matter the height. A thirst for knowledge is noteworthy, changeableness a likely fault; you are trustworthy but at times overcautious. Birthdate of many noted statesmen, stage, radio, TV and screen artists.

Little Benny's Notebook

Today in school Miss Kitty told the class about politeness and how it always pays, and she said, One reason why everybody likes to go to Paris is because Frentch peeple are so polite. The entire nation is famous for that alone, among other things, naturelly. Now I wonder who can tell us from personel experience of an occasion when politeness paid, she said.

Which Dopey Shorty Judge waved his hand, meening he could, and he said, One time we had company for dinner, and I didn't ask for the last slice of cake because that wouldn't of been polite with company present, and the result was I got it anyways, just by waiting till everybody elts had left the table and there wasn't any excuse for being polite, so politeness paid.

Well, that's hardly the kind of politeness I had in mind, Miss Kitty said. I'd like to hear of an example of going out of your way to be of assistants to a stranger, she said, and I waved, saying, I can tell you about seeing my father, once.

Very well, just so it's a personel observation, Miss Kitty said, and I said. A little old lady with a cane was waiting to cross the street, and my father offered to help her over, and she told him peeple ought to mind their own bizness and she could get across by herself as good as him or anybody elts.

Well, I'm sure your father had nuthing to reproach himself for, but I wouldn't say that was an example of politeness paying, Miss Kitty said, and I said, Sure it was, it taught me a good lesson never to offer to help that old lady even if she got bumped by a car and had to use 2 canes for more help.

The result being arifmetic.

Point Anne Defeats Marmora 9-4 For Second Win in OHA Round Robin

The Point Anne Cementmen scored an easy 9-4 victory over Marmora on the latter's home ice last night in the second game of the O.H.A. Intermediate "C" round - robin series. It was the Cementmen's third win in as many nights, two in the round - robin and another in TVL playoffs. They now have won two games in the Intermediate series with Marmora and Campbellford each having lost their only start to date.

The winners took a 2-0 lead in the initial period, Strahan on a corner passout from Gilmour and Gerry Goyer on a passing play with J. Green and Williams. Play was fast with both goaltenders making several fine saves.

Play opened up in the middle session, Williams' crew blinking the light six times and Marmora coming back with a trio to make the score 8-3. Each team tallied once in the final twenty minutes, Darrah from Trumble for the losers at 3.01 with Leo Goyer teaming up with Williams and Gerry Goyer at 16.40 to close the scoring.

Pat Gilmour set a blistering scoring pace for the winners, scoring two goals and drawing three assists while Gerry Goyer had a goal and a trio of helpers. Billy Strahan claimed two goals and an assist, Williams a goal and two assists, Joe Scott one and one while John Green picked up two assists and Leo Goyer hit for a pair of markers. Trumble, Mantle and Carswell scored once and assisted on another to lead Marmora, Blute assisting on a pair while Darrah also scored.

Twelve minor penalties were handed out in all with the teams splitting them down the centre.

John Green played an excellent game for Point Anne, using his body to good advantage from his defensive position, handing out several solid bodychecks.

Point Anne—Letman, J. Green, Stewart, Gilmour, Strahan, Scott, Semark, Hunter, P. Green, L. Goyer, Williams, Bates (sub goal)

Marmora — Killian, Leonard, Darrah, Maynes, Lavender, K. Trumble, Carswell, Blute, Mantle, W. Brown, Smith, H. Brown.

Referees —H. Payne and Roy Moss.

Just Stick To Sport, Says Russ Boss

MOSCOW (AP)—Foreign correspondents covering the world speed skating championships, opening here today, were called together Friday and warned not to try to slip any political propaganda out with their sports dispatches.

The warning was made by the Russian press chief, N. I. Lubomirov, to 54 writers gathered under the stands of the huge Dynamo Stadium where the competition will take place.

Lubomirov said the telephones may be used for information concerning the skating—nothing else.

Then the correspondents were conducted on a tour of the 100,000-seat stadium and shown their communications facilities.

For the 54 correspondents, there are only four telephone booths and one telegraph line. There are no typewriters or tables.

Of the 54 listed as correspondents only 12 were admitted especially for the event. The rest are residents of Moscow, including those from so-called peoples democracies.

Sport in Brief

U.S. DAVIS CUPPERS WIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Davis Cuppers Tony Trabert and Hamilton Richardson Jr. Friday night led a group of international favorites into the second round of the national indoor tennis championships.

The top-seeded Trabert, just back from the Australian net wars, crushed Ray Antignat, a week-end player from New York, 6-0, 6-1.

Richardson, seeded second domestically, easily conquered Frank Shields, 6-4, 6-2.

Best match was provided by Gil Shea, national hard-court champion from Los Angeles, and Lorne Main, Canadian Davis Cupper from Toronto, with Shea winning 8-6, 2-6, 6-2. Another Canadian, Henri Rochon of Montreal, defeated Richard Sorlien of Philadelphia 10-8, 7-5 to advance to the second round.

PLAYED WITH ARGOS

TORONTO (CP) — Sheldon B. Burt, 54, who played football with Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four Union from 1922-24, will be buried today. He died Thursday.

IGGY WILL GO HOME

TORONTO (CP)—Iggy Crotty, the little Newfoundland boy who learned to walk and talk again in the Hospital for Sick Children after being paralyzed by a traffic accident last spring, will go home to his family the end of February. Dr. Bruce Hendrick, who performed two delicate brain operations which rescued Iggy from paralysis, made the announcement Friday.

Will Play Monday

KITCHENER (CP) — A postponed Ontario Hockey Association junior A hockey game between Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks and St. Catharines TeePees has been rescheduled for Monday. It will be played in Guelph due to the inability of the Canucks to get ice time here.

Originally the game, postponed in December, was to have been played here next Thursday after the regular schedule ended but the OHA refused to permit this arrangement.

Maroons Whip Cataracts 6-3

CHATHAM (CP)—Jim Connelly increased his lead in the goal-scoring derby in the senior A Ontario Hockey Association here Friday night when he paced Chatham Maroons to a 6-3 win over the lowly Niagara Falls Cataracts with three goals.

Maroons led 3-0 at the close of the first as Connelly fired two and Eddie Busch the other.

Frank Bonello made it 4-0 early in the second before Lorne Pirie scored the Falls' first counter. Eddie Busch scored his second goal at 15:26.

In the final session Eric Unger scored for the Falls before Jim Connelly netted his third goal and 34th for the season. Buchanan got Cataracts' third counter.

BLAMES PILOT

DUBLIN (Reuters)—An official court of inquiry Friday blamed the pilot in part for the crash of a KLM Royal Dutch airliner at Shannon airport last September in which 28 persons died. The report said that Adrian Viruly, 50, had failed "properly to correlate and interpret his instrument indications" and "failed to maintain sufficient climb as the plane rose away from the airport."

Excellent Skiing During Week-End

TORONTO (CP) — Excellent weekend skiing was forecast Friday at 25 Ontario centres.

A survey showed conditions excellent both in the bush and on the tow hills at Barrie, Bolton, Bracebridge, Cedar Springs, Cobourg, Collingwood, Dagmar (Glen Major), Flesherton - Markdale, Gravenhurst, Haileybury, Huntsville, Kirkland Lake, Kitchener, Larder Lake, Midland, Newmarket, North Bay, Orangeville-Hockley, Owen Sound, Peterborough-Bethany, Oshawa (Kirby), Sinclair township, Sudbury-Lavack, Sundridge and Toronto Summit.

Royals Sign Six

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Royals of the International Baseball League Friday announced the signing of six players, including right-handed pitcher Billy Harris of Dorchester, N.B.

Others signed were catcher Johnny Bucha, with St. Paul of the American Association last season; Norman Sherry, a rookie receiver from Newport News of the Piedmont League Jasper Spears, an infielder with Asheville of the Tri-State League in 1954; outfielder Eddie Moore, of St. Paul; and pitcher Hamp Coleman, back for another season with the Royals.

Remember When

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Varsity Grads romped to the Olympic hockey title at St. Moritz 27 years ago today with a 13-0 victory over Switzerland in the final. In the drive to the title Hugh Plaxton and Dave Trottier each accounted for 12 of the Canadians' 38 goals.

SYLVAPLY
DOUGLAS FIR PLYWOOD

How the family grows! Converting your attic to sleeping quarters for the youngsters can help to solve your space problems; it's a worthwhile project that can add greatly to the value of your home when you use real wood panels of plain or decorative Sylvaply. Because the big sheets of Sylvaply cover 32 square feet of wall, ceiling, or floor, at a time, you can do a quicker job with fewer joins.

Built-ins, cupboards, and other home improvement projects like this cost less to build with easy-to-finish, self-framing Sylvaply in 5 or 7 ply thicknesses. Sylvaply saws as clean as other woods with power saw or hand saw, nails close to the edge without splitting. And the system of simple glued and nailed butt joints possible with Sylvaply does away with tricky joinery details.

There are just dozens of spots around a house that can be quickly turned into useful storage space with Sylvaply. Because Sylvaply is an engineered wood panel, you can do home improvement projects easily and at low cost. Easy to saw and nail, easy to finish Sylvaply requires only simple carpentry for cupboards or built-ins like the handy under-basement-stairs storage cabinet shown above.

In addition to regular 4 feet by 8 feet panels, you can now buy handy sizes for those small jobs and repairs . . . Makes "doing-it yourself" easier than ever. "Take Home" panels are available at your lumber dealers in sizes from 12 by 36 inches up. Carry them home or slip them in your car trunk.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE ....

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars,

For Monday. February 21, 1955

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—A day wherein you can prove your worth. You are usually thorough, consistent, conscientious, just what today's difficult matters need. Tact and delicate work great aids.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—You zodiacal natives are investigative. far-seeing, and seldom give up no matter how hard the task or problem. You will likely find instances today to test these qualities. Much like Aries' outlook.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Almost the opposite to Aries and Taurus configurations for you try-anything-once, and clever, natives. Fine, have ambition, but don't splurge with money or assets in excess of possibilities.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Mildly favorable. That and with proper fortitude, knowledge of outlook, you can roll along smartly to fine results. Don't forget loved ones, those depending on your success.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo—Generally benefic for the study and industrious. Confer with superiors, associates, those with wisdom and honest sympathy. Domestic and personal life in general can be pleasant.

Rawdon

SUNBEAM M.B.

RAWDON.— Mount Pleasant Sunbeam Mission Band convened Sunday morning at the church with the new president, Gail Jeffs in charge.

Carl Sharpe and Barbara Williams gathered the offering. Mrs. Ed. Richardson outlined a chapter of the study on India.

The worship opened with music played by Ina Scott and all sang "Jesus Loves the Little Children." The Bible Lesson was read by David Potts. Raeburn Scott read a story "The Very Best Gift of All." The meeting closed with "When He Cometh" and prayer.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Stirling, R.R. 3, of the "Hubble Hill District" in Rawdon township, received her card on Monday, admitting her to membership in the U.E.L. Toronto branch. Previous to this, she had to prove her ancestry as being a direct descendant of the pioneer Nehemiah Hubble, who came to "Hubble Hill" in 1783, as his granddaughter, "Huldah" married James Wescott, (her great grandfather). Her sponsors for membership were, Rev. A. E. Baker, Smooth Rock Falls, Ontario and Mrs. Ross Glassford, Toronto.

ACT OF PARLIAMENT

A special act of parliament of the Dominion of Canada was enacted on May 27, 1914, which reads, "The United Empire Loyalist Association of Canada is composed of descendants of the citizens of the 13 American colonies who remained loyal to the King and to the Empire at the time of the American Revolution. After the peace of 1783, over 150,000 of the devoted patriots left their lands and possessions, and with their brave wives, sought new homes where they could still retain the proud title "A British subject." The first party of Loyalists to reach Upper Canada (now the province of Ontario), landed at Adolphustown on the Bay of Quinte in June 1784."

"Those Loyalists who have adhered to the unity of the Empire and joined the Royal Standard before the Treaty of Separation in the year 1783, and all their children and their descendants by either sex, are to be distinguished by the following Capitals affixed to their names—U.E.—alluding to their great principle "The Unity of the Empire."

Born—At Campbellford Hospital on Wednesday, February 2, 1955, to Mr. and Mrs. Walentyn Kosobucki, of Harold, R.R. 2, a daughter.

FOUR-LANE HIGHWAY GETS TOP PRIORITY

Winter's Worst Storm Cripples Southern Manitoba

Transportation In, Around Winnipeg at Standstill

CHICAGO (AP) — A blinding blizzard, termed by the weather bureau one of the winter's worst storms, whirled northward out of the great plains today and into Canada with moderated intensity.

It left behind snow falls up to Duluth's 28 inches; snowdrifts as deep as 12 feet in Nebraska; blocked highways in at least four states, at least 17 persons dead and four missing.

The five deaths each reported in Colorado, Utah and Montana, and two in Wyoming were caused mostly by traffic accidents in visibility zero conditions during the driving storm of the last three days.

But authorities feared for three Nebraska ministers who left Gothenburg Saturday afternoon and a Wessington Springs, S. D., rancher who braved the shrieking blizzard at 2 a. m. Sunday to see if his sheep were all right. None of the men has been seen since.

Thirty-three persons stranded during the storm in Nebraska had been rescued. They included five adults and five children, who kept up their spirits for 19 hours in an automobile by singing, telling stories and eating birthday cake; a highway snowplow crew of four which stayed with the machine for 30 hours when it slid into a ditch and 19 oil field workers.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Southern Manitoba was buried beneath huge snow drifts today as a raging blizzard paralyzed traffic and trapped hundreds of motorists in snowbound cars.

An elderly Winnipeg man died early today as a result of the storm. William Dixon, 61, collapsed on the street a few feet from his home and died later in general hospital.

Transportation in and around Winnipeg was virtually at a standstill. Howling winds and blinding snow stopped air traffic. Trains were running behind schedule.

12-FOOT DRIFT

The blizzard, the winter's worst, struck without warning early Sunday. It was borne by winds that in some areas reached 64 miles an hour. By Sunday night seven inches of snow had fallen in the Winnipeg area. As quickly as it fell it was scooped into drifts. At suburban Kirkfield Park, a 12-foot thick drift covered the trans-Canada highway.

Outside Winnipeg the RCMP mobilized seven bombardiers to rescue stranded motorists. The bombardiers, powered by rubber half-tracks at the rear and guided by square wide skis at the front, carried a load of passengers to safety after a bus became trapped near Stony mountain, 15 miles northwest of Winnipeg.

At Portage la Prairie, police said at least 100 cars were stranded and their passengers were put up for the night in two churches, the Salvation Army citadel, the RCMP jail, and hotels.

Thirty-six Winnipeg skiers were caught at Morris, 40 milezs south, as were many motorists.

Forty fans and the Minnedosa hockey team were stranded at Kenora, Ont.

PLOWS NOT USED

Provincial highway department officials kept the plows off the highways Sunday.

"They would be useless," one official said. The weather office warned that the storm would continue today. Snow was expected to stop during the morning and the winds by night. Temperatures ranged between five below and five above zero.

All airline flights in and out of Winnipeg were halted Sunday. Church services were cancelled. Some schools were to remain closed today.

The storm extended in a 400-mile belt from Portage la Prairie to Kenora. It swept northeastward from the central United States where it claimed at least 10 lives.

Several residents were trapped inside their homes at Fort Frances, Ont., by huge drifts that blocked their doorways.

385 Dead, Missing In Violent Gale In North Pacific

TOKYO (AP)—A violent blizzard blasted the northern Pacific from Formosa to the Kuriles today for the third day and left more than 385 persons dead or missing, most of them fishermen.

At least four Japanese are known dead and scant hope is held for the others.

American President Lines reported that the luxury liner President Cleveland went to the aid of the stricken Japanese steamship Midori Maru in the east China sea.

The liner stood by until relieved by the Orion Star. The Midori Maru sent out an S O S Sunday, reporting it had water in the fuel tank and was unable to proceed. Aboard were 141 passengers and 25 crew members.

STEAMER NEEDS HELP

Another inter-island steamer, the Nanshuimaru with 171 aboard, was awaiting help from the U. S. seaplane tender Salisbury Sound which was sent out from Okinawa. A Japanese freighter stood by.

Eleven fishing boats, with about 50 men aboard, were missing and feared lost off southern Formosa.

Montreal Pilots Die in Germany

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Montreal pilots were killed Saturday when their Sabre jets collided in the air near Zweibrucken, Germany, the air force said today.

Dead are FO. Algimantos Navikenas and FO. R. A. Mace, 24.

FO. Navikenas, 27-year-old Lithuanian, fled to Canada in 1948 after the Russians took over his homeland.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: Cooler air is advancing into western Ontario today indicating an end to the current mild spell. Showers are occurring ahead of the leading edge of this cold air with only partial clearing taking place with its arrival. By Tuesday most regions will have cleared and, temperatures, will be noticeably lower.

Light snow is still falling in northern Ontario in the wake of a storm that passed across that area Sunday night. Northern regions will remain cloudy today with clear, cold weather forecast for Tuesday.

UNION NATIONALE SOFT-PEDALLING OTTAWA CRITICISM

Duplessis Will Call Off Political Quarrel

By RICHARD DAIGNAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec's Union Nationale party seems to have retired a political warhorse that carried it to victory at the polls in three successive provincial elections.

Provincial elections in 1944, 1948 and 1952 took on the aspect of conflicts between the Quebec and federal governments instead of a contest between two or more local political parties.

Voters were placed, by election campaigning methods, in the position of choosing between a party that presented the federal government as a menace to provincial rights and French culture or a party that said the allegations were unfounded and urged cooperation with Ottawa.

In all these elections, Premier Duplessis' Union Nationale party rode to power on the back of the provincial rights issue, whipped up to white heat by weeks of campaigning.

SILENCE DESCENDS

But now all the anti-Ottawa drum-beating that characterized Quebec elections is apparently to be silenced.

The word to call off the 10-year political quarrel between his government and the federal government was sounded by Mr. Duplessis Wednesday. He described his new policy as one of "patience."

It came as a sort of official confirmation of a trend noted in political circles since Prime Minister St. Laurent and Mr. Duplessis met privately in Montreal last October to iron out a double taxation problem arising from the imposition of a provincial income tax.

On the celebration at the legislature of his 65th birthday, the premier told his supporters he had been inclined to take a "tit-for-tat attitude" and to "go on the warpath." But, he added, age brought a maturity that replaced youthful vitality.

He told supporters to stand by provincial rights but not in a "provincialist or narrow-minded" way.

SURPRISE TO SOME

It was a quietly-spoken speech and one that took some Union Nationale members by surprise.

Political observers see the new policy as a development arising from Quebec's acceptance as a "temporary agreement" of the Ottawa government's decision to reduce by 10 per cent federal income tax in Quebec.

The federal decision almost entirely wiped out the double taxation effect of the Quebec income tax.

Also, political observers say, Mr. Duplessis has his eye cocked on the forthcoming federal-provincial conference where the basis of new federal-provincial tax agreements will be discussed.

Special Meeting of Council Sets Belleville's Tax Rate At 71 Mills, Up One Mill

A tax rate of 71 mills, a one mill increase over last year, was set for the city of Belleville at a special meeting of council held Saturday afternoon. The 1955 mill rate is based on an assessment of $19,125,920.

Setting of the city tax rate at 71 mills terminated well over 30 hours of deliberation by councillors who had met on at least half a dozen occasions to consider the year's budget.

A week ago at regular council meeting Mayor Both delayed the bringing down of the budget declaring that in his opinion the city could be operated on 70 mills and at Saturday's meeting Alderman Doug Moxam brought in a recommendation calling for the rate to be set at 70 mills.

Alderman Gerald Hyde as chairman of finance then introduced an amendment calling for the rate to be 71 mills which he said was necessary on the basis of estimates approved by council.

The amendment was carried, with Aldermen Argue, David, Forrester, Graham, Grandame, Hyde, Keegan, Safe and Tice approving. Polling negative votes were Mayor Both and Aldermen Clarke, Humphreys, McCabe and Moxam. A following vote on the original motion calling for 70 mills was then defeated by the same majority.

City expenditures for the year are estimated at $1,740,257.64, with public schools' maintenance and operation to cost $381,205.20; separate schools will cost $44,240.35, and high schools $168,521.66. Mill rate for public schools on an assessment of $17,226,335 is 22 mills. The rate for separate schools is also 22 mills and for high schools 7.9 mills.

The city's share of local improvements will take 1.7 mills which will raise $32,514.06; hospitalization will take 2.5 mills which will raise $47,814.80; welfare will take 1.9 mills. The general rate at 35 mills will raise $669,407.20.

Sundry receipts, including board of works grant of $32,000; parking meters, $19,000; per capita grant of 2.5 mills from the province $48,317.50; sale of fire hall; $10,355 and $27,000 transfer from surplus, were estimated at $276,263.13.

Board of works budget for the year is $205,000; the fire department will take $150,600; police department $108,225.82; board of health $27,000; child welfare $35,947; parks board, $19,125.92; public library, $18,650.70; traffic and street lighting $36,400; administration of justice $25,000; garbage collection $53,400; budget for the industrial, tourist and publicity committee is $5,500; planning and housing, $5,327; property committee, $23,900.

With Saturday's meeting called for consideration of a proposal to ask for increased payments in lieu of taxation from Central Mortgage and Housing for the 203 veterans' rental houses in the city and for discussion of the budget, there was still some doubt the budget by-law would be presented.

Mutchmor Says Two-Income Families Pricing Mother Love Out of Market

TORONTO (CP)—An official of the United Church of Canada said today two-income families are pricing mother love and mother care out of the "home" market.

Rev. J. R. Mutchmor, secretary of the board of evangelism and social service of the United Church, said in a report to the board's annual meeting that family life is being sold short.

Dr. Mutchmor said mothers who work do not have time to take proper care of their children with the result the children do not get the "cuddling and love" they need. The birth rate is high but Christian nurture is at an all-time low; he said.

The text of his remarks was released to the press in advance.

He said there were signs at home and abroad of improving morals. Christmas and New Year's were celebrated in a more Christian way than in some other years; there was rising concern for highway safety and the press, radio and TV were generally well conducted.

"Adverse reports of the behavior of troops abroad have been fewer and less disturbing," said the doctor.

He said the morals box score is a paradox. While good abounds, evil flourishes. Beverage alcohol consumption was down but arrests for drunkenness in Ontario were up.

He said other bad signs included race track betting up one-third in 1954 above 1952, long lists of murders, brawls, woundings, stabbings and rapes in Toronto and homes broken by separation and-or divorce.

"Evidence of dishonesty abounds in this day of easy money," he said. "There's too much swindle-sheet liquor consumed on chair cars, particularly on the Toronto-Montreal run. There are too many high-priced executives riding around in Cadillacs and charging the cost up to the product."

He said the church must strike out in defence of the poor with demands for decent, low-rental housing, industrial peace and improved economic conditions.

Prices of Wheat, Gold Jump, Govt. Makes Paper Profit

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The price of gold in Canadian funds jumped by 30 cents an ounce last week. Wheat increased by almost two cents a bushel. And the government made a neat $19,000,000 paper profit on its official reserves of United States dollars and gold.

These are just some of the impacts on the economy brought by the decline in the exchange value of the Canadian dollar. The premium on the dollar, which at one time in 1952 was about four cents, dropped Friday to 1 13-16 cents, down about one cent during the week and the lowest in almost a year.

For exporters it meant good news. In the stiff world fight for markets they have been complaining that the high dollar premium has worked against them.

Either they had to tighten belts and work on smaller profits or lose overseas markets to competing U. S. exporters simply because of a difference in the exchange value of the dollar.

The drop in the exchange value may also increase the competitive position of Canadian exporters in the huge U.S. market. Exporters could reduce their selling prices without affecting their returns in Canadian funds.

But for the importer and to some extent the consumer, it may be a different story. The drop in the exchange value means the importer must pay a little more for his goods. And if he cannot afford to absorb the increase he may in some cases pass it along to the consumer in the form of slightly higher prices.

The Canadian dollar has been riding above par ever since February 1952. Since Canada's gold producers selling on the official market get paid on the basis of the official price, $35 an ounce in U.S. funds, it meant a drop in revenue. The drop now is being narrowed. A week ago the mint paid them $33.96 an ounce in Canadian funds. Last Friday producers got a boost to $34.26.

The price of wheat under the International Wheat Agreement also has been expressed in U.S. currency terms and the exchange shift has increased the price in Canadian terms slightly, to $1.74¾ a bushel for No. 1 Northern.

Up went the value of the government's official reserves, too. The government holds about $1,900,000,000 in U.S. dollars and gold used to cushion any tendency to violent changes in the day-to-day fluctuations in the Canadian dollar.

On paper the value in Canadian funds of those reserves increased by about $19,000,000. It is only a paper profit because the government has no intention of liquidating all of its reserves at any one time.

EIGHT INJURED AS BLAST WRECKS TORONTO CAFE

Half Million Damage Is Done at Long Branch

TORONTO (CP) — An explosion demolished a restaurant in suburban Long Branch early today, injuring eight persons, six severely.

With police and fire chiefs still busy at the scene, several hours later and owner Antonio Pylpiw, 34, in hospital, no official estimate of damage was available. However, it was reported loss might run from $200,000 to $500,000.

Nor was it possible to establish the exact cause of the blast, which damaged neighboring property and smashed windows over a wide area of the suburb a few miles west of Toronto. Investigators checked the possibility the explosion was in some form of gas or fumes.

LIVED OVER GRILL

Six of the injured lived above the damaged restaurant, the Silver Star Grill, at the corner of Lakeshore road and 30th street in Long Branch.

Taken to hospital were Pylypiw; his 31-year-old wife, Rita; their children, David, 7, Tommy, 3, and Mary, 5; and Catherine Miller, 67, identified only as a relative.

Two neighbors, Mrs. Albert LeBel, 38, and Mrs. Alice Hoyland, suffered minor injuries.

The blast rocked adjacent sections of Toronto's western suburbs, awakening and alarming hundreds of residents. One woman described the sound as "like thunder, echoing out over Lake Ontario."

The Pylypiws, who operate the restaurant, said they had closed the building only Sunday, for the first time in over a year, to take a trip. They returned home Sunday night.

The blast tore out the front of the restaurant building and carried it 30 feet across the street. Firemen said it knocked out power lines and shattered windows over a wide area. Residents 25 miles from the explosion scene reported hearing the blast.

The Pylypiw family was blown into the street by the blast. One of the injured was reported to have been found sprawled on the street, legs pinned under a sofa.

The most severely hurt was David Pylypiw who suffered a fractured skull. All in the restaurant suffered shock and extreme bruising. Two of the children, Tommy and Mary, have first and second degree burns.

Fire chief Albert Houston of Long Branch said he is certain cooking gas backed up in the restaurant before the blast occurred. Two explosions, one following immediately on the other, were reported. The chief added that until the fire marshal's report is made, he is not in a position to comment on the exact cause.

Okah Jones, vice-president of Consumer's Gas Co., said his men reached the scene shortly after the blast but no one knew "whether it was manufactured gas, oil or natural gas" which caused the explosion.

Mr. Pylypiw said he does not think coal gas fumes caused the blast.

Will Be Extended East of City In Early Summer

Contracts for Eight Bridges, Cloverleafs Will Be Let

Extension of the four-lane highway east of Belleville and construction of eight bridges and cloverleafs will have top priority in the Ontario Department of Highways' construction program for this year.

This was stated over the week-end by Hastings County members at Queen's Park, W. E. Sandercock and Roscoe Robson, who have been in close touch with the new highways minister regarding the highway development for this area.

Mr. Sandercock assured that the local section of 401 Highway had been given "top priority" by the new highways minister James Allan and his department.

Included in the heavy bridge ocnstruction work tenders, which will be called for during the spring and early summer are the bridges over the Trent River and Highway 33; cloverleaf at No. 14 Highway; bridge over the Moira River; cloverleaf at No. 37 Highway; bridge over the CNR tracks and bridges over Blessington Creek; the CPR tracks and the Salmon River.

ONE SECTION GRADED

Section of the highway on which construction emphasis will be given extends from four miles west of Trenton to 13 miles east of Belleville covering an over-all stretch of 27 miles. The Belleville-Trenton section of the highway has already been graded.

It was noted plans were now ready for the new highway bridge over the Trent River and require only checking with the Federal government as this is a navigable stream. Tenders for the Trent River bridge are expected to be called in June.

NO COMPLETION DATE SET

While bridge construction on the four-lane highway route is expected to get underway this summer no completion date of the highway stretch has been suggested. It was assured however, that bridge work grading to be done east of Belleville and west of Trenton would be completed as soon as possible.

Over-all cost of heavy bridge construction for which tenders are to be called this spring is estimated at $3,610,000, and over-all cost of the entire 27 miles' stretch of highway is estimated at $12,000,000.

NIEMAN APPOINTEES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Harvard University Sunday announced that Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N.C.) News and Observer, and John B. Oakes, member of the editorial board of the New York Times, hace been appointed to the committee for selection of 1955-56 Nieman fellows. They will join three members from Harvard in making the 18th annual awards of fellowships to newspapermen for a year of study at Harvard.

Britain Experiences Worst Weather Since Second War in Many Areas

LONDON (Reuters) — Blizzards swept across the English countryside today as Britain experienced its worst weather in many areas since before the Second World War.

At least six persons died in the last 24 hours in icy roads and fields, while in northern Scotland blizzards grounded air force planes loaded with food, medical supplies and animal fodder for villages and farmhouses cut off from the outside world.

Snow and cold weather were felt over most of west Europe today, reaching as far south as central Italy.

In Britain three days of snow, ice and blizzard conditions isolated small communities, especially in the eastern county of Norfolk, and hampered traffic by road and rail.

More than 5,000 villages in northern Scotland were cut off by snow and ice for the second time in a month. Thousands of sheep are feared buried in deep drifts.

Off the Dover coast the 7,172-ton Italian liberty ship Monviso was refloated in a blizzard after being grounded in four feet of water on dangerous rocks.

Parisians splashed through slush on their way to work today as an inch of snow which fell overnight began to melt.

Berlin lay under a five-inch blanket of snow in brilliant sunshine and below freezing temperatures.

Ten German Boy Scouts who left Frankfurt Feb. 2 on an "endurance" hike to the east Tyrol were reported missing. Police said there was a chance they gave up the attempt and returned to Frankfurt.

Snow continued to fall throughout Switzerland, with more expected. A cold wave swept north and central Italy, but it rained in the south.

Scandinavia was under a thick blanket of snow. Helsinki, Finland, reported temperatures down to four degrees below zero, while in Mikkeli the mercury dropped to 31 degrees below.

Pet Dogs Save Two Children Lost in Forest

KITIMAT, B. C. (CP) — Two children here owe their lives to two faithful family pets who guarded them for danger and gave them warmth as they wandered lost through forest and snow.

A mongrel named Pet and a hefty St. Bernard named Dozer stayed with the boy and girl 16 hours during the weekend, wandering with them until their small charges were exhausted.

Then the dogs lay down with them and kept them alive, in temperatures barely above freezing, with the heat from their bodies.

When searchers found Bobby Anderson, 10 and his cousin, Darlene Anderson, 9, they lay asleep in a foot of snow, curled up with the mongrel terrier. Dozer stood guard and refused to let the searchers touch the children until they awakened and quieted him. Neither suffered any ill effects.

20,000 Troops Poised to Attack Thailand, Claim

BANGKOK (AP)—Prime Minister Pibul Songgram said today 20,000 so-called free Thai troops are assembled in bordering Yunan province of Red China poised for a jump-off against Thailand.

The Thai field marshal addressed a press conference as delegations began arriving for Wednesday's opening of the three-day conference of the Southeast Asia Defence Treaty Organization (SEATO).

LOCAL OFFICERS OF LAW HANG DEFEAT ON GARAGEMEN

In preparation for their annual battle of the ice lanes with the Firemen, local officers of the law hung a 4-3 defeat on Boyce's Garage during the week-end. Players from both the city police department and provincial police make up the lawmen's team and they are taking advantage of a few practice tilts before they take on the fire-eaters in their annual grudge game a week hence.

Despite Calendar Spring Seems To Be on Wing

Spring is still 28 days away, but it looks like the weather is two-timing the calendar in the Belleville area.

A bout of mild weather settled down over the area during the week-end, the first prolonged relief the city has had from the uncomfortable blasts of winter this year. Temperatures on Saturday rose as high as 34 degrees, and dropped to only 10 degrees. Sunday, the highest reading was 40 degrees and the lowest 19 degrees, registered early in the morning.

At 10.30 a.m. today the mercury stood at 39 and was expected to rise higher as the day progresses.

Dull, leaden skies blanketed the area hinting at a continuing of the light rainfall that hit the area earlier this morning. Infrequent, light drizzle blew across the city from time to time during the morning.

Still, country cousins, who think the hearts of city people are as hard as the sidewalks they pound would have paused awhile here this morning as most of us stepped springily along the pavements and over the mush of melting snow and ice in the streets. And there was good reason for it too—for spring seems to be on the wing, despite the calendar.

NAUTILUS TO DIVE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The atomic submarine Nautilus will head out to sea late this week to plumb the black depths of the Atlantic in her first deep dive tests. The area in which the deep dive and full power trials will be conducted is described only as "several hundred miles out."

Rev. L.S. Throop Dies Suddenly At Cannifton

While seeking aid to help move his car on Sunday afternoon, Rev. Leman Sheldon Throop, B.A., B.D., Cannifton United Church circuit minister, which includes Cannifton, Carmel, Gilead and Bethany, suffered a heart seizure across the street from his home but died before medical aid could be summoned. Dr. G. S. Cronk went to Cannifton on the hurried call but Mr. Throop was dead on his arrival.

Mr. Throop came to the Cannifton circuit 18 months ago from Tamworth, and had proved to be an able administrator, a kind friend and an active worker in the circuit, especially among the younger members of the several congregations. After entering the ministry, Mr. Throop had held charges at Tamworth, North Augusta, Escott, Westneath, Demorestville, Newboro and Delta, and in each of these charges he had made many friends, who will sincerely regret his sudden death.

The late Mr. Throop was for twelve years secretary-treasurer of the Kingston Presbytery of the United Church and last year was chairman of the Belleville Presbytery and attended the General Council as a delegate from this Presbytery. Fraternally he was a past master of Harmony Lodge, A.F. and A.M., No. 370, at Delta.

He was born in Spencerville 66 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William H. Throop and is survived by his wife, the former Lila Jean Needham; two daughters, Miss Frances Throop of St. Catharines; Miss Bernice Throop of Queen's University; two sons, Needham Throop, B.A. and Sc., of Belleville; Robert Sheldon Throop, B.Sc., of Ottawa; one sister, Miss Harriett Throop of Spencerville; one brother, Wellington Throop, of Spencerville, and three grandchildren, Mary Jane Throop and Susan Throop of Belleville and Robert Douglas Throop of Ottawa.

Resting at the United Church parsonage, Cannifton. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Capacity Audience Greets Colorful 'Varieties of 1955'

Thanks to a capacity house that greeted one of the best stage and screen shows seen in a long time, the crippled youths of Toronto's Variety Village will benefit through a substantial amount of money.

The "Varieties of 1955" offered at the Capitol Theatre last night along with an outstanding motion picture drew the continued well-deserved plaudits of the packed house as top-flight vaudeville artists of Toronto presented an attraction that was par excellence.

Monte Hall, well-known radio personality and master-of-ceremonies lived up to all advance notices. The Personable emcee who headlined a galaxy of stage stars kept the audience in a state of continual merriment all evening. His merry wit and sharp humor, some of it at the expense of local dignitaries was one of the highlights of the show that included music, mirth and hilarity in a variable program.

EXPRESS APPRECIATION

Later Mr. Hall personally and on behalf of Variety Village, Toronto, expressed his and their appreciation of the generosity of Belleville citizens in turning out in such numbers to help a very worthy cause.

The show was brought here under the aegis of the Bay of Quinte Theatre Managers Association who make an annual contribution to the Variety Village. Managers from Picton, Napanee and Trenton joined their counterparts in Belleville, Messrs. Tommy Mascaro, Capitol Theatre, George Forhan, Belle Theatre and Willard Fawcett, McCarthy Theatre, at the big show.

Making a distinct hit in their first appearance in Belleville were the "Blue Tones" of Picton, a sextet of attractive teen-agers from the Prince Edward Collegiate Institute who not only received the whole-hearted applause of the audience but drew well-merited praise from Mr. Hall who predicted a fine future for the girls. The youthful singers who have appeared on television were under the direction of their manager and accompanist, Bud Cheyne, and their softly-sung harmonious melodies were one of the hits of the show.

Wally Coster, a robust baritone delighted the audience with his rendition of various numbers. Besides his concert numbers the singer paid melodic tribute to the crippled kiddies with his offering of "You'll Never Walk Alone." He generously responded with encores to a well-deserved ovation at the end of his appearances.

A MELODIC GEM

The Len Moss musical trio was a melodic gem with accordionist and pianist Moss heading the act. Mr. Moss is an internationally-known accordionist, pianist, composer and musical director and his masterful handling of the accordion was a delight to the ear. His talented companions with guitar and bass viol rounded out a musical organization that has seldom been bettered on a Belleville stage.

Peggy Brooks, attractive singer would be a headline attraction on any show. Possessed of an outstanding stage appearance the comely singer drew rounds of applause with her offerings especially the popular "Let Me Go, Lover".

Comedian Gerry Leader, who has appeared here before, despite a serious leg injury had the large crowd in "stitches" with his humorous patter, stories and mimicry. His imitation of the "Mad Russian" and other entertainment characters rounded out a comedy act that left nothing to be desired.

Mr. Moss, equally at home at the piano provided the accompaniment for all of the acts with the exception of the "Blue Tones".

Following the show the artists and special guests were entertained at a buffet luncheon served in the Belle Theatre with the members of the Bay of Quinte Theatre Managers Association proving ideal hosts.

SPECIAL MEETING

Alderman Hyde noted he was ready to introduce the budget by-law, pointing out that at the last meeting of council he had given notice of motion that the by-law would be introduced at the next meeting.

Mayor Both replied the meeting had been called for discussion of the budget, not for introduction of the budget by-law, but suggested a recommendation for a 70 mill rate could be introduced.

Alderman Moxam then tabled a recommendation calling for a 70 mill tax rate.

"The alderman must have a golden wand or something. I would like to hear how we can meet our obligations with a 70 mill tax rate when our estimates call for 71 mills," stated Alderman Hyde.

RATE WHITTLED LAST YEAR

In reply Alderman Moxam noted that last year the rate had been tentatively set at 76 mills and was "whittled down" to 70 mills and the city had actually operated on 68 mills.

"The mayor has done a wonderful job and I still think we can pare our budgets," he said.

When Alderman Hyde enquired how the city operated on 68 mills when the tax rate was 70 mills, the mayor replied there had been a two mill surplus last year which meant the city had operated on 68 mills.

Claiming that the city could operate on 70 mills this year, the mayor referred to the special grant of over $12,000 to the hospital for payment of special services which he said could be cut out. He said the payment for special services was used to cover up a hospital deficit.

"The city is not supposed to budget for a surplus nor to cover up deficits of other people," he said.

The mayor assured council it was not his wish to ask for something which could not be achieved but with dropping of the special hospital grant and paring budgets here and there he felt the 70 mill rate could be achieved.

He said he would be reluctant to sign a budget by-law calling for more than 70 mills.

HYDE REPLIES

"But I still haven't the answer on how we operated on 68 mills last year," said Alderman Hyde.

He noted that of the $27,000 surplus listed all but $2,000 had been carried over from the year previous so actually the surplus was only $2,000.

"It's all very well for political purposes to ask for a 70 mill tax rate, but not if we are to pay the bills for the services which the majority of council feel are necessary," Alderman Hyde declared.

Alderman Grandame agreed there may have been a surplus last year but stated there had been work not done that should have been done. If it was felt that the city could do justice to the work necessary this year he would like to go along with the 70 mill rate provided the work was not put off. He described last year's repair of Coleman street as being a waste of money.

WORK BEING DEFERRED

Alderman David was of the same opinion noting that he also liked to save money but not by deferring work that should be done. "All you have to do is to travel city streets to realize work is being deferred," he said.

Replying to Alderman Grandame, Mayor Both noted that the Coleman street repairs had been done with the city engineer's approval, and it was his responsibility, not the mayor's.

"The engineeer is not here with my approval," he said. "I asked for his resignation last year but the matter had been deferred."

Alderman Safe as chairman of public works declared that as a substantial taxpayer no one was more interested in the tax rate than he was, but it should not be the policy to defer work in order to have a low mill rate.

He noted that last year in the sale of the old fire hall and many city lots the city had parted with assets which it would not have for sale in the future.

Continuing, he noted if the city did not own the hospital it could do as it wished with the special services grant but asserted it "would only be deferring the evil day by withdrawing the grant."

"If we have no confidence in the hospital board, let us put them out of office, but don't let's put stumbling blocks in their way."

Referring to his own budget the alderman said it could be cut $15,000 or raised $100,000 but asked if it would be sensible or reasonable.

NEW OBLIGATIONS IN 1956

With plans for a new pavement and debenture costs for the hospital and new secondary school there would be new obligations next year. He suggested it might even be wise to budget for a surplus this year to ease the shock in 1956.

The mayor again referred to the special hospital grant, noting that the board of governors had placed it in its budget this year and did not even ask the city. Alderman Grandame said he had voted for the hospital grant but now he was not so sure as he would like explanation of some figures on the hospital budget. One of the figures he would like explained was a sum of $6,000 for collection fees.

Alderman Tice noted council had representatives on the hospital board and any objection of council to the hospital budget should be made to the board. He pointed out that the city owned the hospital and if there was a deficit the city would have to pay, just how didn't matter a great deal but it was not fair to pass on a deficit to incoming councils.

Alderman Hyde said he was opposed to the recommended 70 mill tax rate, noting that council had met five or six times and had examined in detail all the committee budgets. Their total required a 71 mill tax rate.

"Seventy mills will not pay the budgets which this council has passed," he declared. "Everything in the budget is needed and in fact some things have been left out."

Schools had taken an additional three mills and last year's surplus and proceeds from sale of the firehall and sale of city lots had been put in to be spent.

If a 70 mill tax rate was approved, next year the tax rate would go up or services would be cut, he said.

Father of Three Takes Own Life By Shooting Self

BANCROFT (Special) — Stanley Franski, 39, father of three children, who, three weeks ago suffered a nervous breakdown and was described by police as "mentally depressed," died in Peterborough Civic Hospital Sunday morning, after he had shot himself in the head with a rifle in his home on Highway 62, three miles north of here.

Police said no inquest will be held.

Franski shot himself through the head with a .22-calibre rifle after he propped the gun on a shelf and triggered it with a stick.

O.P.P. Cpl. Archie Grayling, who investigated the case, said Franski, father of three children, whose ages range from three years to 12, rose at 7 a.m. Sunday and told his wife, Dolores, he had "never felt better."

He went downstairs to light the fire, while Mrs. Franski kept up a running conversation with him. She asked him what he was doing and he said he was going out to "feed the stock."

Shortly afterwards she heard the shot.

Cpl. Grayling said Franski "has been under doctor's care for the past three weeks. He had a nervous breakdown and was mentally depressed. He was due to enter hospital today for treatment."

Dr. H. S. Johnson, Bancroft, who had been treating the man during his illness, was called to the Franski home after the suicide attempt.

He had Franski rushed to the Peterborough hospital by ambulance where he died about two hours later.

Franski was described as a building carpenter, who had been out of work since his nervous breakdown. Coroner Dr. Herbert Young handled the case in Peterborough.

Miss L. Dafoe, Cannifton, Has Narrow Escape

Miss Loretta Dafoe, 27, of Cannifton, had a narrow escape from drowning late Sunday afternoon when she broke through the ice of the Moira river just north of the dam at Cannifton.

The young woman did not go under but clung to the edges of broken ice until she was rescued by several men who ran to her assistance after the alarm was given.

Miss Dafoe had gone out onto the ice above the dam to retrieve a child's mitten. The ice failed to bear her weight and she dropped through into 10 feet of water. Children playing near ran to the Holgate garage nearby and Mr. Holgate along with two other men ran to the rescue. Belleville firemen were called but Miss Dafoe had been pulled to safety before they arrived.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to take this opportunity to say "thank you" to those many kind friends, relatives and neighbors for their thoughtfulness during the illness and passing of a beloved husband; to Doctors Loynes, Hartt and Empson for their care in the hospital; to Mrs. Spencer and nurses on First South, a very special "thank you." My thanks to those who sent so many beautiful floral tributes, to the acting pallbearers, to those who furnished cars, to the Rev. L. S. Throop and the Rev. R. F. Darke for their comforting messages; to the Belleville Burial Company, to the very many kind neighbors who made the time more bearable and to those who sent so many letters and cards of sympathy.
—Ethel M. Hodgen and Betty Boomhour. F21

We wish to thank all our friends and neighbors who so kindly helped us through our sad bereavement in the loss of a dear wife and daughter, by sending floral tributes, cards of sympathy and loan of cars. We do sincerely "thank you."
—Mr. George Soble, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gillespie. F21

Mere words are inadequate to express our gratitude to our many lovely friends, neighbors and relatives for their many acts of kindness to us in the loss of our beloved husband and father, Robert Arnold Portt; also for the beautiful floral tributes, lovely cards and loan of cars. Special thanks to Dr. D. C. McVicker, organist Mrs. D. Hinchey, Rev. L. Arthur Page, Rev. L. G. O. Walker, officers and members of Craig Lodge No. 401, A. F. & A. M., Deseronto and Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home.
—Mrs. Anita E. Portt and Mayhew, Irma and Thornton Portt. F21

Blue Cross Day Will Be Held By Hospital

The Belleville General Hospital will hold "Blue Cross Day" for 120 local group leaders at the hospital Thursday, February 24th.

Blue Cross, which paid $300,000 to the Belleville General in 1953 for service to subscribers in this area, is the Ontario Hospital Association's own plan for hospital insurance.

D. W. Oglivy, Toronto, director of the Blue Cross, will be guest speaker at a luncheon meeting slated for the hospital's dining room at 1.30 p.m.

Program for the day includes a noon luncheon, a tour of the hospital, tea in the recreation room of the nurses' residence and a forum on nature and purpose of the Blue Cross organization.

Department heads in various sections of the hospital are slated to discuss, briefly, their work with visiting group leaders. A brochure on the growth of Blue Cross membership and payments locally will be distributed to visitors.

The program at the Belleville General Hospital is one of a series of similar programs being held across the province.

MONTREAL — (CP) — The U. S. dollar was at a discount of 1 29-32 per cent the Bank of Canada reported at noon today. Friday's noon rate was 98 13-32 cents. Pound sterling $2.72 15-16 against $2.73 7-8.

PRODUCE MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were unchanged here today.

The egg market was steady with offerings light for a good demand.

Quotations provided by the Dominion department of agriculture: Eggs, graded, in fibre cases: A large 39; A medium 38; A small 34; B 32; C 26. Wholesale to retail: A large 44; A medium 43; A small 39; B 37; C 31.

Butter solids: Ont., first-grade, 61.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP)—Trade was slow on all slaughter cattle except cows and bulls today at the Ontario stockyards.

Cows sold actively firm and bulls steady. Steers, heifers and fed yearlings sold unevenly steady to 50 cents lower.

Receipts: cattle 3,275; calves 305; hogs 170; sheep and lambs 130; holdover 200 stockers.

Prices: choice steers, all weights 21; a few extreme tops of 21.50; good steers 19-21; mediums 16-19; commons 12-16; good heifers 17-17.50; a few early sales to 18; mediums 14-16; commons 12-14; boner steers and heifers 10-12; choice fed yearlings 21-22; good fed yearlings 19-21; mediums 16-19; good cows 12-12.50; light heifery cows to 14; canners and cutters down to 6; good heavy bologna bulls 13-13.50; butcher bulls to 14; common and medium light bulls down to 10.

Calves were barely steady at 28-30 for good and choice vealers; mediums 19-27; commons 12-18.

Hog prices were not established and there were no early sales on sheep or lambs.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market gained in all sections today, uraniums in the lead.

Climbs in the first half-hour were most spectacular, with most prices dropping back a little from their highs by about 11 a.m. and maintaining that level into early afternoon.

Preston East Dome was the strongest single issue, touching $9.60 on a $1.25 climb and falling back to $9.40 by 1 p. m. Algom, in which Preston has a large interest, was ahead 75 cents to $19.75 after touching $20.50 and brokers attributed strength in the two issues to U. S. buying.

Utilities, foods, motors, financial institutions and manufacturers led industrials ahead.

Two Satellites Have Shakeups In Governments

VIENNA (AP) — Government shakeups appeared to be under way today in two east European Communist countries — Romania and Hungary—in the wake of the changes in Moscow.

In Russia's tightly - controlled satellite of Romania, Premier Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej did not turn up Saturday at one of the nation's traditional Communist ceremonies.

In Hungary, Budapest radio announced Premier Imre Nagy is seriously ill.

Western diplomats in Vienna said Navy might really be ill and that Gheorghiu-Dej's absence might be purely coincidental. But, at the same time, the diplomats have been expecting changes, in Hungary, at least.

Since 1953, when the "new course" of more consumer goods was announced throughout the Communist empire, Nagy has been the front man for that policy in Hungary. With the "new look" apparently abandoned by Moscow and also by Hungary, it has been expected that Nagy would be removed.

Woman Charged With Murder After Man's Death

TORONTO (CP)—Ethel Sutherland, 36, Sunday was charged with murder in connection with the stabbing of 32-year-old Chesley Hicks.

Hicks died in hospital Saturday night after being stabbed with a bread knife during an argument in a midtown rooming house.

Both Hicks and Mrs. Sutherland, mother of a 15-year-old daughter, lived in separate rooms on the second floor of the house.

When the daughter went out Saturday night, Mrs. Sutherland and Hicks went to a beverage room and stayed there until it closed, police said. The couple had been drinking earlier in the afternoon.

Mrs. Sutherland and Hicks had been friends for about six months, police added.

The landlord investigated when he heard a moaning in the front room. He found Hicks was sitting in a chair holding his stomach with both hands. A bread knife was found in Hicks' room. It had apparently been wiped with tissue paper but still bore traces of blood, police said.

PRINTER HONORED

BRANTFORD (CP)—George A. Moore, a linotype operator with the Brantford Expositor for the last 35 years, was honored Saturday night by Local 378 of the International Typographical Union for his 72 years in the printing trade. He started in the trade as a boy with the Brantford Courier and later went to the Brantford Telegram. Mr. Moore said he has no intention of retiring.

Auto Workers Seek Increase In Pay, Pensions

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Increased political and industrial activity by the powerful United Automobile Workers (CIO-CCL) was forecast here Sunday.

The two-day meeting of more than 125 delegates from all UAW locals across Canada announced plans to press for increased wages, incorporation of the guaranteed employment plan, increased unemployment insurance benefits and higher pensions.

Walter Reuther, international UAW president, outlined the union's broad policy to the meeting.

He said workers in both Canada and the United States will have to receive "substantial" wage and pension increases to maintain the present economic level of prosperity.

SEEK HIGHER BENEFITS

Explaining the plans for the Canadian region of the UAW, Mr. Reuther said the union will ask the federal government to increase old age pensions to $75 a month at 65, without a means test.

An increase in industrial pensions to a minimum of $100 a month instead of the present $55 will also be sought, he told the delegates.

The top union leader said the guaranteed employment plan, formerly called the guaranteed annual wage, now is a necessity if the average worker is to hold up his share of the nation's economy.

He said the union was not trying to force industries to pay workers while they remained at home, but wanted some means by which they could be sure of steady employment.

Research Team Successfully Attacks Leukemia

TORONTO (CP)—A cancer research team at St. Michael's Hospital appears to have developed a successful method of attacking leukemia, a fatal blood cancer.

Treatment of leukemia victims in the hospital's wards has shown what observers describe as "startling results." Dr. Charles Bardawill, director of the project, says the outcome of the experiments is "very satisfactory."

The method of treatment cannot be completely tested, authorities say, because of the rarity of a growth-hormone used in the treatment. The hormone is extracted from the pituitary glands of hogs, sheep and horses.

He described results so far achieved by his research team as "the briefest glimpse of something possible."

"But our big hope now," he added, "is that someone will find how to produce the hormone synthetically."

CAS Reports Given Members

At the February meeting of the members of the board of the children's Aid Society, Mr. J. Fred Wilson welcomed the members who were representative of the city of Belleville, the town of Trenton and the county of Hastings.

The minutes of the regular and executive meetings, as read by Mrs. C. Holmes, were approved, and the financial report, as given by Mr. C. L. Hyde, was adopted.

The report of the committee appointed to amend the by-laws was submitted by Mr. Ramsay Park, the chairman, and was given careful consideration.

Mr. Hyde reported upon the arrangements for the annual dinner meeting on Friday, February 25th, when Hon. Wm. M. Nickle, of Kingston, will be the guest speaker.

Mr. Bruce Kerr, director, stated that there are now 347 children in the care of the local Children's Aid Society. An additional worker is needed in the adoption field and the protection work.

He spoke of talks that had been given at the society headquarters in Belleville by Mrs. Bateman on the subject of psychology; Mr. C. Chapman from the Public Welfare Department; Miss C. Genik of the Belleville Health Unit; Mr. D. I. MacKinnon of the Juvenile and Family Court. He also referred to a course in Port Hope, which some of the workers had attended.

In answer to a question regarding the procedure in reporting a case to the society, Mr. Kerr stated that any person wishing to seek the aid of the Children's Aid Society should telephone directly to, or call at, the office of the society. The matter would then be referred to the special worker involved.

The treasurer presented the budget for the year ending Dec. 31, 1955, to the members which was duly considered and approved.

After further reference to the coming annual meeting at St. Thomas Parish House, the meeting adjourned.

UN Command Accuses Reds Of Plane Buildup in Korea

By CHARLES CHIN

PANMUNJOM, Korea (AP)—The United Nations command today accused the Communists of violating the Korean armistice by building up Red MIG strength in North Korea.

It demanded that those responsible be punished.

Maj.-Gen. Leslie D. Carter, senior allied member of the Korean military armistice commission made the charge. He said the MIGs which attacked an American RB-45 jet reconnaissance bomber over the Yellow sea on Feb. 5 were evidence of Red air activities in North Korea since the armistice which "have mounted from zero in increasing magnitude to a high tempo."

At a press conference after the commission meeting, Carter quoted the chief Communist delegate, North Korean Lt.-Gen. Lee Sang Cho, as saying the UN charges were "allegations hastily manufactured."

Carter quoted Lee: "The history of the Korea war proves the fact that we had combat aircraft in North Korea. . . How we maintain the planes and how many we have is our own business and no concern of others."

Lee further told him, Carter said that a neutral nations supervisory commission team which visited North Korea in October 1953. A few months after the armistice, "witnessed a large number of military aircraft, including MIGs."

Lee accused the Allied side of expanding army and aircraft strength in South Korea and of "covering up the crime by making false allegations," Carter said.

Today's charge grew out of the air battle on Feb. 5 when two MIGs were shot down after they attacked the RB-45 and its escorting Sabre jets. Carter demanded that three neutral nations mobile inspection teams go to North Korea to look for evidence of the MIGs and their armament.

Refused Doctor For Headache Boy Shoots Man

VANCOUVER (CP)—Death and near death by gun, knife and bomb are being investigated by Vancouver police as they fight a continuing wave of violent crime.

A 14-year-old boy is under arrest in the gun-slaying of a 23-year-old father of two and the wounding of the victim's expectant wife.

The gun used was that of his stepfather, a city constable.

On the Skid road, John Chilton was charged with attempted murder after Edward Gagne was found bleeding from a butcher-knife slash in the throat. A cowboy, Doug Salmon, was arrested as a material witness.

In a third case, Jacob Leonhard, target of an underworld booby trap which hurled him 10 feet Tuesday when it blew apart his car, was beginning to regain his power of speech. Leonhard was rendered speechless in the blast which left him with deep facial cuts, a broken right leg and a minor back fracture.

EAST INDIAN SHOT

Police identified the shooting victim as Jon Biln, east Indian truck driver, who was struck by two of five shots fired at close range at he and his wife as they lay in bed Sunday morning.

Police said the boy had been watching television Saturday night when he complained of a headache and asked the Bilns to call a doctor.

Mrs. Biln told police her husband replied: "If you hadn't been watching TV, you wouldn't have a headache." She said the boy ran from the room and they went to bed.

Later, the woman said, the boy returned with the revolver. She took one bullet in the arm and fled from the basement suite to the house of police sergeant John (Scotty) Matheson.

NO CHARGES LAID

The boy was arrested shortly after but no charges were laid overnight.

In the Skid road stabbing, Gagne was taken to hospital where 60 stitches were required to close his throat wound.

Police said Salmon, who grappled with Gagne's attacker, suf-

Laboratory Will Be Constructed In Kingston

MONTREAL (CP)—A $1,500,000 laboratory for basic research in textiles now is being constructed at Kingston, Ont., it was disclosed here Saturday.

The announcement was made by H. F. Hoerig, manager of the department of research and development of the Du Pont of Canada, Ltd., in an address to the physical sciences centre of McGill University.

Mr. Hoerig said basic scientific research without specific commercial objectives is of great importance in the textile field for the development of new fabrics and of new uses and processes for older ones.

Vancouver Sun Will Raise Price To Seven Cents

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Sun announced Saturday it is increasing the price of its regular edition from five to seven cents a copy. The Saturday edition will be increased from 10 to 14 cents and the monthly subscription rate from $1.25 per month to $1.50.

The changes become effective March 1.

The Sun attributed the increases to rising costs.

New York Thug Slain by Police In Gun Battle

NEW YORK (AP) — The long crime career of squint-eyed August Robles, sworn enemy of the law, ended in death Sunday after a blazing 90-minute gun battle with police.

The pint-sized gunman had been the object of an intense three-day manhunt in the city's Puerto Rican districts.

Police, rankled by the memory of his two escapes Friday, were determined to get their man.

The elusive desperado was at last tracked down in a third-floor, tenement hideaway on 112th St., near Park Ave.

Two hundred policemen guarded every approach to the shabby building and pumped machine-gun, rifle and pistol bullets and tear gas into Robles' lair. He answered their demands to surrender with gunshots.

CAUSED A FIRE

At one point tear gas caused a fire in the embattled four-room apartment. Firemen turned streams of water into the building to quench the blaze even before the shooting ended.

Finally there were no more answering shots.

Police gingerly entered the charred apartment, still reeking of acrid gunpowder and smarting tear gas. A priest went with them to administer last rites.

On the floor, in a pool of blood and water, lay Robles, who had sworn he would never be taken alive. Blood oozed from a ragged chest wound. A rough tourniquet had been tied around his left arm, pierced by another bullet.

He was barefoot and clad only in trousers and an undershirt. A woman's slipper and children's toys were on the floor beside him. A bright-eyed doll perched on a chest above.

Found beside Robles' body were four revolvers, three of which he had taken from policemen who first tried to arrest him early Friday. His escape touched off the manhunt.

Later he eluded four detectives in a Harlem housing project.

Police originally went out to arrest Robles to question him about the gangland slaying of ex-convict Joseph Aronowitz in Brooklyn last Tuesday.

Czech Figure Skater Asks Political Asylum

VIENNA (AP)—Miroslava Nachdoska, 29-year-old Czech figure skater, has asked a western power for political asylum, it was learned reliably today.

Miss Nachdoska, who became acquainted with Canadian champion Carole Jane Pachl during last week's world championships here, disappeared shortly before she was to have returned to her Communist homeland Sunday.

Traffic Crashes Take Seven Lives In East Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic accidents accounted for seven of 12 violent deaths reported in eastern Canada during the weekend.

One person died in a fire, and one each in an asphyxiation, a fall, and a stabbing, a Canadian Press survey shows. A farmer was fatally injured when kicked by a horse.

There were six fatalities in Ontario, two in New Brunswick and two each in Quebec and Newfoundland. No deaths were reported in Prince Edward Island or Nova Scotia.

In New Brunswick, one death was attributed to what was described as the worst snowstorm in 25 years. Adrien Martin, 13, of St. Basille, was asphyxiated when snow caved in the roof of his father's barn near the northern town of Edmundston.

DIES AFTER STABBING

Chesley Hicks, 32, died in hospital after being stabbed in a midtown Toronto rooming house. Ethel Sutherland, 36, was charged with murder.

Donald Fuss, 59, died at his farm home about 35 miles west of Stratford from injuries suffered when kicked by a horse.

Three persons died in highway accidents in Ontario. Two Oshawa men, Alex Kozak, 55, and Konstantine Bojko, were killed when their car collided with a freight train at a level crossing Saturday. Reinhold E. Gunther, 45, Brantford business executive, died in a two-car collision near Hamilton.

In Toronto, Ernest Stewart, 38, suffered fatal head injuries when he slipped and fell while washing his car.

Mayor of Prague Host to Penticton Hockey Club

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (Reuters)—Players and officials of the Canadian entry in the world amateur ice hockey championships, the Penticton Vs, lunched with the mayor of Prague today in a room where a king of Bohemia was elected nearly 500 years ago.

Earlier, Mayor Alois Svoboda presented the Canadians, here on a four-day visit, with souvenir books and pictures of Prague and a small banner.

In return, club manager Clem Bird presented the mayor with an ornamental tie pin in the form of a hockey player and stick. Coach Grant Warwick fastened it to the mayor's shirt.

G. P. Summers, Canadian charge d'affaires in Prague, invited the Vs and the Czech national team, with whom they drew 3-3 in an exhibition game Sunday night, to an afternoon reception at the Canadian legation residence.

The Communist party newspaper Rude Pravo, only Prague newspaper to publish on Mondays, praises the Canadian's "perfect" stick handling and long-range shooting, but comments that the visitors sometimes used rough tactics in Sunday's game.

Both Canadian and Czech officials criticized the two Czech referees for allegedly being more severe on the Canadians than on the Czechs fo illegal tactics.

Missing Belgian Plane Located

VIGNA DI VALLE, Italy (AP) The wreckage of a Belgian Sabena airliner that crashed eight days ago with 29 aboard was reported sighted today by pilots of a search plane and helicopter in the snow-covered Appennines of central Italy.

Carabinieri and police set out immediately on skis for the scene of the crash. There was virtually no chance that any of the 21 passengers and eight crew members could still be alive.

Veterans' Housing in 2 Areas Under Discussion by Council

Recommendations asking the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for increased payments in lieu of taxes for the 203 veterans' rental houses in the city and for the houses to be offered for sale will be considered by Belleville city council.

The whole matter was discussed Saturday afternoon at a special meeting of council when E. T. Connell, representative of the C. M. H. C. was present to answer councillors' questions and the two recommendations were laid over for decision at the next meeting.

Under the present agreement from Central Mortgage and Housing the city receives $70 for bungalows and $75 for one-and-a-half storey houses in lieu of taxes. If the recommendation now before council passes, payments in lieu of taxes would be increased to $105 and $112.50 yearly.

To cover the increased payments to the city veterans' rentals would be increased from $39.50 to $42.50 for bungalows, and from the present $42.50 to $46. for one-and-a-half storey houses.

The second recommendation before council calls for the veterans' houses to be offered for sale by Central Mortgage. Present tenants would be given the opportunity to purchase but in no instance would there be any pressure put on and they might remain as tenants if so wished.

Mr. Connell noted that his organization was being asked by many municipalities to increase payments in lieu of taxes to help cover the increased costs of education and other services since the houses were built.

$3.50 RENTAL INCREASE

He noted that in most cases his organization was willing to increase payments in lieu of taxes but that the request must come from the municipality. When increased payments in lieu of taxes were made it was necessary that rentals also be increased. However, $3.50 per month was the maximum rental increase to which Central Mortgage would agree.

In connection with the second recommendation that veterans' houses be offered for sale, it was pointed out that when the houses are sold they immediately go on full taxation and when 50 percent of the houses are sold, all go on full taxes.

So far Central Mortgage had not decided the selling price of local veterans' houses should they be placed for sale but in order to prevent speculation an additional $1,000 was added to the selling price which the purchaser got back if he remained in the house for five years. There would be a ten percent down payment with mortgages running 25 years.

WOULD BE BUYING EQUITY

It was pointed out that when a veteran purchased his home his monthly payments for principal, interest and taxes would run $12-$13 more than his present rental. However, he would be purchasing an equity in his home, which he would own in 25 years or sooner, depending on the amount of his payments.

Councillors generally were concerned whether veterans would be forced to purchase their homes with Alderman McCabe pointing out veterans were much concerned over this.

Assurance was given by Mr. Connell that this was not the case. Veterans would be given the opportunity to purchase but if they chose to remain as tenants they could do so. Individual letters to this effect would go out to all veterans in the housing area if the Belleville houses were offered for sale.

NO CREDIT FOR PAYMENTS

Anothmer point which councillors had cleared up was that if a veteran purchased his home he would get no credit for rental payments made during his tenancy. Mr. Connell said sales of veterans' homes would be a straight real estate transaction with no credit for rental payments previously made.

Several aldermen voiced the opinion that a veteran would be better off financially to purchase his home rather than continue to rent, while others stressed th many veterans were not in a posi to raise the down paymen required. Councillors taking thi view were assured there would b no pressure put to force veteran to purchase. If they so wishe they could remain as tenants.

Most councillors felt that veterans on the whole would b willing to pay increased rental and thus pay a fairer share of th tax burden. It was pointed ou that under present rentals veterans were paying at the rate of 4 mills rather than 71 mills the 195 tax rate.

Mayor Both summed the matte up by noting that some veteran want to purchase their homes an if the recommendation befor council passed they could do s immediately.

Alderman Keegan said h would like more time to conside the matter and recommended be laid over until Feb. 28th. Th recommendation carried.

BROTHERHOOD WEEK

This is Brotherhood Week.

The brotherhood of man, of course, can accomplish tle if it is confined to just one week in the year. The anadian Council of Christians and Jews, which is sponring Brotherhood Week, is not suggesting that one week enough to be devoted to brotherhood—but it is hopeful at a week set aside for emphasis on the ideals and the tentialities of brotherhood will serve to make Canadians ore aware of the necessity for all of us practising its inciples throughout the whole year.

The list of prominent Canadians endorsing Brother-od Week is an impressive one. Prime Minister St. Laur-t says that "by observing the principles of brotherhood, oth at home and in our relations with citizens of other nds, we can make a useful contribution to world peace nd to international understanding." Everything for hich democracy stands is based on the principle of the otherhood of man, says Hon. George A. Drew. "The ower of love is greater than the power of the hydrogen mb," declares Solon E. Low, Social Credit leader. Can-la, says M. J. Coldwell, has an apportunity to set the orld an example of people of all nationalities and all re-gious faiths working together in good spirit.

Nor are politicians of all parties the only ones who ave voiced their approval of the ideal exemplified by rotherhood Week. National chairmen of the Canadian ouncil of Christians and Jews are O. B. Roger, John D. ayes, de Gaspe Bauebien and Mr. Justice J. Keiller Mac-y. Brotherhood Week chairmen are C. L. Burton and Horace Boivin. Christian clergymen and Jewish rab-s, educationists like N. V. Scarfe, Dean of Education at e University of Manitoba, and businessmen like G. S. horvaldson, president of the Canadian Chamber of Com-erce, have all voiced their endorsation.

These names, as we said before, are impressive. But ere is one danger. The so-called "little man" may think at there is no place for him in a movement served by many outstanding citizens. That would be a terrible ror. For the brotherhood of man, when it comes, will me from below, from amongst the mass of the people, d will not be imposed from above. It is the "little an" who holds the fate of this movement in his hands; is to him that the appeal is most directly made. Can-ian leaders in all walks of life have pointed out the road d the goal—but the road cannot be travelled, the goal nnot be achieved, unless these leaders have willing and ger followers.

DULLES ON COMMUNISM

Extremely interesting was a remark made recently U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Mr. Dulles said that a distinction must be made be-een the Soviet government and the Communist party.

"The time may come—I believe it will come—when ussians of stature will patriotically put first their na-onal security and the welfare of their people.

"They will be unwilling to have that security and at welfare subordinated to the world-wide ambitions of ternational Communism."

Those words could only be uttered by a man who as convinced that the men in power in the Kremlin to-ay use Russia to further the designs of the Communist arty, not the Communist party to serve Russian imper-lism.

Now there was a time when there was no question ut that the Communist party came first and Russia cond. In the view of many observers, however, that me has passed. There may be differences of opinion to when the transformation was made, whether it came owly over many years or suddenly, but with increasing equency and growing conviction the view has been re-atedly voiced in recent years that Russia has returned the imperialistic designs of earlier days under the Czars d that Communists scattered throughout all the untries of the world are merely being used to further ussia's unappeasable appetite for world domination.

Mr. Dulles, however, evidently does not hold with this ew. It would appear impossible to prove him wrong. hen Stalin triumphed over Trotsky he insisted that the read of international Communism must be secondary the development of Russia's economy, not because the owth of Russia's power was more important but because thout such growth Communism could not possibly con-er the world. The battle between Stalin and Trotsky was us one of method rather than of objective. It is pos-ble that all the other changes in the "party line" since at day may be merely changes in tactics, rather than in ms.

Perhaps Russia does serve international Commun-m, rather than international Communism serving Rus-a. To many the question may appear academic. But Communists outside Russia it will not be considered in is light. They, like Dulles, believe that the men in e Kremlin use Russia to serve the Communist cause. they were ever convinced that the reverse were true, the eviations" from the Moscow line would be widespread.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 21st., 1935.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Darling and Miss Jennie Redner of Belleville were week-end guests of Miss Beatrice Jones at her summer home at Rednersville.

Mrs. Julia Ann Latta of Plainfield celebrated the 79th. anniversary of her birth yesterday, Feb. 20th. She lived at Latta's Mills practically all her life. Her husband is in his 83rd. year, his birthday falls on March. 12th. Mr. and Mrs. Latta celebrated the 60th. anniversary of their wedding on Nov. 26th., 1934.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Matthews of this city spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Spencer in Frankford.

Mr. D. J. D. Jones, chief accountant in the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, addressed the members of the men's club in connection with St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Tuesday evening, his subject being the country of South Africa. Having resided in that country for some time Mr. Jones gave a highly interesting and informative address. Mr. E. V. Illsey introduced the speaker and the appreciation of the club members was expressed to Mr. Jones for his most excellent address by Mr. W.J. Campbell.

30 YEARS AGO

February 21st, 1925.

Belleville post office is probably the oldest in the province of Ontario and one of the oldest in Canada. In Upper Canada the post office was opened here in 1816 under the name of the Bay of Quinte. It was nine years later before Hamilton, London, Brantford and St. Thomas were provided with post offices. These dates are taken from the postal records in Ottawa.

The sum of fifty dollars each has been voted by the Board of Education to the boys' and girls' athletic clubs in connection with the high school. Mr. Jamieson Bone stated at the meeting of the Board that the Belleville boys and girls are sadly neglected in the way of facilities for winter sports.

Mr. Charles E. Hanna, M.P. for West Hastings, was honored at a banquet tendered to him by friends at Hotel Quinte. Mr. A. Bernard Collins acted as chairman. Two ministers of the Dominion cabinet were present, the Hon. E. Lapointe, Minister of Justice and the Hon. James Murdock, Minister of Labor.

40 YEARS AGO

February 21st., 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. J.A. Ketcheson, residents of Madoc Village for some time, have come to this city to reside.

The new barber shop in the Pappas Block, Front Street, has been leased to Felix Diyoume, formerly of Tweed.

D. Ketcheson and Arthur Johnson of the 21st. Battalion Kingston, are home to spend a few days leave.

Mr. W. A. Carson of Napanee was a visitor in town today.

Mr. Leslie Gerow left today for Chatham, Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Thrasher of Thrasher's Corners, were presented with an address accompanied by a gift of a handsome china cabinet prior to their departure to take up residence in Belleville. A large number of friends was present at the gathering. The address was signed by Mr. John Lattone and Mr. W. Simmons.

50 YEARS AGO

February 21st., 1905.

Mr. N. Baldwin Falkiner, barrister, will be absent from his office for a few days.

Mrs. Truaisch, formerly Miss Dunn of this city, now of Montreal, is visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Heeney, wife of the Rev. W. Bertal Heeney, rector of Christ Church, is visiting relatives in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor of Salt Lake City, are visiting his parents at their home in Corbyville.

Messrs. Stuart Lazier and Harry Coon were home from Queen's University, Kingston, to spend the week-end.

Mr. Fred Armstrong was in town today.

Mr. W.J. Thomson has been appointed manager and collector of the city gas works.

From our file copy at this time in 1895: Mr. John C. Lake drove out today in charge of the new bus that will run in connection with Hotel Quinte which is to be opened shortly. Hitched to the bus was a spanking team of greys and the turnout certainly makes a fine appearance. The bus was manufactured in this city by Messrs. St. Charles and Pringle.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

"I've discovered a wonderful way to escape thinking," announced an elderly lady of my acquaintance. "I put a cold wet washcloth over my eyes. It's terrific. All thought vanishes at once, and there I am in the most beautiful, cool emptiness . . ."

What this lady means by thinking are those thoughts, familiar to people nearing the farther horizon of the years, which come creeping in the night: when and how will the summons come?

To escape thinking must be a fairly common need these days. There are so many things that challenge thought. Even a hundred years ago, vast numbers of us, probably the majority of us, could get through life without doing much thinking. Books were few and far between, newspapers were a luxury, only the very well-to-do and a handful of intellectuals with a sort of mental itch bought the few magazines that were published. Such problems of a political and spiritual nature as there were even a century ago were defined with authority by those in command of the world. Most of us thought what we were instructed to think, and rebels were pitied al-demned: they were uneasy people, troubled by thought.

Today we all have to be alert merely to save our skins in a world enormously speeded up mechanically. And to our physically alerted brains comes a jostling procession of challenges from newspapers, books, movies, radio, TV, apart from the challenges that, from ancient times, have come from family, friends and the people encountered in a day's work and play.

The question arises: can the human system stand so much thinking? Is the average man equal to it? Until recent times, thinking was left to those particularly inclined that way. Now that everybody is expected to think, whether inclined or even equipped to do so, there may be consequences more astonishing than those already evident in the larger centres of population.

An Undesirable Economy

(Montreal Gazette)

Everyone should be in favor of economy. And the civic administration should be encouraged to do all it can to save money on behalf of the taxpayer, who, to be sure, is burdened enough already.

But it may be reasonably questioned whether the best way to begin is to cut off the grants made by the City to Montreal's charitable and cultural organization.

The total of these grants is about $685,000 a year. This may not, in itself, be a very large sum. But it makes a tremendous difference to these organizations. Some of them are operating upon small budgets. Even the larger organizations are finding it extremely hard to meet their campaign objectives, though these are set lower than the needs. The withdrawal of these civic grants in the future will come as a new and serious discouragement.

• • •

In announcing this new policy, Mr. Pierre DesMarais made an explanation. Let it be admitted that there is reason for what he says. He believes that the city should collect taxes only for its essential and direct services. In this way, it may render account to the taxpayers for every dollar spent.

Charitable and cultural organizations, he says, are beyond the proper sphere of civic government. They are, more or less, private efforts. It is not for the civic administration to decide how tax moneys are to be distributed among them. "If the citizens wish to make donations to charitable institutions, to social and cultural agencies," he added, "they should do it themselves."

The trouble is that the sheer weight of the burden has fallen upon those who are workers on behalf of these organizations, and those who contribute. In many cases it is the same workers and the same contributors who are called upon again and again. The City's decision will only increase a burden whose weight, even now, is causing great strain. It will cloud still further a clouded outlook.

• • •

Nor is it altogether easy to accept the logic of Mr. DesMarais' explanation that because tax money is collected for definite civic services, the civic administration is at fault in distributing any of it to private organizations doing charitable or cultural work.

Precisely the same logic would prohibit the directors of a company from making very similar gifts. For these directors might very well argue, by the same token, that the funds of a company belong exclusively to the shareholders. If the shareholders wish to make such contributions, they should do it themselves.

If this argument is carried to its conclusion, it would dry up entirely the sources of corporate giving, whether by companies or by governments. It would place the entire burden upon individuals.

• • •

Surely this is not the logical conclusion. The support of such good works has now become a matter of giving from all sources. There has to be support from governments, from companies and from individuals. The burden cannot, and should not, be shifted from any of the three. The taxpayer, like the shareholder, has long ago come to recognize that reasonable and balanced giving by his elected representatives is the carrying out of a public duty.

Anyone who looks over the list of organizations that will suffer when civic grants are withdrawn in the future will realize that nearly every one of these causes is not only worthy but also essential. The failure of these services to carry out their work, or their falling short still further of the needs they seek to meet, will have a very direct and immediate effect upon the whole city.

• • •

No one should wish to discourage any administration that seeks to deal carefully with the taxpayer's dollars. The present administration should be given praise for what it hopes to do in practising economy.

But surely, with so strong a desire to save tax money by efficiency, it would be possible to find some other fields of civic administration in which sizable savings might be effected, with little loss to the well-being of the city. It seems hardly the best plan to begin with the list of donations to those very organizations whose difficulties are so great, and whose duties and functions are so essential to the welfare and the progress and the good name of Montreal.

Designers Defy Dior

(Minneapolis Tribune)

Last August we came out foursquare against the long, narrow, unaccented torso ordained by Christian Dior, the celebrated French designer of women's clothes. M. Dior's creations reminded us unpleasantly of the so-called boyish look of the 1920s, and we went on record favoring the girlish look.

It is now our happy task to salute those French designers who are defying M. Dior in their spring collections. Far from encasing the female form in tubular frocks, they plan to make due allowance for such variations as nature provides.

We don't claim credit for this. The designers in Paris conceivably didn't read what we had to say about the matter. They're merely catching up with a popular preference that was well established before the boys set out to rescue Helen of Troy.

Executives Die Young

(St. Louis Globe-Democrat)

One of the most startling of modern longevity statistics is the brief life expectancy of business executives. The span for white males in all occupations is 65 years, but several large companies have found the average death for its top and middle management is 55. Chief cause, accounting for half, is heart disease. Cerebral hemorrhage and cancer rate the next principal causes.

Of late many progressive companies, which realize their heavy investment in executives, have stopped leaving the matter of periodic health checkups to individuals. They found too many were "too busy" or "too preoccupied" to take time out. Some regarded themselves as uniquely immune. Others were afraid of the results. All needed a nudge. These firms are either ordering their executives to undergo health examinations at strictly specified times, or are bringing a physician directly to his office.

The results, of course, so far can be only conjectural. But it is logical to believe many a remediable condition has been found in time — to save an expensively trained executive for many more years of usefulness. It is a program more companies should undertake. Healthy management usually means not only longer management but better management and better employee relations.

REDATING AN OLD NOTION

The ancients had a distinct superstitution about looking into mirrors. It was supposed to bring bad luck. The same belief exists today among many primitive people.

There is considerable psychological soundness in this superstition, for we can be sure that no good is ever going to come from the self-centeredness which is symbolized in mirror gazing. The person who is always thinking about himself is going to have something that looks very much like bad luck. Of course there is no such thing as luck, either good or bad. Things do not happen because of luck but because we have either the fortune or misfortune to live in laws, moreover, which grind on relentlessly to fulfillment.

Looking in a mirror is symbolic of thinking of one's self and probably of estimating one's self too highly. The ancients were right—misfortune of some kind will eventually result from such an attitude. If you have in your family someone who is always thinking about himself or herself, you know only too well what this means. Or perhaps you are the person who keeps the family stirred up because of this selfish introspection.

The ancients believed that it was bad luck to look into a mirror. Psychology expresses much the same sentiment today when it puts the stamp of disapproval on selfish-

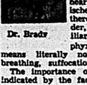
TOBACCO AND ANOXIA



Dr. Brady

Anoxia means without oxygen, oxygen lack, insufficient oxygen, oxygen deficit in the cells, tissues and organs. Sometimes physicians refer to anoxia in a particular area, say in vital brain centres or the heart muscle, as ischemia. Then, there is the older, more familiar term, asphyxia, which means literally no throb, no breathing, suffocation.

The importance of anoxia is indicated by the fact that some good physicians today believe, angina pectoris (breast pang) is due to anoxia in the area of the heart (muscle) to which a branch of the coronary artery delivers or should deliver oxygen via the blood, of course. The best and quickest relief for anginal distress is nitroglycerin. a tablet containing 1/100th of a grain placed under the tongue, which is absorbed and acts as quickly as any hypodermic injection can be; nitroglycerin relieves the distress by relaxing, dilating or opening up the contracted coronary artery branch or rather its smallest terminals (arterioles), thus permitting delivery of the needed oxygen to the heart muscle.

It may be true, although I have never seen evidence of it, that nicotine in tobacco accounts for the ill effects of excessive smoking. Chemical analyses show that various kinds of tobacco contain from 1 to 5 or 6 per cent of nicotine, whereas chemical analyses of tobacco smoke show little or no nicotine—the nicotine in the tobacco is destroyed by combustion. But this trifling discrepancy doesn't worry the old timers at all. Once they have pronounced an opinion, you had better swallow it without question. Otherwise you're likely to get a kick in the teeth.

There are many reports of ill effects of excessive use of tobacco in current medical literature, in most instances from cigarette smoking, in some instances from cigar smoking, but only rarely from pipe smoking and I cannot recall that I have ever seen or read of a case of serious ill effects from chewing tobacco. Not that the habit of chewing is to be commended if one associates with human beings, but if the old timers are right and the chemists are not kidding, a fellow who decides to take a chew of tobacco ought to make his will and call the coroner first.

What really accounts for the ill effects of smoking, as the scientific evidence indicates, is the carbon monoxide in the smoke, or to state it precisely, the anoxia produced by inhalation of even a minute quantity of carbon monoxide. This holds true whether it be the awful sickness many youngsters suffer from their first adventure in smoking or the condition called thrombo-angitis obliterans (Buerger's disease), which is probably due to excessive cigarette smoking, although physicians have reported cases in non-smokers.

The blood of normal individuals in industrial communities contains a small amount of carbon monoxide, about 1.5% saturation, but the blood of smokers in the same community contains from 3 to 6% saturation. As a rule no noticeable symptoms of anoxia occur until carbon monoxide saturation of the blood reaches 10%, and then individuals feels tightness across the forehead, slight headache, flushing of the skin. Time for the smoking hog to quit hogging it, get out in the open air and do the B.B. exercise.

Khrushchev Confident

(Ottawa Journal)

Words have a fascination. They can do so many things in so many ways. The American says "this coffee stinks" and means precisely the same as the Englishman who says "I should rather have thought that this particular coffee. dear, was not quite as good as you sometimes make."

Or take politics. When the chief of the Communist Party rose in the Supreme Soviet meeting the other day to propose Bulganin as premier he might have been a very rude fellow indeed and said simply: "I say it's Bulganin and who says otherwise dies." But Nikita Khrushchev is a man who takes pains to do things the right way—as must be any man who spells his name with three h's. He proposed Bulganin, said a few nice words about his ability. and then, no doubt giving the assembly a brief glance, concluded the ceremony thusly:

"Permit me to express the confidence that the proposal on the confirmation of Comrade Bulganin as chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers will receive unanimous support and approval of all the duties of the Supreme Soviet Socialist Republics."

As it happened, Nikita Khrushchev's confidence was fulfilled.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

I LIKE PEOPLE TOO!

I have just read the interesting life story of a noted American editor, Executive Editor of the Toledo Blade, Toledo, Ohio. He has called his book, "I Like People." I could appropriately call this Talk, "I Like Patterson," for I have known him intimately as a good friend for a full quarter of a century and more.

There is something very interesting and enlightening about the story of any editor of a great newspaper. If he didn't like people and work in their interest at all times, he wouldn't be a successful editor very long! In a large sense the interests which he serves are those of the people who read his newspaper.

The background of an editor is very important. Grove Patterson not only has always like people, but he has liked books, art, the world at large, over which he has so extensively travelled, and he is proud to have been born an American. He has always liked contact with people and has long been a noted speaker.

His column "The Way of the World" is widely read because it has always been an intimate account of his thoughts, his travels, and his philosophy of life. For nearly half a century Grove Patterson has kept in close touch with people. They have been his inspiration. As Editor-in-Chief of the Toledo Blade he has met and known scores of other newspaper men and famous characters all over the world. His book is filled with interesting sidelights and comments on newspapers in general and on people in particular.

This is a good and valuable book for anyone to read, but especially those engaged in newspaper work. It ought to be in every Journalism school in the country. Young men and women looking forward to newspaper work can find in this book a mine of useful golden nuggets that they can immediately store away as an investment in ideas from which to draw on in future years.

Drama Festival Hailed By Players, Public As Outstanding Success

Shown above with adjudicator Andre Van Gyseghem, are David Battle, of Ottawa, and Jeanne Berthiaume, of Hull, with the trophies for best actor and best actress at the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival which concluded Saturday evening.

Battle, in his first role, won the trophy with an almost flawless performance as a stupid Irish rebel in Ottawa Little Theatre Inc. presentation of Denis Johnston's "The Moon in the Yellow River." Miss Berthiaume, a recent addition to Le Theatre du Pont Neuf, of Hull, copped the honors as best actress with a scintillating performance as a wealthy widow with a marriageable son in "L'Imbecile," Lomer Gouin's one-act fantasy which was presented in French Saturday afternoon.

An audience of 400, including most of the festival's players, applauded wildly when the decisions were announced.

Mayor Jack Both is shown presenting "Faun," the Calvert trophy awarded to winning company in Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival, to John Londerville, director of Peterborough Little Theatre's presentation of "Noah." Accompanying the trophy, especially carved for Calvert Distillers by Toronto sculptress Frances Loring in mahogany, was a cheque for $100.

Front row: David Battle, who played "Willie," a rebel, and Nancy Young, as Blanaid, Dobelle's daughter. Battle was awarded the trophy as the best actor in the festival by adjudicator Andre Van Gyseghem, on Saturday night.

Union Members Approve Terms CBC Settlement

MONTREAL (CP) — A six-man negotiating committee of the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (CIO-CCL) goes to Ottawa today with a mandate to come to final contract terms with the CBC.

Members of NABET, who earlier threatened to strike to back up wage demands, agreed during the weekend to accept a five-percent increase, retroactive to Aug. 1, and adjustment of wage ceilings, promotions and holiday work.

The agreement was reached between the CBC and union negotiators Feb. 12 but did not become final until the members had voted approval.

The union had asked for wage increases ranging from $9.50 to $84 a week for workers in different categories. CBC officials said the boost would have cost them some $1,500,000 a year.

67 P.C. APPROVE

A union official said 67.4 per cent of the total membership of 784 voted in favor of the terms reached at Ottawa.

The union spokesman said today's meetings ar eto redraft the contract. He said they probably will continue for three or four days.

The union negotiating committee is headed by Tim O'Sullivan of Toronto, NABET international representative, and E. F. Ward, vice-president of the union's Canadian section. Other members are Dave Tasker of Toronto, Yvon de Champlain, Quebec, Marcel Deschamps, Montreal, and Eugene Lajoie, Ottawa.

Michael Meiklejohn (left), chairman of the Eastern Ontario Drama League, is shown presenting Charles Southgate, president of the Canadian Repertory Theatre in Ottawa for five and one-half years, with the Canadian Drama Award "for conspicuous contribution to Canadian theatre."

Mr. Southgate was described as "the man most responsible for rescuing Canada from the abysmal position of being the only civilized capital in the world without live theatre."

One Man Killed Two Injured In Head-on Crash

DUNDAS, Ont. (CP)—One man was killed and two others injured Saturday in a head-on, two-car collision on the highway near here.

Police said Renhold Gunther, 44, of Brantford, driver of one of the cars, was dead when they arrived at the scene of the accident on Highway 5 at the Sydenham sideroad, seven miles west of Hamilton.

David Robertson, 18, of Toronto, identified as the driver of the other car, and Charles Cummings, 18, of Toronto, a passenger, suffered cuts and bruises.

Mr. Gunther was vice-president and general manager of the E. and A. Gunther Company Ltd., Brantford.

Peterborough's Little Theatre Wins Calvert Trophy for Best Play in Drama Festival

Peterborough Little Theatre's presentation of Andre Obey's "Noah" was judged best of four three-act plays staged here last week in the Eastern Ontario Regional Drama Festival. About 400 persons were present for the final adjudication.

Adjudicator Andre Van Gyseghem, British actor, director, producer, chose "Noah" Saturday night at the festival's closing, "because in acting, production and realization of the author's intention, it got nearest the spirit of the play."

Belleville's Mayor Jack Both presented the Calvert trophy and a cheque for $100 to John Londerville, director of the winning play.

OTTAWA ACTOR WINS

Other awards went to David Battle, of Ottawa, as best male actor; Jeanne Berthiaume, of Hull, as the best actress; the Rupert Davies Trophy for the best one-act play and its interpretation to Montreal Lomer Gouin's play "L'Imbecile", presented by Le Theatre du Pont Neuf of Hull; and the Fulford Shield for the best production of a Canadian one-act play to Ottawa Little Theatre Workshop for their production of Norman Newton's "The Rehearsal."

Battle, who played a minor role as a stupid, but loveable Irish rebel in "The Moon in the Yellow River", Ottawa Little Theatre Inc. entry, was described by the adjudicator as "a darling broth of a boy."

"Everything he did helped the character," said Mr. Van Gyseghem. "He showed a great instinct for the part. He was warm, human and likeable. His was the best performance in the play."

HONORABLE MENTION MADE

Actors receiving honorable mention "for work deserving of recognition," were Ted Schwab, who played the role of the director in Belleville Theatre Guild's "Joan of Lorraine"; James Turnbull, of Peterborough, who played "Noah"; and Jack Livesley, of Ottawa Little Theatre Workshop, who played an egocentric playwright in "The Rehearsal."

Jeanne Berthiaume won best actress honors with a sparkling performance as a wealthy widow trying to marry off her son in "L'Imbecile", a one-act fantasy presented by Le Theatre Du Pont Neuf.

Others given honorable mention for best actress honors were: Jean Leach of Peterborough, who played "Ada", wife of one of Noah's sons; and Moira Dunbar, as "Agnes" a domineering Irish servant in Ottawa Little Theatre's "The Moon in the Yellow River."

"L'Imbecile", by Montreal playwright Lomer Gouin, was chosen as the best one-act Canadian play.

"The Rehearsal," by Toronto's Norman Newton, was described by Mr. Van Gyseghem as "a university undergraduate's idea of a joke" as a play. However, Ottawa Little Theatre Workshop production was adjudged best presentation of a Canadian one-act play, "despite the ghastly vehicle presented by the author."

The festival, which opened Tuesday, Feb. 15th., closed Saturday with a matinee of three one-act Canadian plays and Le Theatre du Pont Neuf's three-act presentation in French, of "Malbrough S'En Va T'En Guerre", Saturday evening.

About 600 persons attended the Saturday matinee.

COMEDY LABORED

"The Rehearsal", take-off on amateur theatricals, was described by Mr. Van Gyseghem as "full of literary cliches and epigrams that went over your head and mine. The production and acting were good but the comedy was labored. I think T. S. Eliot, played straight is funnier than this play."

"The director did an excellent job. There was good pace and evidence of much original thinking in the production. However, if this play won the Ottawa competition I would long to see the others," said Mr. Van Gyseghem in blasting the author for saddling the players with a "university undergraduate's idea of a joke."

Anthony Tyler as "Woodby", a theatrical angel and aspiring playwright, "had a light touch, was relaxed and handled his comedy well. He should have been older and more conservative, however," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

Velba Tanguay, as Mrs. Woodby was "very fresh and very lovely", although "she should have been more middle-aged."

Joyce Taylor as "Monumenta", a tart who turns missionary, had "the right style of playing and knew always what she was doing.

Jack Livesley, as "Penworthy," an egotistical playwright, had "a good voice and played his part well."

"I was impressed by the team in this play but I had hoped for a better play," said Mr. Van Gyseghem. He also stated that because he did not receive "10 pages of the script, I am tempted not to adjudicate this play at all."

"l'Imbecile", by Le Theatre du Pont Neuf, is the story of a rug merchant whose daughter loves a pirate, and of a wealthy widow who wishes her son to marry the rug merchant's daughter.

CHARMING PRESENTATION

"The presentation was charming and in good taste," said Mr. Van Gyseghem. "The decor was delightful, but the play needed more movement."

Jeanne Berthiaume, as the scheming widow, "gave a splendid performance," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

"She was volatile and a proper schemer. Her comedy was well played."

Yvon Dufour, as "Khalabar," the rug merchant, "had a strong voice and played well."

Pierre Dufresne, as "Triboulet", the marriageable young man, "gave a simple, charming verity to his role that gave the play some basis of reality," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

"Two Sides to a Tortoise," a Belleville Theatre Guild's one-act play, was described by the adjudicator as "quite a piece of melodrama in which the author has a poor view of women."

It is the story of a rebellious young man whose plan to escape from his self-righteous mother by robbing a service station and going to Mexico with the loot, goes awry when his mother turns him in.

"The playwright had no feeling for dialogue," said Mr. Van Gyseghem. "It was an attempt to photograph a portion of these people's lives. It should have been a selection of significant events."

He criticized the mother, played by Elsie Punchard, as being "quite unreal. The author made her pompous and untrue and gave her the kind of dialogue that doesn't help to create a feeling of truth and reality. She couldn't have succeeded," he said.

"The performance was slow and floppy. It could have used some strong direction."

LITTLE TOO DIFFICULT

"Malbrough S'En Va T'En Guerre," Saturday night's play by Le Theatre du Pont Neuf, is the story of Malbrough, who extorts money from his wife's father so that he can buy his way into the Queen's army as a general and thereby gain her favor.

Malbrough's wife, in love with her page, Howard, raises the money when Malbrough threatens to take him to war and have him killed. Malbrough loses his life because of his inability to command and the battle is won only because Howard takes command. Howard dramatizes Malbrough's death to his widow who decides, after all, that she really loved her husband all along.

"There is nothing of realism in the play. It needs light, stylized playing," said Mr. Van Gyseghem. "This company has talent but I think they chose a play a little too difficult for them."

"The production needed to use the stage more. Gestures should have been more stylized. Music should have been used more for entrances and exits. The pace was a little slow because the company played too heavily."

"I liked the play. The decor was charming. It had the feeling of the play."

Chief criticism of all players was that they took their roles a little too seriously.

"They should have tripped about throwing away their comedy lines with abandon," said the adjudicator.

He had praise for Yvon Dufour, as Malbrough; Monique Champagne as the queen, and Nicole Fontaine, as "Mettina," a maid who "was charming, light and supple."

Marcel Cossais, as Howard, lacked the lyricism and poetry demanded by the role but sang charmingly," said Mr. Van Gyseghem.

CHAIRMAN PRESIDES

Mr. Van Gyseghem, before announcing his decisions, said, "I liked the choice of plays at this festival. They were varied, interesting and good theatre. There has been a lot of individual talent shown here."

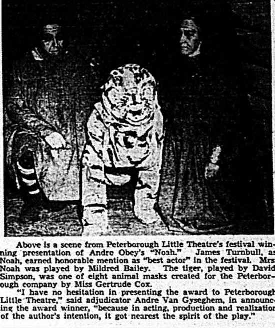
"Some of the plays were a little too difficult for the companies but it is good practice for actors to attempt difficult plays."

"The greatest need of Canadian theatre as I have seen it adjudicating regional festivals is for imaginative directors. You must also develop directors."

"Amateur companies need their own theatre," he continued. "Dig up any old building and then get the rich people in your community to subsidize the theatre since you can't get your government to do it. Have the merchants donate materials for building repairs, sets, costume and make-up. With your own theatre your work will develop wonderfully."

F. C. "Court" Miller, chairman of the Belleville festival committee presented Mr. Van Gyreghem with a gift for "the completely satisfactory way in which you adjudicated this festival."

Present on stage for the awarding of trophies, were Mr. Miller, Miss Therese May, Ottawa, vice chairman of the EODL French section; Richard MacDonald, Ottawa, executive director of the Dominion Drama Festival; Belleville's Mayor Jack Both; Michael Meiklejohn, chairman of the EODL; Mr. Van Gyseghem, and Stuart Robb, of Belleville, vice-chairman of the festival committee.



Above is a scene from Peterborough Little Theatre's festival winning presentation of Andre Obey's "Noah." James Turnbull, as Noah, earned honorable mention as "best actor" in the festival. Mrs. Noah was played by Mildred Bailey. The tiger, played by David Simpson, was one of eight animal masks created for the Peterborough company by Miss Gertrude Cox.

"I have no hesitation in presenting the award to Peterborough Little Theatre," said adjudicator Andre Van Gyseghem, in announcing the award winner, "because in acting, production and realization of the author's intention, it got nearest the spirit of the play."

Convicted of Murder

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawrence Vincent, 28-year-old carnival worker, was convicted of murder Saturday in his third Supreme Court trial for the shoelace strangling of 12year-old Donna Lee Corbett.

Chief Justice Wendell B. Farris sentenced him to be hanged May 3. It was his second death sentence.

The girl was found dead on a lonely logging road three miles from Quesnel, B.C. Sept. 12, 1953, after she had been missing six days. Vincent was convicted of the slaying last June and was sentenced to be hanged. He won a new trial on the ground the jury had been misdirected. The second trial at New Westminster last month ended with the jury in disagreement.

Centring the cast of "L'Imbecile," a one-act fantasy presented Saturday afternoon, is Jeanne Berthiaume, whose portrayal of a wealthy widow with a marriageable son, earned her the award as the festival's best atcress. The play also took the Rupert Davies trophy for the best Canadian one-act play and its interpretation.

Messrs. Belleau and Dufour and Dufresne also took leading roles in "Malbrough S'En Va T'En Guerre," Le Theatre du Pont Neuf's three-act presentation Saturday evening.

Holding the Fulford Shield, emblematic of the best production of a one-act play by a Canadian playwright is Velba Tanguay, a member of the cast of "The Rehearsal," presented Saturday afternoon by Ottawa Little Theatre Workshop.

The play was described by adjudicator Andre Van Gyseghem as "a university undergraduate's idea of a joke," but he awarded the trophy for "excellent production," despite the author's faults.

Shown in the picture: Back row (left to right) Conrad Wright, Roy Waters, Frank Thurston, director, and Jack Livesley, who earned "honorable mention" as the best actor in the festival for his performance as an egotistical playwright.

GIRL GUIDE, BROWNIE NEWS

At the February meeting of the Belleville Guiders' Association, held at the home of Mrs. R. D. Arnott, District Commissioner, six Guiders were presented with their warrants. Mrs. P. J. Cleary, Mrs. G. Watkin and Mrs. R. Pringle were warranted as Brown Owls; Mrs. L. Jourard as a Tawny Owl; Miss Beverley Faulkner as a Lieutenant and Mrs. W. L. Horwood as a Captain.

February 22nd is "Thinking Day" for Guides and Brownies throughout the world. This is the joint birthdays of the founder, Lord Baden-Powell of Gillwell and of Lady Baden-Powell, World Chief Guide. The purpose of this day is to promote international friendship and a special "Thinking Day" service is to be held on Sunday, February 20th, in Christ Church Parish Hall. Mrs. D. G. Diamantides will be the special speaker on this occasion.

1ST BELLEVILLE GUIDE COMPANY — Capt. Gerow.

On January 24th Brown Owl Adams and Brown Owl Moult conducted a Flying Up Ceremony for Patricia Colden and Nancy VanTassel who flew up to Company 1. Catherine Jantisch, Kathleen Brooks, Keltie Burr, Beverley Richards, Margaret Alyea and Judith Yanover were also enrolled the same evening. Gweth Cathers, Doris Norridge and Judy Linton were hostesses for the evening and were tested for their Hostess Badge by Mrs. McArthur.

Karrie Lee Meagher and Pat Olsen have passed their Laundress Badge and a Skaters Badge was won by Linda Kells.

Dolls have been distributed to each patrol to be dressed and will be judged by the Guiders' Association in March, and will then be turned over to Mrs. Branscombe for the Grenfell Mission bale.

2ND BELLEVILLE GUIDE COMPANY — Capt. Burch.

Company 2 has had another change in leadership and they are pleased to welcome Mrs. T. Burch as Captain.

On January 24th, the Guides of Company 2 were guests at the "Flying Up Ceremony" held by Company 1, when Joan Youdell and Gloria Royle were presented with their Wings by Brown Owl Adams, and then escorted by their Patrol Leaders to Captain Gerow to be enrolled.

Child Nurse Badges were presented to Beverley Burch, Ruth Worsley, Joy Butler and Wendy Burch this month and Service Stars, denoting attendance at 75 per cent of the meeting for the year, were presented to Louise Fisher 2nd Year Star, and Nancy Keene and Elaine Jenkins 1st Year Stars.

5TH BELLEVILLE GUIDE COMPANY — Capt. Horwood

On January 26th, Company 5 held their second enrollment when nine more girls were welcomed into the Company. Captain Samuels of Company 7 was in charge of the Enrollment Ceremony and Brown Owl Adams of Pack 5 arranged a charming Flying Up Ceremony when Helen Addy, Joanne Cherrie, Carol Kellar, Marsha Lidster, Gail Tremaine and Suzanne Belair were presented with their Brownie Wings. Marilyn Wallbridge, Linda Edgar and June Horn were also enrolled at this time.

After the ceremony, the Guides and Brownies enjoyed cookies and "Coke", while their mothers and honored guests were served tea. Barbara Payne and Donna Belanger, company leaders, presided at the tea table which was decorated in the Guide colors of blue and gold.

During the past month 2 Year Service Stars were won by Jeanne Belair and Donna Belanger and a 1st Year Service Star by Patsy Mulholland.

7TH BELLEVILLE GUIDE COMPANY — Capt. Samuels

Company 7 has had a busy season thus far with the following Guides already enrolled; Gloria Austin, Margaret Davies, Carol Easton, Lynne Fuzzen, Linda Lennox and Shirley Stubbert and Gael Cox "flew up" and received her Brownie Wings.

Joanne Whaites, Vanetta Valyear and Patty Jenkinson have completed their Second Class badge work and the following proficiency badges have been completed: Hostess Badge, Beth Clarke, Joan Colwill, Arlene Cox, Patty Jenkinson, Roberta McDonald, Vanetta Valyear, Joanne Whaites; Health Badge, Arlene Cox, who also passed her Religious and Life Emblem; Dancer, Patty Jenkinson; Child Nurse, Lunda Bush, Joan Colwill, Arlene Cox, Roberta McDonald, Joanne Whaites; Homemaker, Beverley Samuels.

Company 7 is happy to welcome Mrs. Low, a Lieutenant from Peterborough, to their Company.

At their hostess party, Captain Stewart of the Salvation Army showed her film on the Royal Guides. The Guides enjoyed a recent skating party on Clarkes' outdoor rink and wish to express their appreciation at this time.

5TH BELLEVILLE BROWNIE PACK — Brown Owl Adams

All the Brownies of this Pack are now in uniform. Enrolled at the last ceremony were Mary Beth Follwell, Judith Ann Jones, Mary Dawkins, Kathy Cook, Elizabeth Randall, Diane Alexander, Frances Potter and Susan Overend.

Two proficiency badges have been awarded, a Minstrels Badge to Rosemary Tanner and a Collectors Badge to Wendy Baldwin.

6TH BELLEVILLE BROWNIE PACK — Brown Owl Cleary

This Pack has had another enrollment at which time Jo-Anne Bowers, Beverley Bruyea, Elizabeth Bruyea, Rosemary Deryaw, Rosemary Faubert, Ann-Marie Murphy, Nancy Pigden and Lola Scully were enrolled as Brownies. The Commissioner, Mrs. R. D. Arnott, Mrs. Baker, representing the C.W.L. who sponsor this Pack and the mothers of the new Brownies were treated to tea and cookies by the Brownies. Tawny Owl Gist poured and the tea was prepared by Mrs. C. F. Burley.

9TH BELLEVILLE BROWNIE PACK — Brown Owl Maund

Nine Golden Bars were won in January by Brownies in this Pack and have been presented to Margaret Olsen, Gail Painter, Gail Kelly, Gail Shannon, Patricia Fahey, Lynn Meagher, Dianne Ford, Jacqueline Sharland and Valerie Smith. Nine Service Stars were presented in February and one Brownie, Judy Huffman, was enrolled.

Holy Rosary Has Parish Night

On Wednesday evening neither snow flurries nor frosty winter weather kept the parishioners of Holy Rosary Parish from attending their first annual parish night when the Holy Name Society and the Catholic Women's League were co-hosts to a capacity crowd.

Father Michael Simson, pastor and Mrs. A. Eves, president of the C.W.L. were on hand at the door with a hearty word of welcome for all.

Father Cletus Fitzpatrick was also in attendance.

The first part of the evening was spent in playing cards with Mrs. S. Haley in charge.

Prize winners were: ladies, 1st Mrs. M. Hogan; 2nd Mrs. Lang; consolation, Mrs. M. Walsh; Lone Hands, Mrs. E. Schrieder; Men's 1st M. Hogan; 2nd, F. Daley; Lone Hands, M. Hogan; consolation, D. Huffman.

Following the cards, community singing was led by Father Michael, accompanied by the McAvoy Orchestra. Dancing followed with all taking part in the square and round dancing.

Spot prizes were won by Miss Arlene Glenn, Larry Baker; L. Nash and partner.

During the intermission refreshments were served by the hostesses of the evening and John D. Beaton entertained with tap dancing after which dancing continued until 1.00 a.m.

Women's Institute

PINE GROVE W. I.

Pine Grove Women's Institute held its regular monthly meeting at Mrs. A. Tanner's home Wednesday, with a good attendance of members.

The Canadian Association of Consumers' bulletins for January and February were distributed, also copies of the "Home and Country." It was decided to donate $5 to the Canadian Mental Health Association, rather than using the 'Penny Round-up bags.'

A committee ws named to look after serving at the Belleville Livestock Sales' Barn in March. A social evening, proceeds from which will be used for "The March of Dimes," is to be held in Marsh Hill school on Friday, March 4, with Mrs. J. Campbell, Mrs. H. Detlor and Mrs. G. Bartindale in charge.

Mrs. L. Finkle thanked the ladies for the book which Marilyn had received from the Women's Institute, and for the radio which was rented for her use while in hospital. Mrs. G. Bartindale acted as convener for the program.

SUGGESTIONS MADE

Mrs. A. Finkle gave a summary of the Provincial President's report for 1954. In this a few suggestions for continued branch growth were given: "Do pass on whenever possible the good things you have learned from experience; do not ask too much financial help from your members; do your best whatever your assignment may be. If we feel we must criticize it should be done at the meeting, not after. Join the Institute with the thought in mind that you will contribute to your organization something of value. Always keep in mind that you cannot do without your Women's Institute and that it cannot get long without you. Every member of every branch is an important member, and lastly when a member of your branch has done something well, tell her so."

Mrs. A. Tanner reported on the short course on "Home Crafts" which she had attended in Guelph early in January. In a class of seven, three were chosen to make gloves and the rest moccasins. Mrs. Tanner explained the way to make a moccasin pattern, and showed the pair which she had made. Block printing and needlepoint were also studied. Demonstrations in wood carving and ceramics were given.

Mrs. G. Bartindale also attended a short course at Guelph, choosing the subject, "Family Living." There were twelve registered for this course. Members were asked why they had decided to take this course, and what qualities they would look for in a person they would want for a friend.

THREE BASIC NEEDS

Psychology is a study of both body and mind: how the mind responds to environment, and how this influences the body. Everyone has three basic needs, food, sleep and love, or security. Family love should not be possessive or the "orange squeezer" kind, nor should it be over-protective. It should be an all-around love, not dependent on behavior. It should be accepting, dependable. Children need a feeling of achievement, praise and approval from others. "Why are we all different from each other? Our apeparance is inherited but many factors can affect it, ex. malnutrition, exercise, disease, climate, and environment." Many other phases of family living were also discussed.

During the week of the short courses evening entertainment included the Leslie Bell Singers, the college choir, and an amateur night. Both members were most enthusiastic and considered their time well spent.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served and a social half-hour enjoyed.

The next meeting on "Education," under the convenership of Mrs. L. Finkle will be held at Mrs. W. Slater's home on Wednesday, March 16, in the afternoon.

ELDORADO - BANNOCKBURN W. I.

ELDORADO — The Eldorado and Bannockburn Women's Institute held its February meeting at the home of Mrs. William Irwin with a good attendance. The treasurer's report was given and business was dealt with. A donation had been given Eddie Sutizer, who was recently burned out, also a donation of garments made to the hospital.

The program convener, Mrs. Nicholson, took charge of the theme, "Education . . Young Canadians". School health is the important aim, and an equal chance, and the need of good, equipped schools. She also stressed the point of good educational reading and how one should give his best support to education.

A reading by Mrs. Palmer on "Tamrack School Teachers," a reading by Mrs. Nicholson, "A Touch of the Master's Hand."

Mrs. Webster gave a demonstration on hair dressing.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Catholic Women Hold Meeting

The Catholic Women's League meeting was held in Holy Rosary Hall Friday with Mrs. Eves in the chair and 20 members present.

Father Michael said the League prayer after which he spoke briefly on the League's Communion Sunday. The secretary's report was read and correspondence was dealt with. Mrs. Brown reported on radio and television and asked all to watch for programs which are good and a report would be made on them to the sponsors.

Mrs. Hogan advised one family was given social welfare.

grams which are not good and regional meeting in Frankford on Sunday, Feb. 27, was read. Final plans for the St. Patrick's tea were made, the quilt being completed and tickets on sale from members.

Plans to cater to a summer wedding were made and also a spaghetti supper after the Lenten season.

The draw was won by Mrs. D. Eves. Mrs. Eves said the closing prayer and the meeting adjourned.

Pr. Ed., Belleville W.C. Elects 1955 Officers

The Prince Edward-Belleville Women's Club held its annual meeting at the YMCA with a good attendance and every officer in her chair.

Expressing her appreciation of the excellent co-operation given her as president, Mrs. Wannamaker, presided for the opening. Excellent yearly reports were given by the secretary, Mrs. P. Parliament, and treasurer, Mrs. Detlor. Mrs. McCoy reported for cards and flowers sent.

Mrs. F. Lent conducted the election of officers with results as follows: Hon. President, Mrs. F. Lent; president, Mrs. L. Wannamaker; 1st vice-president, Mrs. G. Gorsline; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. T. Skeggs; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. W. Barber; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. McCoy; recording secretary, Mrs. Percy Parliament, treasurer, Mrs. Detlor; pianist, Miss C. Anderson; assistant pianists, Mrs. La Rue and Mrs. Lent; press reporter, Mrs. M. B. Weese.

Group leaders and co-conveners, Mrs. J. Garbutt and Mrs. Montgomery; Miss C. Anderson and Mrs. R. Fox; Mrs. D. Moxam and Mrs. H. Cunningham; Mrs. F. Bedell and Mrs. L. Sharpe; Mrs. Myrtle Williams and Mrs. J. Shortt.

After community singing and paying of dues—Mrs. S. Anderson and Mrs. Shortt's group put on a short program.

Mrs. N. Montgomery gave a reading "The Journey of Life", and Mrs. S. Anderson, a history of the club from its origin, telling of the various organizations to which assistance had been given, and of the work done up to 1947.

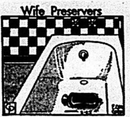
After this free will contributions had been given to many worthy causes—the most outstanding being the furnishing of a room in the Quinte-St. Lawrence Institute for the Blind, in Kingston. Plans had already been made for a trip by bus to Kingston early in the spring, with Mrs. Baird making arrangements.

The next meeting will be on March 9, at 2.30 p.m., in the assembly room of YMCA, featuring a lecture on "Preparing and Cooking Foods for Health and Economy" and a dinner at the close of a short meeting.

Mrs. Anderson's group served refreshments with a large birthday cake, candles in green and red—emblems of 12 years of growth and good fellowship.

Lovely spring flowers were donated by Mrs. Barber.

Wife Preservers



Fill the hot water bottle half full of tepid water and put it on the bottom of the bathub when your young child is being bathed. It keeps him from skidding around and makes a nice, soft, warm seat.

Women's Activities

HOLLOWAY ST. W.A.

The Afternoon and Evening groups of the Holloway Street United Church W.A. met in the church parlors Thursday evening for their February meeting with the president, Mrs. G. Dobbs, in the chair.

Mrs. Dobbs extended a gracious welcome. Meeting opened with a devotional by the president basing her thoughts on the 22 verse of the Book of James: "Be ye doers of the word and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves."

"Jesus teaches that the Christian way of life is service to others even to the point of sacrifice. The question for each of us to ask is, Am I using my gifts to strenghen the life of my church? God has given to every one some gift that can be used in the Master's service. Grant that we may love and serve without counting the cost, by using our wisdom, courage and talents in this service.

The business period consisted of the minutes of previous meeting, treasurer's report and appointing of a nominating committee, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Welburn and Mrs. Ferguson. Mrs. Scott reported on flowers sent out and Mrs. Alyea on get-well cards. Mrs. Oliphant and Mrs. Smith are the kitchen conveners for the year 1955.

Mrs. Outindyke's group will have charge of the March meeting and the April meeting will be held jointly with the W.M.S.

The president hoped the society could have as its project this year drapes for the Sunday school room and modern folding doors.

Mrs. Knight, president of the Evening group, took charge of the program. Mrs. Joblin and Mrs. Dickens led in the meditation. The subject being "Paths of Peace". "To give light to them that sat in darkness Christ prepared a high way for us. Do we realize what it cost our Blessed Lord to prepare the way for us? The Christian life should be a way of pleasantness and peace."

Mrs. Knight conducted two humorous contests which everyone enjoyed. She invited all to the Sunday school rooms to see a colored film "Family Outing".

The Evening group served refreshments.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

MOTHER SHOULDN'T "HORN IN" ON DAUGHTER'S DATES

A few weeks ago, you may have seen in this column a letter from a mother who was upset because her daughter objected to having her stay in the room all evening when she was entertaining her boy friend.

Wrote the mother:

"My daughter, who is 19 years old, has a boy friend who comes to the house to see her every night, and they don't like it because I won't go away and leave them alone in the room. I know that if I do go away, they will sit and kiss each other, and I won't stand for that, so I stay right there. She gets very angry and says I don't trust her."

Now a very understanding young married woman writes to defend the daughter's point of view.

This young woman thinks the mother who wrote the quoted letter "may have the best intentions in the world, but is being overly self-righteous. She says she trusts her daughter, but do you really think she shows any trust in her when she says 'If I go away, they ill sit and kiss each other'?"

She then goes on to express the following opinions:

"Now probably if the couple is left alone, they will kiss at some time during the evening, but that isn't necessarily disastrous. It's been my experience that a young couple like this are much more likely to spend most of their time talking, something they certainly aren't going to do too happily with Mama sitting there like a watchful gargoyle. Can't parents (I'm a parent myself, so don't think this is a teen-age gripe) realize that the gay jabbering of young people dies a quick death in the presence of adults?

"Boys and girls in their teens and early twenties are so often just a little self-conscious in conversation, and a listening adult only serves to heighten the discomfort. These poor kids probably wish they could discuss with ease and privacy the latest records, sports and bits of news about their friends, and unless they're unusually poised, they aren't likely to do that in front of a chaperone."

Then she mentions her own mother who "insists on doing the entertaining whenever anyone comes to the house, and just takes over completely with my friends." This young woman's parents live in her home, and she describes them as "grand people, still quite young and with a young point of view, but," she says, "how I wish I could occasionally have my friends to myself!" Her friends like her mother, and get along well with her, "except that they do wish she wasn't always so much there!"

She goes on to voice the earnest hope "that the mother who wrote you will come to realize that anyone of any age has a real need for privacy. Her chaperoning, as you told her, will only drive her daughter away from her, both physically and emotionally. Certainly if all this young couple was interested in was petting, they wouldn't be seeing each other at home all the time. That, in itself, I should think, would lead her to trust them. No boy who is interested solely in a physical relationship is going to waste his time sitting in a girl's home with her mother present. He wouldn't even come back the second time!"

In conclusion, she adds: "I just hope that in ten years or so my daughter will have no reason to write to you about her problem mother. At leat I think I'll know how to retire gracefully when she's entertaining."

What this young mother says seems to me such sound sense that I wanted to pass it on to any mothers of teen-agers who may read this column, hoping that it may lead them to think twice before ruining their young people's dates. If a mother is the right sort of person herself, and has, through the years, established the right sort of relationship with her daughter, the chances are very slim that the daughter will ever give her cause for worry.

Tomorrow Is Pancake Tuesday

By Mary Moore

While I was not asleep at the switch nevertheless I'm glad Elsie jogged my elbow with this letter: "Dear Mary: Here I am again, requiring some help. Last year about this time you gave a recipe for Superior Pancakes which really were super! My husband ate them. I clipped the recipe but have misplaced it. Would you send another copy?—Elsie."

I'm not fond of repeating a recipe for an annual occasion but I have not succeeded so far in topping this recipe for pancakes that Elsie likes so well. So I will give to to you again for Pancake Tuesday 1955.

SUPERIOR PANCAKES

Note: If you have a wide-mouthed pitcher into which your rotary beater will fit do your mixing in it, for it facilitates pouring when baking these on the griddle. One and one-half cups unsifted all-purpose flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg, 1 1-4 cups milk, 3 tablespoons soft butter or margarine, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. Sift dry ingredients together. Beat egg (in pitcher or bowl), add milk and butter and stir to mix, then add dry ingredients and beat until smooth. Add vanilla. Drop by spoonfuls or pour from pitcher onto preheated but ungreased griddle. Bake on one side until puffed and full of bubbles. Flip over and bake on other side. This amount should serve four people —but who knows—your family may eat like mine, if so, you get 2 pancakes; your other two giants get all the rest. Don't spare the butter and maple syrup on these if you want to be remembered for them come next Pancake Tuesday.

Dear Mary: I wonder if you could come to my aid. I receive magazines and recipes from England (I came here eight years ago). Unfortunately all of the ingredients are written in pounds and ounces. I wonder if you have ever compiled the equivalent in cups and spoons. There must be many English girls like myself who would like to try out old favorite recipes but have the same trouble with measurements. One recipe in particular I would love to taste again is Treacle Tarts (pie over here). It calls for 1-2 lb. treacle (corn syrup), 1-2 oz. butter, 2 oz. breadcrumbs and 1 lemon. I just cannot guess the equivalent of 1-2 lb. corn syrup. I have an old English recipe book printed in 1906. It contains 1,000 recipes (from soup to nuts). I made your gingerbread muffins for Hallowe'en and after tasting them felt sure the recipe should have included sugar or other sweetening. I would be very grateful if you could solve the above problem.—M. B. E.Y.

ANSWER:

One-half lb corn syrup measures 3-4 cup less 1 tablespoon; 1-2 oz. butter measures 1 tablespoon (level measuring tablespoon measure); 2 oz. breadcrumbs measure 1-2 cup plus 1 tablespoon. There is no royal road to the solution to your problem, but we can accomplish it on the common pedestrian level. Mail to me the recipes you would like transposed from weight measure to volume measure and I will weigh them on my scales; or buy a small household scale for yourself; or make a good friend of your grocer or druggist and weigh them up on his scales.

In the copy that I sent out to the newspaper with the recipe for gingerbread muffins it calls for 1 cup molasses as the sweetening. Was this not in your newspaper? If not add 1 cup molasses to your recipe. If you would like it sweeter than that much molasses makes it add 1-4 cup white sugar to the dry ingredients.

Women's Activities

MASSASSAGA W.A.

Mrs. A. Revill kindly opened her home for the February meeting of the Massassaga W.A. with the president Mrs. George McKillop, presiding.

Nineteen members answered roll call. Two visitors were present and seven children.

After the general business, the group leader for February, Mrs. A. Revill took charge of the program and opened the devotional period by reading "The Friend". "Truly I say to you as you did it to one of the least of these My brethren, you did it to Me."

Mrs. George Flower read the Scripture, Luke 10:30-37. Mrs. Revill read the lesson "Thoughts on Friendship". She also gave the first quarter of "The Statement of Faith."

Four ladies presented a skit Mrs. McKillop acting the part of Mrs. Local W.A., Mrs. Revill was Mrs. Newcomer; Mrs. Davidson was Mrs. Presbytery and Mrs. Hillman was Mrs. Dominion Council Conference.

Mrs. Hillman gave a reading, "The Trapper's Door." Mrs. M. McCulloch delighted the children with a story about "Bunnies".

Mrs. Revill gave a reading, "Religion and Life," by W. A. Young.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her group, followed by a social half hour.

Beauty

By HELEN JAMIESON

COLD, MOIST AIR TONES THE SKIN

When the weather is bad do you say "Rain, rain, go away; come again some other day?" If so, you are a softie and a sissy. Also you are missing an opportunity to give your complexion an excellent treatment. Be a rainy-daisy and save on the cosmetic budget. What's a little bad weather in the great and glorious cause of pulchritude?

If you are a gad-about you may have discovered that when you are in a dry climate your skin suffers as a result. Desquamation, that natural fluffing away of dead scales, speeds up. The cutaneous surface becomes rough; powder won't stick.

In great Britain where fogs are an institution, like Buckingham Palace and its guards, most women have beautiful complexions. Texture is fine, coloring delicate and lovely.

It's fun to walk in the rain or snow. So why not try it—for the sake of your muscles, your complexion, your lungs and your spirits.

No sauntering. The idea is to get yourself steamed up, to go at a brisk clip. At first a mile may seem like a long drag, especially if you are keen about transportation. But, after a while, it will seem like a breeze.

Posture must be precisely right, when walking. Up with the chest, in and up with the tummy, head balanced, arms swinging easily. Space your breathing to your steps. So many steps to a deep inhalation, so many as you release the stagnant air from your lungs.

Back from your good looks pilgrimage, have an alternating hot and cold shower, followed by a brisk rubdown, then a little creamy attention to your complexion.

WHEN BRIDE'S MOTHER IS ESCORTED UP THE AISLE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A very dear friend of mine, a professional singer, is to sing a solo at my wedding. Should my mother go up the aisle with the usher before the soloist has sung or afterward, just before the processional is about to enter?

— Wondering Bride-to-be

Your mother is escorted up the aisle immediately before the processional.

WHEN REGRETTING A FORMAL INVITATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one "regrets" a formal invitation, is it absolutely necessary to give a reason or excuse for regretting the invitation? — F.L.

Today's custom tends toward omitting the reason for regretting a formal invitation. But, although not now generally considered 'necessary' it is of course always proper and gracious to write one of the standard reasons (or 'excuses') . . . "regrets that owing to their absence from town . . ." or "regrets that owing to a previous engagement. . ."

REGISTERED NURSES WANT TO APPLY FOR FACTORY POSITIONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are two nurses, Registered Nurses, and we would like to make an application for positions as nurses in a factory. Will you please tell us how to make this application? — S.R.

If you have a particular factory in mind (as I think you may have), I suggest you go to or telephone to the factory and ask for an interview (or for an appointment for an interview) with the Personnel Director or whoever has charge of interviewing applicants. Or you could write requesting an appointment or requesting an application blank for you to fill out, stating your qulifications and experience. Or if you are interested in finding a position in industrial nursing in general, not in a particular factory, you might register in an agency that specializes in placement in these positions. Or inquire from the hospital from which you were graduated as to the possibility of obtaining such a position through their recommendation.

SHOULD THEY WEAR HATS?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

At my niece's wedding reception, at her home in the afternoon after the ceremony, I have been asked to pour the coffee, and my daughter has been asked to serve the punch. Of course we will both wear hats at the church service, but should we also wear our hats as we serve during the reception? — S.

Yes, you should both wear your hats during the reception.

WHEN MAN IS INTRODUCED TO ANOTHER MAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I know that of course a man rises when he is introduced to a woman. My cousin says that he also should rise when he is introduced to another man. True or false? — L.

True.

Laurel Lodge Sponsors Euchre, Bridge

STIRLING — Despite road conditions and inclement weather on Wednesday evening Laurel Rebekah Lodge, No. 211, Stirling, held a successful euchre and bridge in the community hall.

Guests were present from Eldorado, Ivanhoe, Springbrook, Belleville, Foxboro and surrounding district. There were twenty-six tables in play.

Noble Grand Mrs. Mabel Barlow and her committee were busy with preparations. Various lodge members donated the prizes while lunch convener, Mrs. Kathleen Jones and her group served delectable refreshments.

The prizes were awarded:

For euchre—Ladies, Mrs. Irene Pollock and Mrs. Mildred Wilson; men, Joe Grills and Russell Pyear.

For Bridge—Ladies, Mrs. John L. Good and Mrs. Joe Whitehead; men, Don Rikely, Charles Barnard. Door prize, Don Heath.

Stearn Reality Keynotes Defence Of Alaska Today

By ELTON C. FAY

ELMENDORF AIR FORCE BASE, Alaska (AP)—Stern reality keynotes the defence of Alaska today.

Jet fighters take off to investigate any plane not instantly identifiable. Anti-aircraft batteries ring air and army bases. Garrisons of army troops are deployed to grapple with airborne invaders.

Lt.-Gen. Joseph Atkinson, United States commander - in - chief in Alaska, lists among things still needed an expanded aircraft warning system and improved anti-aircraft defences. More forward fighter strips will be built, he says. They are needed to extend the reach of jet interceptors operating from main bases such as Elmendorf, Ladd and Eilseson—which are about 550 to 700 miles from Siberia.

Maj.-Gen. James Collins, army commander, believes he has enough troops in Alaska to get started in the first phase of a defence operation. The nearest large strategic reserve of troops in the U. S. is about nine hours away by air. How rapidly they could be flown to Alaska would depend on several factors, including weather.

Available information indicates the defence organization of Alaska at this time is:

Air—Two air divisions, each with three squadrons (25 planes to a squadron) of jet fighter-interceptors. At least one squadron of jet fighter-bomber planes for support of ground forces. No medium or heavy bombers are based permanently in Alaska.

Ground—One division of army forces, less one regiment stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash. The division is deployed in garrisons at Fort Richardson, Ladd and Eileson.

Sea—Naval operating bases maintained in readiness at Kodiak and Dadak, on the Aleutian chain. An air patrol squadron, primarily for anti-submarine reconnaissance, operates out of Kodiak.

Broadly, the strategic doctrine for Alaska is two-fold:

1. To retain control of the vital military centres of the territory, although this may not include attempts to dislodge an enemy who might land at some distant, militarily unimportant location in the hinterland.

2. To intercept and destroy enemy bombers seeking to fly over Alaska on the way toward target cities in Canada and the U. S.

Increasing attention is being given to the possibility that Russia, instead of blasting Alaskan air bases into uselessness, might seek to capture them for use as jumping-off sites for bomber operations.

Army officials say the Red Army may include units expert in Arctic warfare, but they will be confronted with the same supply problems that face Americans.

The Russian Army, say these officials, has gained a reputation for "living off the land" as it campaigns. But this reputation has been established in the war theatres of Europe, where there are populations and supplies to seize. In Alaska there are neither.

Eldorado

ELDORADO — Mr. and Mrs. Milford Stevenson spent Sunday at Kingston and visited Miss Alice Rowe, who is a patient in the Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. Douglas Pigden is spending some time in Detroit, where he is attending School of Garage Work.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hatfield and Willet Black, of Huff's Island, also Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Radner, of Rednersville, were dinner hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. McCann on Tuesday.

The funeral of the late Mr. M. Post was largely attended on Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Manley Post is spending some time at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clifford Chambers.

Stirling

STIRLING — On Wednesday afternoon the local fire brigade was called to extinguish a chimney fire at the home of Mrs. G. White, Frankford road.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Dafoe, of Windsor, spent some time last week with Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Pitcher, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Dafoe. Dinner parties in their honor were held at each of these homes when family gatherings were held.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Hebden, of Belleville, formerly of England, are taking up residence in the vacant apartment near the post office in the former Matthews' home.

Mr. Roger Meiklejohn is spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Sandford Meiklejohn at Springbrook.

Mrs. H. Faulkner spent a few days with her twin sister, Mrs. Will Johnston, Stockdale.

Mrs. Sam Kirkey was a dinner guest on Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wickett, in Foxboro.

Stirling Women's Institute sponsored a card party at the community hall, Monday evening, and provided prizes and refreshments. The awards were: ladies, Mrs. L. Spry and Mrs. Jim Mitts; men, Everett Cooke and Mrs. A. Gordanier (playing as a man).

On Wednesday evening 19 members of Laurel Rebekah Lodge, No. 211, Stirling, journeyed by chartered bus to Belleville, where they were guests of Quintena Lodge on the occasion of the official visit of the assembly, President Meta Priestley. Following the evening procedure when three candidates received the Rebekah degree, the hostess lodge served a delicious cold dinner in the lodge dining hall.

Those who attended were:

Noble Grand Mrs. Mabel Barlow, Mrs. Edna Fox, Mrs. Olive Whitehead, Mrs. Ethel Duffin, Mrs. Effie Bailey, Mrs. Gladys Elliott, Mrs. Eileen Demorest, Mrs. Jean Clancy, Mrs. Betty Wellman, Mrs. Irene Pollock, Miss Mary Hulin, Mrs. Helen Williams, Mrs. Florence MacMullen, Mrs. Isabel Heasman, Mrs. Thelma Ketcheson, Mrs. Alice Macklin, Miss Gena Spray, Mrs. Hilda Rose, Mrs. Doreen Akers.

St. John's Ladies' League sponsored a three-act play, "The Meddlesome Maid," by West Huntingdon "Sew and Chatter Club," and a capacity audience was in attendance at Stirling Theatre on Wednesday evening.

Rev. H. C. Secker, rector of St. John's Church of England, briefly welcomed the patrons and expressed thanks for their assistance. Between acts, Miss Betty McConnell, Mount Pleasant, furnished piano selections and Miss Barbara Woodbeck gave a tap dance number.

CAST

The cast was composed of Mr. Charles Wright, Mrs. W. Grant, Mrs. George Ashley, Melbourne Moorcroft, Mrs. Russell Sills, Alex. McCurdy, Mr. and Mrs. M. Sarles, Mrs. Elmer Wilson and Bill Grant.

The play centres around the Winthrop home and is full of humor and mystery and was well received with plenty of applause.

Burr's

BURR'S — Bereavement came to three district families within the week with the passing of the late Cyrus Pine, of Crofton; Mrs. George Soble, of Ameliasburg, on Monday and Mrs. Frank Burkitt of Burr's, on Wednesday, to whom goes the sincere sympathy of their many friends.

M. B.

The February Mission Band was held at the school on Wednesday afternoon. Some handcraft was shown and note made of the many special days that come in the month of February. Ground Hog and Candlemas Day, St. Valentine's, Shrove Tuesday, Ash Wednesday ushering in Lent, St. Matthias and the birthday of many famous men.

The secretary's and treasurer's reports were given.

Wayne Soble took up the offering. Two thank-you notes were received. Five dollars was voted to CARE. Some card orders were received.

March 15 is the next meeting date. It was decided to memorize the 23rd Psalm.

Scripture from Luke 2: 24-33 was read by Peter Diggins, marking Candlemas which day was set aside in memory of the presentation of the infant Jesus in the temple by his parents, and the Purification of the Virgin Mary. Eleanor asked questions on the lesson.

Mrs. McFaul read a Valentine poem, written by Mrs. Anderson and a chapter from the study book.

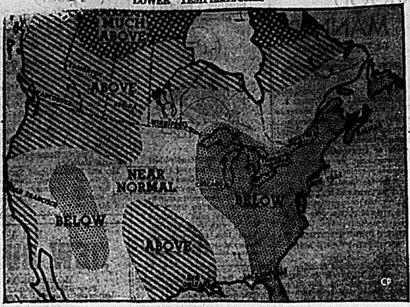
VALENTINE PARTY

Friday afternoon following the Red Cross program at the school, the teacher and pupils held a Valentine party with gamer and exchange of Valentines from a prettily decorated postal box.

Refreshments of Freshie, sandwiches, cookies, pickles and candies added to the day's happiness.

Sharon Edwards, Dale Soble, Daryl Osterhout, Janie Diggins and Gerald Diggins were afternoon guests.

LOWER TEMPERATURES



Temperatures in most of the populated areas of Eastern Canada are expected to be below normal for the next 30 days, according to the long-range forecast of the United States Weather Bureau on which this map is based. Much of Western Canada is expected to have above-normal temperatures. (CP Photo).

MARMORA

Prospector's Class Well Attended

MARMORA — Further new faces were seen at the prospectors' class conducted by Dr. W. D. Harding in St. Paul's parish hall on Thursday afternoon when the attendance was again well over 30.

The talk and discussions centred on serpentine asbestos, talc, nepheline, feldspar, kaolin, bauxite, brucite, apalite, corundum, malachite, azurite, celestite, barite and fluorite.

HISTORY OF PROSPECTING

The evening lecture dealt with the history of prospecting in Ontario and proved most fascinating to the consistently good attendance of the evening. It was followed by the film, "Rainbow's End," showing the staking of a gold claim by two prospectors, one experienced, and the other having his first experience on a month's trip.

Dr. Harding's visit is being extended from the closing night lecture on Friday evening until Saturday morning when at 10.30 he proposes to speak on the staking laws of Ontario.

GALLERY SUGGESTION

OTTAWA (CP)—A suggestion to house the National Gallery temporarily in a new downtown government building will be made to the federal government, the national capital planning committee announced Tuesday. A previous suggestion to build a new gallery building in Major's Hill Park, near Parliament Hill, was rejected by the federal district commission.

MARMORA

'Igneous Rocks' Concludes Class Series

MARMORA — At the afternoon prospectors' class held in St. Paul's parish hall by Dr. W. D. Harding, on Friday, it being the concluding one of the series, the doctor finished his talk on minerals, and then dealt with igneous rocks.

The attendance kept up to the high standard maintained thru'-out as 36 were there to evince their continued interest.

At the close of Dr. Harding's remarks, Frank Baalim, barrister of Madoc, lent further interest to the afternoon's program in giving a demonstration of fluorescent minerals when exposed to the rays of an ultra violet lamp.

In the evening Dr. Harding spoke on geophysical prospecting. The government film later shown was on the Iron Mines of fairly recent establishment in Labrador.

PLANE VANISHES

ANCHORAGE, Alaska. (AP)—A United States Navy patrol bomber with 11 men aboard vanished near here Thursday night on a training flight from Kodiak. No trace of it was found Friday by a fleet of 42 search planes.

Marmora

MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. Elymer McFarlane and Mr. Gordon McFarlane recently visited Mrs. Leslie May and Mr. May in Orillia.

The World Day of Prayer is being observed at St. Andrew's United Church on Friday, February 25.

Mrs. John Morrison recently visited friends in Orillia.

Mr. H. W. Sabine returned home from Peterborough Civic Hospital on Friday afternoon.

LIBRARY BOARD

All officers of Marmora Library Board were re-elected at a recent meeting as follows: Chairman, C. T. Nicholson; secretary, Mrs. J. H. English; treasurer, Miss M. Savage; book committee, Mrs. A. M. Jones; convener, Alex. McKay, Mrs. A. Deans, Mrs. J. M. Brownlie and Mrs. B. Robson.

Foxboro

FOXBORO — Mr. Kenneth Grills, Peterborough, was a guest Wednesday of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Ed. Montgomery.

A large crowd attended the play which was held in the Sunday school room on Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. James Reynolds attended the banquet which was held in Stirling on Friday night.

Sympathy of the community goes to Mrs. William Hodgen in the death of her husband.

Mrs. Carl Shipticki, Kingston, spent a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Prindle.

Misses Nancy and Lynn Reynolds were Friday night guests of Mrs. George Hicks and Mr. Hicks.

Miss Connie Derry, Belleville, was a week-end guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Judd Derry.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Rodgers and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sargent of Belleville, spent Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hollinger.

Miss Betty Blackburn and her mother spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Arch Mouncey, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. F. Murphy and two daughters of Roseneath, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Arthurs, Teddy and Barbara were Sunday guests of Mrs. M. Wallace, Ivanhoe.

Mrs. Morris Parks and girls were Tuesday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Prindle.

Mrs. George Hicks entertained the W.M.S. on Tuesday afternoon.

MARMORA

New Hospital Wing Described At H-S Meeting

MARMORA — The monthly meeting of Marmora Home and School Association was held in Marmora public school on Wednesday evening with a good attendance.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Frank Bobyk, through illness, Mrs. T. P. Pearce, second vice-president, presided. The meeting opened in the customary manner.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. J. Vanvolkenburg. Attention was drawn to the rummage sale and bake sake to be held in the Sanderson store on Friday and Saturday.

Miss M. Roushorn's room took the honors for attendance of parents and grandparents on figures obtained by E. C. Prentice, principal.

A petition is being circulated requesting the village council to place a safety guard rail at the southwestern approach to the bridge over Crowe River.

The guest speaker was Mr. J. E. Buchan, of Belleville, chairman of property of the Board of Governors of Belleville General Hospital who described the new building and what had been accomplished there.

Introduced by Mrs. Pearce, he was thanked by Rev. K. J. Crawford.

A travelogue followed by Mrs. White, wife of George S. White, M.P., of Madoc. It was illustrated with colored slides from her own pictures taken on a trip she took with her husband last year to Egypt, Lebanon and Germany.

She was introduced by Mrs. E. Manchester with D. P. Marett according a vote of thanks.

After the National Anthem refreshments and a social hour wound up the evening.

C.W.L. Holds Euchre Party

MARYSVILLE — A euchre party was held in Marysville parish hall on Wednesday evening with 18 tables playing.

Prize winners were: Ladies, Miss Dolly Finglian, A. McCambridge and Mrs. J. F. Brennan; men, Clarence McGuiness, Mike Whalen and Joseph Coffey.

The party was convened by Mrs. Ray Plue, Mrs. Joseph Coffey and Mrs. James McCambridge.

BOYS "SHOOT" DEER

KITCHENER (CP) — Four youths sighted a herd of 10 deer while hunting rabbits near the Waterloo-Wellington airport, and they have movies to prove it. Duane Sauder, Robert Klem, William Dunker and Kenneth Perrin were afoot when they spotted the herd but ran home for the Dunker station wagon and the Sauder movie camera and still made it back in time to catch the deer on film.

Clerk of Alberta Assembly Has Held Office for 41 Years

EDMONTON (CP) — Robert Albert (Bob) Andison has had a seat in the Alberta legislature longer than anyone else.

But Bob is not an MLA. An assistant clerk and clerk of the assembly, he has witnessed proceedings since 1914 from a place just down from the Speaker's chair.

In the 41 years since he became assistant clerk at the age of 25, he has learned much of Parliamentary procedure while working under five premiers.

NOTABLE RECORD

Mr. Andison, who has the longest record of service among Canada's provincial legislative assembly clerks, might be a storekeeper now had it not been for the Alberta assembly's first speaker, C. W. Fisher.

Mr. Fisher's home was at Cochrane, 25 miles west of Calgary, where Mr. Andison was helping a brother, William, owner of a general store. Bob was working in the store in 1914 when he received a message from Mr. Fisher to catch the next train to Edmonton.

There Bob appeared before Premier A. L. Sifton and his cabinet and was told he could start work the same day.

The current session of the legislature which opened Feb. 17 is his 46th. He missed only one sitting day and that was because he was ordered to testify in a Calgary court.

"I was sick before a session and after and on the odd occasion during a session, but I never missed a sitting because of sickness," said the veteran clerk recently.

CONTINUES AT 65

Bob, popular with all political parties, marked his 65th birthday last Oct. 1. His apopintments as clerk of the assembly and as clerk of the legislative council were extended to April 1.

The session may be his last but he apparently doesn't need to retire. Bob says:

"There are only two Alberta civil servants appointed for life. One is the provincial auditor and the other is the clerk of the assembly. So it's not a question of having to retire."

Before coming to Canada in 1912 Bob had some training in his native England for the job as clerk of the legislature. For eight years, he worked in the offices of the clerk of the Carlisle Board of Guardians and rural district council.

Mr. Andison was made clerk of the Alberta legislative assembly in 1923 after nine years as assistant clerk and he was appointed clerk of the executive council on his birthday in 1935. As clerk of the council he supervises provincial elections.

In 1923 after the death of John Robert Cowell, the assembly's only previous clerk, he had to handle the legislature sessions alone.

"I've never wished to sit on the members' benches," Bob said. "I'm just a good listener and couldn't make a speech if I wanted to."

VETERAN CLERK

Robert Albert (Bob) Andison has been assistant clerk and clerk of the Alberta Legislature since 1914. He has the longest record of service among Canada's provincial legislative assembly clerks. He now is starting his 46th session and has missed only one sitting day. That was because he was ordered to testify in a Calgary court. He wears his clerical robes in this Alberta government photo. STIRLING

Jack Bush Heads Citizens' Band

STIRLING — Stirling Citizens' Band held its annual meeting at the council chambers and they plan to practice each Wednesday evening and would be pleased to welcome newcomers.

The officers elected were:

President, Jack Bush; vice-president, Joe Irish; secretary-treasurer, Robert Hulin; bandmaster, Maurice Bell; librarian, William Moynes; press reporter, Bob Jeffrey; property committee, John McGowan, Joe Irish and Alvin Carr; auditors, Frank Harding and Bob Jeffrey.

LEGION PRESIDENT HONORED

The Stirling Branch of the Canadian Legion honored their past president, Mr. G. Blake Faulkner, at last week's meeting. The president, C. D. E. Ray Tanner, presided and Comrade Fred Houchin presented Blake with a past president's medal and pin. He eulogized the outstanding work of the past president and thanked him for all his service to the Legion. The recipient graciously accepted the gift and spoke briefly.

The World Day of Prayer will be held in St. Paul's United Church on Friday afternoon, February 25th for all the ladies of the village.

Mr. Harry Brown, Stirling, RR 3, had the misfortune to fall on the ice near the bank corner in the village and injure his back. He will be confined to his home for some time.

Mrs. J. H. Beatty, "Hillsholme," Trent River, is a patient in the Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. Morley Ayrhart has returned to Kingston hospital for further treatments.

The Stirling Rotarians journeyed as a group to Belleville on Tuesday evening and joined with other Rotary groups in one large gathering. All enjoyed a sumptuous turkey dinner, followed by an address by District Governor Basil Tibbett, based on "Rotary International."

Mrs. J. Clare was taken by Duffin's ambulance on Thursday to Belleville General Hospital. Mrs. Clare fell at her home, on Charlotte Street.

Moira

MOIRA — Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Angus Mumby attended the banquet held in St. John's United Church, Stirling, under the Federation of Agriculture on Friday night.

Moira Victory Class held its monthly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Farrell on Thursday evening with a large attendance. The president, Mr. Wesley Farrell, conducted the meeting after which refreshments were served in the form of a box social.

The monthly meeting of the YPU of Thomasburg and Moira was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Ewald on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Dracup of Wellman's Corners, is spending some time with her daughters, Mrs. Gordon Foster, and Mr. Foster.

The school children enjoyed a Valentine concert on Monday afternoon at school. Sandwiches, cookies, candy and popcorn were served.

Moira W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Thompson on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Alex. Grabowski spent a few days last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kellar.

Master Kenneth Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walton Reid spent a few days with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Holden.

'Boom-Boom' Geoffrion Explodes With Five Goals To Take Scoring Lead

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

IN THE STRETCH

The Cornwall Colts strengthened their hold on first place in the senior "B" hockey league over the week-end as the four playoff contenders girded their puck loins for the final stretch drive.

The Colts, by virtue of a brace of wins over Clinton and Belleville, drew five points ahead of the second-place Kingston Goodyears, six in front of the third-place Whitby Dunlops and eight in front of our side. The leaders defeated Memos 5-3 on Sunday and edged Clinton 4-3 on Saturday. Whitby split a pair, losing to Kingston in a rough, rugged game and edging the Comets 4-3 on Sunday.

The Memos have three games to play and can better their fourth-place position. They go to Brockville tomorrow night, entertain Kingston here Friday and wind up the schedule in Clinton next Saturday. The complete schedule ends Sunday with the Petes going to Cornwall.

The Whitby Dunlops may lose the services of their star playing-coach Bus Gagnon, who allegedly "combed" Kingston's Irvine and drew a match misconduct penalty which automatically calls for a suspension pending investigation. Gagnon is the group's leading scorer and if he is given a seasonal heave-ho, it will greatly affect the Dunlops' chances for the group title.

GREAT SHOW!

It was perhaps one of the highlights of a sportswriting life time to mingle with the greats of today and years ago at the press-radio conference held in the Royal York Hotel preceding the big Celebrities dinner. Baseball, hockey, football, swimming, track and field, in fact the whole calendar of sport was represented in a glittering array of stars.

Television cameras whirred and tape-recorders hummed with microphones busy as the radio-TV Joes went into action. Newspaper men stood around getting plenty of copy from the stars of yesteryear and today.

One of our big thrills came when we met Marilyn Bell, who was ably escorted by George Lauchlin. This demure youngster has been unaffected by the honors showered on her after her swim of Lake Ontario. She is a sweet, simple, young schoolgirl, the kind you would like to have for a daughter. It made one feel good to be a Canadian, especially at the dinner when 800 stood up and cheered the little darling to the echo when she received her trophy as "Athlete of the Year."

Then there was, among others, the famous Babe Dye, who was hobnobbing with an old pal who flew from Florida, Hap Watson, who again, is an old buddy of "Toots" Holway. Babe recalled the days when he played with the Toronto Oslers and did a lot of his baseball stuff in Belleville with Lionel Conacher. "That's a fine town you live in," he said, "it turned out some mighty fine ballplayers. Often thought I would like to live there."

Babe said the hockey players of today are too interested in getting the puck out of their own end than scoring goals. "In my day you had to shoot at the net. That is the only way we could score. The player of today bangs at the puck without bothering to see where it is going—and lets his mates scramble after it. That is not the hockey we used to play."

Jesse Owens, tall, cultured, colored gentleman, was just that. Jesse speaks in a beautifully modulated voice and his command of the Queen's English is perfect. He told us in interview that he thought John Landy was the best miler in the world, despite the fact Bannister beat him twice. Landy, said Jesse, was the more consistent of the two Britishers. He did not think the indoor four-mile would be run—not in the immediate future anyway.

Then there was Whipper Billy Watson and big Ed Strangler Lewis in a corner in a wrestling huddle. Dude Foden, 66-year-old jockey, who still rides 'em at six a.m. when the season is on, made a playful play at the Whipper, and the lens hounds had a scramble getting a picture of that one.

We got a piece of Gene Sarazen, famous golfer, who said he will go after the Canadian Open this year. Gene felt Canadian tournaments are among the best but felt that Canada was not putting enough emphasis on the expansion of the sport. "Your smaller cities," said Gene, "should purchase 200 acres or more and build a golf course. Your population is growing immensely, but you are not keeping your golf facilities commensurate with this growth. This will affect golf eventually."

Then we joined the "red face" department. We saw friend Laurie Brain of the Galt Reporter, talking with a dark, handsome type of young man. We obeyed his gesture to come over and remarked: "Do you have to bring your Galt brethren to a do of this kind?" Laurie grinned and said nothing. Then a camera bulb exploded nearby. Laurie and his friend arose. Still with that big grin on his face he said to us: 'Meet the Galt brethren. Name is Sal Maglie. Had something to do with the Giants last year. Remember'?"

And so it went on. We asked big Lou Groza, the "Mr. Toe" of American football, why he did not come over and play for a Canadian team. The big fella smiled—and he IS big, and said: "You answer that question for me." We didn't.

But stars and all-stars for our money Marilyn Bell was the grand little heroine of the piece. She was surrounded by news-hounds and carefully watched by brother Lauchlin. She is a darling and made one feel like wrapping her up in a piece of paper and bringing her home. "Dazzy" Vance spent a lot of time showing "Little Timmy", the crippled child symbol of the dinner, how to throw one of his famous curves. "Ole Dax" let loose with a lot of anecdotes, humorous and otherwise and proved a real entertainer.

The big thing was the splendid cash donation to the crippled kiddies through the media of the Sportswriters Association, the Ontario Hotelmen's Association and other gentry with great big hearts beating under their shirts. We heard it was something like $27,000 all told—and that brother—"ain't hay."

Harvey Gets Five Assists In Habs 10-2 Rout of Blues; Wings Blank' Em 5-0 Sunday

By JIM BASTABLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bernie Geoffrion, cast into the shadows by the explosive performances of Maurice Richard and Jean Beliveau, himself exploded to the top of the National Hockey goal-scoring race in less than an hour.

The 24-year-old rightwinger with Montreal Canadiens, who only a few weeks ago was accused by coach Dick Irvin of indifferent play, scored five goals Saturday to lead Canadiens to a 10-2 debacle against New York Rangers and send 14,990 hometown fans into near delirium.

It was the most destructive scoring outburst by any player this year, including Richard, the game's greatest scorer, and the super-talented Beliveau.

Not since Richard scored five goals against Detroit Red Wings Dec. 28, 1944, has a Canadien wreaked such havoc on an opposing goaltender. The NHL record is seven, scored back in 1920 by Joe Malone of Quebec Bulldogs in a 10-6 victory over Toronto St. Pats.

BOSTON-LEAFS TIE

In the only other game Saturday, the third-place Leafs and fourth-spot Boston Bruins battled to a 1-1 tie before 12,902 Toronto customers.

The Leafs turned around and dropped a 4-1 decision Sunday night to the last-place Black Hawks in Chicago. Meanwhile, the second-place Red Wings hung a 5-0 shutout on the Rangers at Detroit.

The standings remained unchanged after the weekend action. The Montrealers lead with 76 points, one up on Red Wings and 14 ahead of Leafs. The Bruins have 58 points, four behind Leafs but 14 in front of the fifth-place Rangers and 23 ahead of Hawks.

At Montreal, Geoffrion started his onslaught on New York netminder Gump Worsley at 2:37 of the first period. He called it quits at 14:05 of the third, with Canadiens leading 10-1.

GREATEST SEASON

This will be Bernie's greatest season in the big time. The five-foot-nine forward, a solid customer with his hulking shoulders and thick wrists, scored 30 goals in his second year with Canadiens in the 1951-52 campaign, 22 the following year and 29 last season.

The five other Montreal goals were all singles—by Bert Olmstead, Calum MacKay, Don Marshall, Jackie Leclair and Tom Johnson. New York's goals were scored by Bill Gadsby, on a screened shot in the first period, and by Larry Popein, near the end of the game when Andy Bathgate's goalmouth pass went in off Popein's skate.

Defenceman Doug Harvey figured in five Montreal goals, running his season total of assists to 39, one short of the NHL record for assists by a defenceman. Babe Pratt of the Leafs counted 40 over a 50-game route in the 1943-44 season.

TIE STALLED THEM

The Bruins' drive to overtake the Leafs was stalled by their Saturday deadlock with Toronto. Ed Sandford scored for the Beantowners at 3:06 of the first period and Leaf captain Ted Kennedy, evened it up at 10:54 of the second.

The Hawks scored three goals in the third session to put the whammy on Leafs at Chicago Sunday night. A crowd of 9,812 fans sat in as Hawks chalked up their 11th victory in 58 starts.

Metro Prystai was Chicago's big gun, scoring twice. His goal early in the first period gave Hawks a 1-0 lead that stood up until defenceman Jim Morrison deadlocked the count at the 54-second mark of the third. Eddie Litzenberger and Harry Watson scored the other Chicago goals.

Centre Alex Delvecchio scored twice to lead the Red Wings to victory over New York. It was the 11th shutout of the season for Detroit netminder Terry Sawchuk and left him only four goals behind Toronto's Harry Lumley in the Vezina Trophy race. Sawchuk handled 25 Ranger shots. Worsley stopped 38. The other Detroit marksmen were Marcel Bonin, Marty Pavelich and Gordie Howe.

Blues Win Swim Meet

TORONTO (CP)—The University of Toronto's senior swimming team Saturday defeated the University of Rochester 42½-42 in the closest meet of the season. The extra half point was awarded Toronto by intercollegiate rules for winning the final race.

In the other intercollegiate event Toronto fencers lost a sabre competition to the Royal Military College, Kingston, on hits against. But they won the foils from RMC 6-3.

Former Juniors Hold Enjoyable Get-Together

A young-in-years but old-in-experience organization held their fourth annual hockey reunion over the weekend in Memorial Arena with a rousing good-natured game ending in a 14-all tie.

Now averaging 28 years of age the former Belleville juniors who carried the city's beardless banner between 1942 and 1947 held their yearly get-together with "Old Man" Toots Holway, former coach, mingling with his youngsters of a decade ago.

The greater part of these former junior players are now retired from active participation in the game but their annual foray into the sport as shown yesterday, proved that not all of the old speed and cunning has been thrown into the discard.

They scored plenty of goals and played to the rules as Don "White Cane" Lee who refereed the game will testify. Only a trio of penalties was handed out while Coach Holway refused to leave the ice when he was penalized for delaying the game. The penalty was given due to the fact he was unable to cope with the speed of his former players. He spent the sentence escorting a cute little grand-daughter on skating safaris up and down the ice.

Doug. Green, president of this association did a grand job in organizing the affair, and much credit goes to him for the success of the game and ensuing get-together.

The boys played a solid hour of hockey and even Don "Ulcer" Barrett admitted the game was a bit too strenuous for him. The young-old veterans who are still playing hockey included Doug. "Nobber" Day and George "Huck" Reeves.

Out of retirement came Bobby (Red Light) Green, Don (Blackout) Dolan who held the respective forts; Bill (Speed) Holway, Dick (Bluebeard) Fitzpatrick; Jerry (Flash) Moher, Bill (Killer) Greatrix, John (The Korean Terror) Semark; Buck (Hot Pants) Lyall, Maurice (Specs) Rollins, Harry (Slim) Wardhaugh and others.

After the game the boys enjoyed a light luncheon and rounded out an enjoyable afternoon with reminiscences of the days when they were at their hockey best.

Goal hungry Bernie (Boom-Boom) Geoffrion burst into the National Hockey League goal-scoring lead Saturday night with a five-goal performance.

The tallies, scored in the Canadiens' 10-2 rout of New York, boosted his season total to 34.

However, team-mate Jean Beliveau, who drew four assists, still leads the individual scoring race with 32 goals and 34 assists for a total of 66 points.

Pentictons Tie Czechs 3-3 In 'Wild-West' Hockey Game

PRAGUE (CP) — Penticton Vs gained a 3-3 tie against Czechoslovakia's entry in the world hockey championships in an exhibition game Sunday. They also received a lecture from a Czech radio commentator on "wild-west hockey."

In a game reminiscent of some of Toronto East York's contests at Stockholm last winter, the Canadians were resoundingly booed for their vigorous style of play, particularly after fisticuffs broke out in the rugged third period.

The Czechs, who finished no better than fourth last year's world tournament, losing 5-2 to the Canadian entry, presented many of the same players but gave a better account of themselves. It took a goal by rightwinger Dick Warwick with less than three minutes remaining to give the Vs their tie.

Dick's brothers, Bill and Grant Warwick, scored the remaining Penticton goals, one a period and matched in each case by a Czech counter.

Vladimir Zabrodsky, a veteran of the 1949 team that beat Canada for the title, scored two of Czechoslovakia's goals. Vlastimil Hajsman was the other Czech marksman.

The Vs, seeking the world title that Moscow Dynamos took from the East York club last year, played ragged hockey against the smooth-passing Czechs and were hampered by a number of boarding penalties.

Of the game's 11 penalties, the only ones assessed against the Czechs resulted from third-period fisticuffs during which Jack MacDonald twice tangled with one of their defencemen and playing coach Grant Warwick tussled with another, near the Czech goal.

"The Canadians have started playing more like boxers in the ring than hockey players," said the Czech radio commentator as the combatants were sent off in pairs. "Canadians—you may play like in Canada but here we are in Europe."

The Vs, first North American team to play in Czechoslovakia since the Communists took over in 1948, were besieged by autograph hunters before the game, which was played before a sell-out crowd of 15,000 at Prague's Winter Stadium.

The Canadians play a second game against the Czech B team before moving back to West Germany where the world championships open Friday.

In other warm-up games played Sunday the Russian defending champions defeated Bad Neuheim, a second-string German club, 17-3 and the United States entry downed the Swiss national team 5-2. Vsivolod Bobrov, star of last year's champions, scored seven goals and had six assists in the lop-sided Russian victory.

For Penticton Sunday's game was the first against top-ranking competition. Their earlier games against West Germany were against undermanned clubs that frequently had to be bolstered by players borrowed from the Canadians' own ranks.

Although tempers flared frequently throughout the third period, in which eight penalties were called, and the crowd booed the Penticton team to the echo, the players skated off the ice amicably with handshakes all around.

Memos Defeated By Cornwall Colts 5-3; Drop Back To Fourth Position

Spot Winners Three in First But Fail to Overcome Margin; No Score in Third Period

On ice that was more conducive to shinny than hockey, the Belleville Memos were defeated by the Cornwall Colts in Cornwall on Sunday and failed to keep pace with the league leaders. The score was 5-3 with the Colts outscoring the Memos, three to one in the first and splitting four markers in the second. The third period was scoreless but the locals should have had a couple of tallies as they hit the post at least three times and Piquette made two marvellous saves that probably turned the tide in favor of the homesters.

The ice was soft and bumpy and puck - carrying was simply out of the question. The Colts gave the game everything they had in the first frame and with a little laxity on the part of the defence on a couple of goals the Colts roared to a nice cushion, that they held on to for the remainder of the pastime. Tony Parisi in the Memos' net was outstanding all through the piece and the game could have gone into double figures had it not been for his outstanding work especially in the third beat. In the second frame both goals scored by the Colts were partly screened with players huddled in front of his cage.

SPLIT FOUR IN SECOND

After Cornwall had scored three goals by Gould, Belmore and Olekuisk, the Memos got back in the game with a beautiful goal by Davey Jones helped by Goyer and started by Wilson and in the second frame the Memos got closer with a marker by DeGray assisted by Edwin Duncan. At this point it looked as if he locals were going to go on to a win but Belmore got his second tally of the afternoon but Wade from the point position rifled one by Piquette with DeGray also in on the kill. On a screened play Connelly, helped by Savard and Batten, batted one home.

The third period was not nearly as fast as the other two due to the close checking of both teams. They played their positions and waited for the breaks but at that Belleville had more of the chances and a little sharper aiming might have turned the tide. Piquette rose to the occasion on two plays that probably would have changed the course of the game. On the first one he was lucky and on the second one, the rubber hit the post, when he was cleanly beaten. The game was exceptionally keen as neither team was taking any chances with playoff time coming up. There were only seven penalties handed out by McDonald and Pratt, the referees with the Memos getting the odd one. On two occasions when the Memos were shorthanded the Cornwall Colts scored two important goals.

Had the locals played as well in the first frame as they did in the last two the result might have been entirely different. Early in the pastime, the defence was not taking the man out and the front lines were checking back. Ted DeGray with a goal and assist was the high pointgetter for the Memos while Belmore with two goals and probably the best man on the ice was high for his team.

The teams:—

Belleville—Goal, Parisi; Defence, Wilson, Macey; Centre, Doran; Wings, Pete Jones, Arne Dugan. Alts.:Ervine Duncan, Edwin Duncan, DeGray, Goyer, MacDonald, Dave Jones, Wade, Muckler, Bettiol.

Cornwall—Goal, Piquette; Defence, Oleksuik, Marshal; Centre, O'Brien; Wings, Morris, Payette; Alts.—Savard, Batten, Connelly, Henri, Belmore, Annand, Gould, Bingley.

Referees—Ching McDonald and Stan Pratt, Ottawa.

Big Prize List For Golfers

CHICAGO (AP)—A $629,000 summer schedule including four new tournaments was announced Sunday by the U.S. Professional Golfers' Association.

The new events include the British Columbia Open, a $15,000 tournament, to be held in Vancouver June 29 to July 2.

Other tournaments being held in Canada are the Canadian Open, Aug. 17-20 in Toronto, with $15,000 in prize money, and the Labatt's Open at Montreal, Aug. 25-28 for $26,500.

SANTEE IS VICTOR

NEW YORK (AP)—Wes Santee won the rubber match in his mile series against Gunnar Nielsen and Fred Dwyer Saturday night, taking the national AAU title in a relatively slow 4:07.9. Dwyer was third.

The three runners have taken turns winning major mile races in the U.S. track season.

Kenny Mosdell Honored By Canadiens' Fans

MONTREAL (CP) — Ken Mosdell, veteran centre of Montreal Canadiens, was honored Saturday night at Montreal Forum — Ken Mosdell Night—and was deluged with gifts from hockey fans.

Mosdell failed to get a goal or an assist in Canadiens 10-2 shellacking of New York Rangers, but collected an imposing array of presents, topped off by a new car.

This is Mosdell's 11th season with Canadiens. Now 32 years old, he broke into the National Hockey League in the 1941-42 season with the old Brooklyn Americans. During the next two war years he served with Canada's armed forces. He joined Canadiens in the 1944-45 season.

Often plagued with injuries, Mosdell had his greatest season last year when he scored 22 goals and had 24 assists and was voted the NHL all-star centre. To date this season he has 21 goals and 26 assists.

In addition to the car, his presents included household furniture, clothing, television and radio-phonograph sets, electric refrigerator and, for his two youngsters, a collie pup.

Quebec Upsets Shawinigan 4-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Quebec Aces upset the high-flying Shawinigan Falls Cataracts 4-3 Sunday with an overtime goal by Camille Henry, overshadowing the Cataracts' 8-0 rout of Chicoutimi Sagueneens the previous night.

Although the loss barely threatened Shawinigan Falls' Quebec Hockey League position, the victory enables the Braves to stay in a tie for second place with Montreal Royals who downed Valleyfield Braves 7-3 Sunday. The Braves went on to lose 6-3 to Sagueneens that night at Valleyfield.

Swede Defeats Russ Skaters For World Title

MOSCOW (AP) — Lanky Sigge Ericsson, a steel-nerved athlete from Ostersund, Sweden, Sunday won the world speed skating championship in a dramatic windup to the four-event competition. He defeated two of Russia's top skaters before 60,000 stunned onlookers.

Ericsson, who trailed Shilkov in the standings after Saturday's 500 and 5,000-metre races, captured Sunday's 10,000-metre race in a fast 17 minutes, 09.8 seconds. Earlier he had placed second to Golcharenko in the 1,500 metres.

The Swede's over-all performance gave him a final point total of 194.996. Goncharenko had 195.831 and Shilkov 195.858.

AMERICANS OUSTED

All three American entries failed to place in the 1,500 metres and thus were eliminated from the 10,000 metres race.

Ericsson, who slept in his dressing room before the final race, broke down and cried after the announcement of his victory was made. Cheers and applause greeted the announcement.

Throngs of people rushed onto the ice to congratulate the Swede, who came away with the big prize in the first world championship ever held in the Soviet capital.

"This the greatest day of my life," Ericsson said. "The Russian public was very good to me especially after I defeated their star (Shilkov)."

Windsor Bulldogs Tie Mercurys But Finish Second on Goal Average

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Windsor Bulldogs, third place finishers in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A League last year, managed to back up coach Murph Chamberlain's pre-season prediction this year that they would step up at least one position.

Bulldogs ended in second place, but only by the closest of margins. They defeated the last-place Niagara Falls Cataracts 6-2 on Sunday on home ice to tie Owen Sound Mercurys in points. But their better goals-for-goals-against average gave them the spot.

Now the Bulldogs must worry about another of Chamberlain's pre-season outbursts: "We have our eye on the Allan Cup and are in deadly earnest."

In other games during the weekend, Owen Sound dumped the fourth-place Stratford Indians 7-4 in Stratford and the title-holding Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen domped to an 11-4 win over Chatham Maroons.

In OHA semi-finals, Windsor meets Stratford at Windsor Tuesday and Kitchener will meet Owen Sound at Kitchener Wednesday. Both are best-of-seven series.

Bulldogs' big win came in a rugged 14-penalty game. They led 2-1 at the end of the first period and were up 4-2 in the second. Three goals came while Niagara Falls was a man short.

Bob Brown, Reg Abbott, George Gee, Gord Haldy, Ted O'Connor and Frank Bathgate were the Bulldog marksmen. Eric Unger and Lorne Pirie counted the Cataract goals.

Stratford Indians suffered their first defeat on home ice this season as they lost to the unpredictable Mercurys. Elmer Skov paced the winners with two goals and Vern Gardiner, Gerry Reid, Tom Jamieson, Jack Taylor and Ken Green added singles.

Dutchies had little trouble knocking over the fifth-place Maroons before 2,169 Kitchener fans. They rolled up a 4-1 first period lead and widened it to 8-2 in the second.

Kitchener scorers were Buddy Horne, three goals, Ken Laufman, Jim Logan and Jerry Theberge, two each, George Scholes and Don Bauer, singles. Eddie Busch connected twice for Chatham and Dan Blair and Cliff McArthur once each.

'Turk' Develops New Power Play, To Whip Canucks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Turk Broda, coach of Toronto Marlboros, in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League, said he had developed a new power play on his team. But the former National Hockey League goaltender had two worries. "I've never unveiled it before, and secondly, I don't know if it will work or not," he said.

He unveiled it Sunday against the Kitchener - Waterloo Canucks and it apparently worked. Marlboros easily defeated the Canucks 7-3 before 5,743 Toronto fans to cement their hold on third place although they won't be able to claim it until the final game in the regular schedule.

Marlboros are one point ahead of Toronto St. Michael's College Majors, who defeated Galt Black Hawks 3-1 in Toronto Sunday. The two Toronto teams meet in their final league game—a four-point contest—in Toronto Wednesday.

In Saturday games the Majors lost to the league-leading St. Catharines TeePees 12-1 in St. Catharines, Guelph Biltmores dumped Barrie Flyers 4-0 in Barrie, and Marlboros defeated Galt 6-3 in Galt.

Teeps now are on top with 64 points, two ahead of Guelph. St. Michael's is nine ahead of Hamilton Tiger-Cubs. Sixth-place Galt holds the last playoff spot and Barrie and Kitchener trail.

Marlboros' win Sunday was their fifth straight. Bob Pulford paced the victory with three goals and Bill Kennedy, Billy Harris, Mike Nykoluk and Ken Girard added singles.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A vision of what your bridge partner may hold can be narrowed down to a definite picture with some bids. My order of preference of bids is the efficient guide that makes this possible.

Your opening bid is one heart with this south hand:

♠J 7 6 3
♥A K 6 3
♦Q 9 4
♣A 6

Suppose your north partner responds at once with a jump bid of two no-trump. What is he telling you he has?? What is he telling you he has not? What is he asking you to do about it?

The jump in his bid is a signal that says he sees tricks enough for a game with what you have already shown. Even if you have not a stitch more than you already promised he says he can make game.

Since his bid was in no-trump he promises game in no-trump. What is required for a no-trump game? Nine no-trump tricks; that is, nine high cards (aces, kings, queens) or their equivalent.

Your opening of one in a suit promised four of them. Therefore he says he has five of them. Or, if he has two sure tricks among them, he may have only four; a good chance at no-trump game.

The fact that he did not takeout to a new suit denies in his hand a biddable suit in spades or diamonds or clubs. The fact that he did not assist your hearts denies support for that suit.

Thus, you can picture him with a hand that is fairly balanced in all suits that are sprinkled with picture cards of high quality. And his jump is a signal that you must not pass short of game.

So, what do you do? Lacking another biddable suit or rebiddable hearts you are unable to takeout. He has not mentioned a suit that should be assisted. Therefore, you must bid three no-trump.

The fact that you have nothing more must not stop you. He says he has enough with what you have already shown. So, it is not up to you to fall down on the job. Get right in there.

Golf Association Elects Officers, Changes Rules

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Canadian Golf Association at its annual meeting Saturday installed Dr. E. O. Turner of Fredericton, as 1955 president, considered introduction of qualifying rounds for both the Canadian open and Canadian amateur championships and laid plans for enlargement of the Canadian junior title tournament.

The association governors also rubbed some of the glamor off the week-end Ben Hogans by limiting handicap increases and decided on stricter observance of amateur regulations.

Following the meeting, the governors met in closed session to consider in detail plans for the future.

Because the fields in the Open and Amateur are becoming unwieldy, through increasing influx of the hopeful and often hopeless aspirants, qualifying rounds were given serious consideration. A committee was appointed to study the matter but the qualifying rounds may not come into effect this year.

AUTOMATIC QUALIFIERS

For both major tournaments there would be a generous number of automatic qualifications, based largely on previous performances in championship events. Remaining entrants would engage in a pre-tournament battle royal—over 36 holes at medal play—for the right to join the select. The championship proper would open with possibly 130 to 150 players.

If a sponsor is found for a more extended junior tournament, the change will come into effect this year at Calgary. Heretofore the eight junior champions from the RCGA's provincial associations have competed in a one-day competition of 36 holes, medal play.

Under the new proposal, likely 32 juniors would compete, on a pro rata basis among the provincial associations. The tournament would last three days and match play would govern.

Heretofore the junior play has been simultaneous with the competition for the Willingdon Cup by four-man provincial teams on the Saturday preceding the Canadian Amateur. If the change goes into effect, the juniors will compete on the three days preceding the cup play.

The governors decided that players with handicaps of one to 15, inclusive, will be limited to an increase of only three strokes in any one season. Players with handicaps of 16 and more will be limited to an increase of five strokes. In the past handicaps sometimes have soared a dozen and more strokes in one week-end's play.

CRU Faced With Junior Problem

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Rugby Union at its annual meeting in Vancouver March 26 will be faced with a resolution about rights of junior players.

The CRU's junior committee met here Saturday for its annual meeting and recommended that senior clubs be given first call on any junior player with a team sponsored by the club.

The player must be no longer eligible to play junior football and must be signed by April 30 of the year following his last season as a junior. After that date he can sign with any senior team he pleases.

A move to extend the junior 21-year age limit past the Aug. 31 deadline was voted down.

WANTED EXTENDED

Art McCready of Hamilton, representing the junior Big Four, who introduced the motion said he felt the deadline should be extended to the end of the year.

The committee decided to adopt uniform playing certificates for all leagues across Canada as a better measure of player control.

Jess Fitton, of Toronto, secretary-registrar of the committee said the juniors lost about $2,000 in their semi-final games last season but made a profit of about $1,000 on the Dominion final in Windsor.

William Leveridge of Toronto was re-elected chairman for another year and Fitton was renamed secretary-registrar.

AT THE BELLE — Jane Powell, deliriously happy with her groom, Howard Keel, sings "Wonderful, Wonderful Day", little knowing what lies in wait for her at her husband's ranch, where she will be housekeeper for seven brothers! The scene is from MGM's new CinemaScope musical in color, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" showing today, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Belle Theatre matinee daily.

Dark Horse for Oscar Award Is Irishman Dan O'Herlihy

By BOR THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The dark horse of the Academy nominations was a handsome Irishman who went unrecognized as he left the affair.

The lack of recognition is understandable. Dan O'Herlihy won his greatest fame and his Oscar nomination while hiding behind a beard in "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe."

Out from behind the shrubbery, Dan is a very good looking man of 35 years with sandy hair and blue eyes. His success story is one of dogged determination.

IRISH SEASONING

Born in Wexford, Ireland, and reared in Dublin, he got his degree in architecture at his father's behest. But the acting lure was too great and he got his seasoning at the Abbey, Gate and other Irish theatres. After appearing in "Odd Man Out" with James Mason (another Oscar contender this year), he was brought to Hollywood for Orson Welles' "Macbeth."

The picture was somewhat of a calamity and failed to launch Dan's Hollywood career. He managed to land a few roles, but by the time Crusoe came along, he admitted that he was at a standstill.

"I antagonized a lot of producers," he said. "I knew certain things were bad for a career. I refused B pictures and I wouldn't play the hero's friend, because you end up being a piece of furniture. Producers figured it might be all right for a star to turn down roles, but not a newcomer like me."

He has a wife and three children, and I asked how they ate during this time.

"Fine," he replied. "When I first came here, I got right into radio. I wanted that added income so I could afford to be independent in movies."

MEXICANS PLEASED

When radio began to wane, the Crusoe deal came up. Some Mexican producers were considering Orson Welles as Crusoe. They saw "Macbeth," in which Welles wore a beard and furs. But O'Herlihy caught their eyes.

Dan disappeared into Mexico for six months, then returned to Hollywood. When the picture was finally released, folks began asking, "Who is this Dan O'Herlihy?" Offers for big roles began coming in; he stars next with Bette Davis and Richard Todd in "Sir Walter Raleigh." And more scripts have been offered him since the Oscar announcement.

Davis Cup Draw Is Announced

NEW YORK (AP)—Canada will meet either Pakistan or the British West Indies in the second round of this year's American zone of the Davis Cup tennis competition.

The draw for the American zone matches made Sunday gave Canada a bye in the first round. The European zone draw was made previously.

This will be the first year that Pakistan has competed for the Davis Cup, symbol of world tennis supremacy. In last year's competition, Canada was defeated by Mexico in the American zone semi-finals.

Australia, which lost the Davis Cup last December after holding it four years, was drawn against Mexico in the first round.

HABS ACQUIRE RONTY

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens Saturday acquired centre Paul Ronty of New York Rangers for the National Hockey League waiver price of $15,000. Ronty has been with Rangers the last three seasons. He is a native of Toronto.

CALLED IT OFF

LYON, France (AP) — Tennis veterans Budge Patty of Los Angeles and Jaroslav Droby of Egypt decided to call the Lyon indoor tennis final a tie Sunday after battling 100 games for four hours with no decision in sight.

Blind Cagers Stage Thriller

TORONTO (CP)—A basketball team from the Ontario School for the Blind in Brantford walloped the Canadian National Institute for the Blind Toronto team 54-17 Saturday in the first game of their annual two-game home-and-home series here Saturday.

Each team dressed two totally blind players, who handled foul shots. The other players had less than 10 per cent normal vision. A white ball was used to assist the players.

The blind players were guided in their foul shots by their coaches who stood beneath the basket and clapped their hands, allowing them to shoot guided by the sound. The Brantford team completed three foul shots to Toronto's one.

The return game will be held in Brantford next Saturday.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE ....

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1925

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—"Airy" day for you snappy hard-to-out-guess natives. Step out early, be consistently within the golden rule of action and thought and you should reap well. Domestic affairs need consideration.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Whether or not you work today, you should not be idle for any period. There are many needy causes, your intelligence and ability are vitally in demand. Read, exercise, all make a good day.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Indications similar to Taurus today; it's a sort of as-you-make-it period. Wasted time is regretted too late. Prepare for next week's activities, may be surprises; be ready.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Friendly influences in many ways. While there are definite things and means at your disposal for advancement, a steady same tempo is best suited for all-around success. Think!

July 24 to August 22 (Leo) — Day gathers incentive as you progress in your work or profession. Thus, keep aware of what's hapening around you or you may miss the passing parade of benefits available. Be appreciative.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo) — Plenty of chances, good leads for the willing today. You have a serious, intelligent attitude generally, build on it. Try the new or ideas you have nurtured—they could click if you try enough.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Many fine prospects at your disposal, but maybe for a limited period today. Business, matters of real importance favored. Forget little differences, they mean nothing; be hopeful.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Personal affairs supercede many of your other activities. Advance all right thinking ideas, propositions, they are favored along with professional undertakings. Watch competition.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius — The alert and ready-to-act but thinking folks will profit most today. Room for all in the many interests we have before us, and don't blame others for your errors or unproductive days.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Activities relating to family, home and children will need a deal of fair and intelligent scrutiny to bridge possible upsets. Be forgiving and duly (Aquarius) — The unexpected could happen, so have your wits about you all the time. Private affairs favored, ask care with routine things. Always keep one eye on the other fellow's action.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — May be uninteresting day from all outward appearances but under the surface action is brewing. Use your God-given talents and ability astutely. Heart affairs may play importantly.

YOU BORN TODAY have an understanding nature, are orderly, neat, when living true to Zodiacal best. With prpoper education even late in life, background can become highly intelligent useful men or women, lifemate. You are rather confiding, sympathetic, usually kind and gentle; industrious, methodical deducing conclusions. You like order, completeness. Employment which requires inspiration best for Pisces. An imaginative mind, could do well in advertising, publicity, newspaper work. Coming month fine for advancement. Birthdate of: George Washington, first U.S. president; Frederic (Francois) Chopin, Polish composer, pianist; James Russell Lowell, Amer. author, diplomat.

Little Benny's Notebook

Pop is going to have a berthday, and ma said to him, William, do you realize your berthday is getting closer every day?

By gollies, every time I start to feel younger, somebody reminds me I've got another berthday coming, pop said. It seems to happen every year, he said, and ma said, The point is, I'm at a complete loss for ideas and simply dont know what to get you. You'll have to name your own present and make up in sattisfaction what you lose in serprise, she said.

At last my lifelong dreem has come true, I'm going to get something I really need for my berthday, pop said, and ma said, That's just what I want to know, what do you need?

I need one of those big foolproof ash receevers like they have in men's clubs and hotel lobbies, pop said. The ash trays we have around the house must of been made for smoking dolls, he said, and ma said, I know the kind you meen. They're really tremendous, I dont see how a woman can lift them. They must be very practical, I see what you meen, William, yes. Well, what's your 2nd choice? she said.

My 2nd choice is another one at the other end of the room, so I'll have a feeling of space and liberty while I smoke, pop said, and ma said, Oh my goodness the living room would look like a smoking car. What you really need is a nice new pair of house slippers. Those battered things you're wearing are a diskrace, she said.

By gollies yes, way down in my subconscious I've got a hidden longing for a new pair of slippers, pop said, and ma said, That's all I wanted to know, William, then it's settled.

HAD GOOD ARGUMENT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Richard C. Burke, 21, a navy man, told a judge Wednesday that his wife was married nine times before, but hadn't told him. Burke said he first became suspicious when he found several government allotment cheques in their home after his marriage last year to Mariquita Campastrano, 25. The judge quickly annulled the marriage.

QUARREL ENDS FATALLY

LANDSHUT, Germany (Reuters) Konrad Venohr, 15, was convicted Friday of killing his brother Guenther, 19, by gassing him because of a quarrel over who should wash the dishes. He was sentenced to five years detention in a juvenile prison. The boy confessed that after the quarrel he turned on the gas in a room where Guenther had gone to sleep.

Redmen Win Ski Title

ST. SAUVEUR, Que. (CP)—McGill University Saturday captured the Canadian intercollegiate senior ski championship with a five-point aggregate lead over its nearest rivals, Queen's University of Kingston.

McGill came through the two-day, four-event meet with 95.2 points under the intercollegiate system. Queen's collected 90 points while University of Montreal placed third with 87.9. Four-tenths of a point behind in fourth place was the University of Toronto while University of Western Ontario was last with 84.6.

Quebec's Laval University, last year's champions, turned in a strong performance in the downhill and slalom events, but did not enter racers in the cross-country and jumping and were not classed for the over-all team scoring.

Highly-rated Laurie Redpath of McGill captured individual honors and was awarded the title of "ski-meister," winning 91.5 points. Queen's University's Jim Emery ranked fifth with 86.5.

The Alpine team standings: 1. Laval, 100; 2. McGill, 93.2; 3. U. of Toronto, 88.2; 4. U. of Montreal, 86.7; 5. Queen's, 84.2; 6. Western, 79.5. In the Nordic combined—cross-country and jumping — the team standings were: 1. McGill, 98; 2. Queen's, 97.8; 3. Western, 92.1; 4. U. of Montreal, 90.3; 5. U. of Toronto, 86.7.

WAS ON BISLEY TEAM

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Major J. M. Jones, a man who won a place on Canada's Bisley rifle team eight times in 10 years, died at his home here Saturday. He was 83. A native of Pownal, P.E.I., Major Jones earned his first berth on the team in 1902. He retired in 1911.

Indians Win Week-End Games; Share Top Spot

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The resurgent Springfield Indians picked up four points during the weekend to deadlock with Pittsburgh Hornets for first place in the topsy - turvey American Hockey League race.

Indians edged Providence Reds 4-3 Sunday night on defenceman Gordie Tottle's 40-foot goal with only 38 seconds to play. Springfield defeated Buffalo 6-2 Saturday night.

Only one other game was played Sunday night. Buffalo Bisons, scoring once in each period, turned back Cleveland Barons 3-1 to break a fourth-place tie with Cleveland.

Three times in the first two periods Springfield came back from one-goal deficits. Walt Atanas tallied twice for Indians and Paul Larivee collected a pair for Providence.

Twenty - one penalties were handed out in the Buffalo-Cleveland game, including 10-minute misconducts to Gaye Stewart, Bison player-coach, and team captain Ed Slowinski.

Varsity Beats Raiders 81-75

TORONTO (CP) — Trailing through most of the game, University of Toronto Blues put on a determined drive in the final 10 minutes to defeat Windsor's Assumption College Purple Raiders 81-75 in an intercollegiate senior basketball game here Saturday night.

The win moved Toronto into a second-place tie with Assumption, each having four wins for eight points. They are two points behind University of Western Ontario and Queen's University who are deadlocked for the top spot.

Blues were behind 45-35 at half-time. With six minutes left Leo Madden put Toronto ahead 60-59 and the Blues were in control the rest of the way.

There were 65 fouls called in the game, 36 against Assumption.

ORFU Will Fight for Rights

TORONTO (CP)—The president of the Ontario Rugby Football Union said Saturday his league will fight any effort to remove its right to play for the Grey Cup.

Don Downey made the statement during an emergency meeting of ORFU senior committee.

A resolution from the Big Four will come up March 26 at the annual meeting of the Canadian Rugby Union in Vancouver asking that the semi-final game involving the ORFU be discontinued. At present the game is played in western Canada against the winner of the western Interprovincial Football Union series.

"If the Big Four and WIFU threaten to quit the CRU, we won't mind since we will therefore retain all CRU assets, name and Grey Cup," Downey said.

Minor Hockey

Six games were played in the minor playoffs on Saturday morning, three in each of the bantam and pee wee divisions. The Canadiens and Maple Leafs earned their way into the bantam semi-finals, the Habs downing the Bruins 3-1 while the Leafs blanked the Rangers 3-0. In the third fixture the Red Wings evened their series with the Black Hawks with a 3-1 win and will meet them again next Saturday morning in the deciding battle.

Turning to the pee wees, the Rangers ousted the Leafs with a 4-1 win and the Black Hawks downed the Bruins 4-2 to also qualify for the semi-finals. The Canadiens were victorious by a 4-1 score over the Red Wings but since the two teams tied last week, they will meet again next Saturday morning with a Canadien victory giving them the series or a Wing triumph forcing another game.

PEE WEE—

Peter Weston sparked the Rangers to victory with two goals and one assist while Graydon and David Fisher allied the other goals. Don Dafoe fired the lone Leaf goal.

Dennis Hull was the big gun for the Black Hawks with a pair of goals and two assists to match. George Gee had a goal and assist with Stu Muirhead rounding out the scoring. Billy Sutton and Norm Boulter fired the Bruin with assists for Ron Smith and Joe Ervin.

The Canadiens were led by Billy Hill with a goal and two assists. Doug. Defoe netted two goals with Barton Durrant also scoring while Jimmie Rutherford drew one helper. Paul Brown was the Wing goalgetter.

BANTAM—

The Red Wings were able to knot their series with the Hawks on the play of J. Hook who tallied all three of their goals, unassisted. Colligan from F'gent was the Hawk's scoring play.

Earl MacDonald paced the Leafs to victory with two goals and one assist while Brennan also scored. Titterson and Boulter were given assists. Larry Soden played a good game between the pipes to earn his shutout for the Leafs.

Maverty had two goals for the Canadiens with Asselstine and Skelly getting one marker each. Hunter, Hall and Harvey drew one assist each. J. Boulter kept the Bruins from being blanked with an unassisted tally.

SWAPS WINS DERBY

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP)—Swaps, with jockey Johnny Longden up, upset the favored Blue Ruler and Jean's Joe to capture the $137,500 Santa Anita Derby Saturday.

Watched by 49,000 fans, Swaps, a well-regarded California colt who was the second betting choice, finished a half length ahead of Jean's Joe with Blue Ruler third.

The victory, worth $90,400 to owner Rex C. Ellsworth, the breeder, was the third of the Santa Anita meeting and the second stakes victory for Swaps, son of Khaled. It was the fourth derby victory for Longden.

Powerful Team Represents USA In Pan-American

NEW YORK (AP)—Four world record holders, miler Wes Santee and a solid core of tested Olympians will lead the United States' powerful, 33-man track and field team in the second Pan-American Games in Mexico City next month.

"It's an outstanding squad," said Jim Kelly, chairman of the committee of 18 which selected the touring athletes Sunday. "It could have won any Olympic Games ever held and will do great in Mexico City."

"This is an idea of what we'll have in 1956 Olympic Games in Melbourne," Kelly added. "We're not sitting still and waiting for the Russians. The armed forces have done a great job. Their cooperation has been terrific."

ONE THIRD SERVICEMEN

Exactly one-third of the team is made up of servicemen and that doesn't include Santee who goes back into the marines in June.

Servicemen on the squad include Parry O'Brien, the Olympic and world record shotputter; 6-10 high jumper Herm Wyatt; sprinter Rod Richards, and Jack Davis, who was second to Harrison Dillard in the '52 Olympics.

Other world record men on the team are Mal Whitfield, the half mile king, Fortune Gordien, the discus thrower, and Bud Held, the javelin flinger.

In addition to O'Brien, the team includes three other Olympic champs in vaulter Rev. Robert Richards, long distance runner Horace Ashenfelter and Whitfield. Despite a heavy cold, Mal was able to get out of bed Sunday to receive the Sullivan Trophy at a luncheon honoring him as the outstanding amateur athlete of 1954.

BEATS U.S. STARS

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Smooth-swinging Fay Crocker, a dark horse from South America, beat the veteran Chicago professional Patty Berg, by a single stroke Sunday in the $5,000 (Serbin) invitational golf tournament. Miss Crocker's 72-hole score of 296 was even par.

Souchak Shoots Record to Win Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Mike Souchak virtually rewrote golf's record book in winning the $12,500 Texas Open Sunday with a fabulous 257 for 72 holes—two strokes under anything ever shot before.

The giant from Durham, S.C., who accomplished more in two years than many golfers in 15, completed a fantastic sweep of the records as he romped in with a six-under-par 65 to win the storied Texas Open by a smashing seven-stroke margin.

The 27-year-old, 210-pound former Duke University football star, laughed at the elements—it was near freezing and Brackenridge Park's soggy 6,400 yards were swept by a raw, bone-chilling winds —in shattering the tournament record.

Behind him came a frustrated field of 66 players who finished the long grind with Freddie Haas of Claremont, Calif., taking second money with 264.

Al Balding of Toronto, who shot a 10-under-par 274 for the 72 holes despite a disappointing 75 in his closing round, had to settle for a 17th-place tie and $182 in prize money. Jerry Kesselring of Kitchener, Ont., tied with Balding in fifth place at the start of the last round, blew even higher and finished out of the money.

During his four days of shooting, Souchak cracked the nine-hole record of 28, set by Ben Hogan and tied by Toby Lyons and Tommy Bolt, with a 27; shot a 60 to tie the all-time 18-hole record held by Al Brosch, Bill Nary, Ted Kroll and Bolt, and then wound up with that 257 that bettered the 258 set by Byron Nelson at Seattle in 1945, tied by Ben Hogan at White Sulphyr Springs, W. Va., five years later, and tied again by Chandler Harper in the 1954 Texas Open.

Souchak pulled up his money winnings for the year to $3,333.33 and today ranks seventh. His first in the Texas Open was worth $2,200.

The golf tour rolled on to Houston where the $30,000 Houston Open starts Thursday.

Freddie Haas, Claremont, Calif., wound up second here with a 264 and $1,500 while Shelley Mayfield of Chicopee, Mass., Gene Littler of Palm Springs, Calif., and Bob Rosburg of San Francisco tied for third with 269's.

Newest Trend Building Boom In Reverse

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — One of the newest trends is a building boom in reverse: Tearing down office and apartment buildings to make room for downtown parking lots.

Already in Louisville, parking lots cover one-fourth of the downtown area. In Detroit they cover half. Washington, D.C. is putting in 3,000 new off-street parking places a year.

F. W. Drybrough of Louisville can tell why. He owns five parking lots and is vice-president and founder of the National Parking Association.

"I'd rather have my five lots than two big office buildings," Drybrough said in an interview. "From an investment standpoint they are worth more."

An authority on real estate, he offers this comparison:

"It costs about $2,000 a month to light Louisville's largest office building, the 22storey Heyburn. I light all my five lots for $75 a month and two stay open around the clock.

HEAT COSTS NEGLIGIBLE

"It takes another $2,000 a month to heat the Heyburn. My heating costs for a small control building on each lot are negligible.

"A big building with eight elevators costs $25,000 a year in labor alone. The cleaning bill is tremendous. The Heyburn building requires a minimum of 40 persons where a parking lot, properly managed, can often be handled by one man in the control station.

"The there are taxes. Assessments on a big office building are huge but on a parking lot there is only the land tax plus a small tax for any improvements above ground."

Drybrough lists tricks of the trade as convenient location of the lot, proper arrangements of parking spaces, location of control stations and the relationship between attendants and customers.

In addition, there are lollipops for children, napkins to clean the windshield and steering wheel, free icescrapers, book matches and many other courtesies.

ATROCITIES ALLEGED

TOKYO (AP) — Peiping radio said Friday night that "the corpses of murdered islanders' left covered by a thin layer of soil were found by Chinese Red troops who took over the Tachen islands. The broadcast charged "they were murdered during the hasty flight of traitor Chiang Kai - shek's forces" from Lower Tachen island.

REDS WAR ON WOLVES

VIENNA (Reuters) — Bulgaria's Communist leaders have declared war on the wolves and declared they must all be exterminated by 1960. A new government order says all wolves must be exterminated in the lowlands by 1957, with a further three years allowed to hunt out the beasts of prey in the hilly and mountain areas.

Crazed Killers, Plane Crash, Blizzards Take Heavy Toll

CHICAGO (AP)—Nature, accident and a crazed man took a large number of lives by violent means Sunday.

A mass killer beat or shot four persons to death in Uniontown, Pa., and then killed himself. Another crazed gunman committed suicide in Atlanta after shooting to death two men and a woman.

Other spectacular violence included:

One gunman shot down by police in New York; three dead in an explosion and fire; nine killed in two of the worst auto accidents; a five-year-old boy mangled by an oil well pump.

In addition, the wreckage of a plane which carried 16 persons to death Saturday was found Sunday near Albuquerque, divers recovered the body of one of the three victims of a plane crash in a Louisiana lake and 16 deaths were attributed to blizzards.

SLAYS FOUR AND SELF

These were some of the most violent deaths:

In Uniontown, Robert L. Miller, 42, killed his wife and 17-year-old daughter with a hatchet and shot two men to death. He also critically wounded a third man. He buried the women under a pile of coal in his cellar. Then he killed himself.

In Atlanta, a jealous lover, Alton Nix Treadway, 45, smashed his way into his fiancee's home and killed her and two men and wounded another woman with a .22-calibre target pistol.

In Los Angeles, the body of an attractive 39-year-old divorcee was found in her apartment. She had been raped and her head crushed by a heavy instrument.

HEAVY ROAD TOLL

Six persons were killed in a two-car headon crash near Kingsville, Tex.

Three teen-agers were killed in another, car accident near Des Moines.

Five-year-old George Vealobos was playing oil worker near an oil pump in the yard behind his home in Wilmington, Calif. The heavy machinery dragged him into the pit and pounded him to death.

At Lawrence, Kan., an explosion set a home afire and brought death to a couple and their 22-month-old child.

Besides the known dead, several persons still are missing in the blizzard which roared across the plains states.

Multi-Million-Dollar Chain Of Radar Stations to Be Built

By GEORGE KITCHEN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP)—The first step in the construction of a multi-million-dollar chain of radar stations across the lonely reaches of the Canadian Arctic was announced Monday by the United States defence department.

It designated the Western Electric Company as the prime contractor for the "DEW line," an early warning system which will sweep along the northern fringes of the continent from Alaska to a secret eastern terminal believed to lie in Greenland. It will lie entirely within the Arctic circle.

When completed, the DEW line and U.S. listening posts in Greenland will be able to spot aircraft approaching the North American continent across the Arctic — the short route from Russia.

The $250,000,000 project—dubbed the "DEW" line from the initials of its formal title of distant early warning system—will be financed largely by the United States, though Canada will share in its operation.

Along with the designation of Western Electric as prime contractor, the department also announced three principal sub-contractors to handle construction of the three major segments of the warning line.

The Western section will be built by the Puget Sound Bridge and Dredging Company and Johnson, Drake and Piper, Incorporated, of Seattle. The middle section will be constructed by Northern Construction and J. W. Stewart Limited, Vancouver, and the eastern sector by Foundation Company of Canada Limited, Montreal.

The department said a joint project office is being set up in New York to handle construction detail. Its staff will include representatives of the RCAF, the Canadian department of defence production and the U.S. Air Force commands of air research, development and air material.

GARDINER, CCF DISAGREE ON DROUGHT EFFECT

No Decision Reached On CCF Resolution

OTTAWA (CP)—CCF members and Agriculture Minister Gardiner don't agree on how the present-day prairie farmer hit by drought fares under the 1940 level of federal aid payments.

CCF members argued Monday that inflation has sliced more than half the worth of payments under the Prairie Farm Assistance Act. They proposed a resolution asking that payments be doubled.

Mr. Gardiner said high wheat prices in the last decade have more than made up for the fixed level at which drought assistance has remained for 15 years.

The Commons reached no decision on the resolution by Max Campbell (CCF—The Battlefords). Mr. Gardiner still was speaking at adjournment and the resolution is unlikely to come before the House again this session.

PAYMENTS BREAKDOWN

The PFFA, passed in 1939, provides payments of $1.50 an acre on half of a farmer's cultivated acreage if the average wheat yield in his township is between four and eight bushels an acre. The payment is $2.50 if the yield is less than four bushels.

Farmers contribute one per cent of the value of their grain sold. Up to last year they paid about $80,000,000 and have received $146,000,000 under the act.

Mr. Gardiner said price of wheat had averaged $1.82 a bushel for the last 10 years.

In 1939, a farmer getting only four bushels to the acre would get $2.24 for his four bushels and another $2.50 under the act—a total of $5.66. Now, with the farm rice of wheat $1.67, he received a total of $9.18.

Mr. Gardiner also said that PFAA payments in the current fiscal year will total about $25,000,000. Payments were being made for rust damage as well as for drought.

Allan Expects Highway Building Record This Year

Minister Outlines Dept. Plans to Good Roads Meet

TORONTO (CP) — Highways Minister Allan of Ontario said today 1955 promises to be the greatest building year in his department's history.

In an address to the annual convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association, Mr. Allan, a former president of the association, gave details of the recently-announced $200,000,000 highways program.

He said plans are ready for an early start on the projected Burlington beach skyway near Hamilton. The Ontario government hopes to complete an agreement shortly with the Dominion works department which will enable the province to launch construction, he said.

Mr. Allan's remarks were included in a text released to the press in advance of delivery.

CALL TENDERS SOON

The minister said one of the highlights of the year's program is the work contemplated on various sections of the trans-provincial expressway, Highway 401. At Windsor, the western terminus, four miles of the city entrance with seven major traffic interchanges would soon be out for tenders.

"Weather and other conditions permitting, we hope paving may be started this year on the 36 miles of the London-Woodstock bypass section of Highway 401. It extends from Highway 4 near St. Thomas, to Eastwood, just east of Woodstock. Work on that section's 12 major structures is well advanced. Grading work is practically completed now.

"Unstable soil in the Don river area may hold up full completion of the entire Toronto bypass this year, but we hope to have traffic moving along most of it from the junction with the Queen Elizabeth way and Highway 27 on the west right on for 29 miles to Lansing cutoff intersections of Highway 2 and the Toronto-Oshawa-Newcastle intersections of Highway 401 which has been giving fine service for years.

"Certainly, we expect to have traffic moving from the Queen Elizabeth way right on to Yonge street, Highway 11, and then to Bayview avenue to the east by July 15. As major traffic interchanges are completed east of Yonge street, including the Don river bridge, paved sections of the Toronto bypass will be cut into Toronto traffic arteries by way of the new cloverleaves.

"The department is moving to remove dangerous intersections on the Queen Elizabeth way between Hamilton and Toronto. Three new traffic interchanges are to be built in Trafalgar township near the new Ford plant. Others required are being designed.

PLAN NEW SECTION

"When the Burlington skyway is well under way, we propose to build a new controlled access highway section to be known, perhaps, as the Freeman cutoff. It will extend for some five miles, about one half a mile north of Highway 2, from a point just east of Burlington to the Wolfe island intersection of Highways and 6. It will relieve traffic difficulties on the present four-lane, though undivided, portion of Highway 2 between Campbell's corners and Hamilton's western entrance.

Reds Back Off After Threatening Invasion of Isle

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Red China threw an invasion scare against tiny Nanchishan today, but apparently backed off just as it appeared the Communists were ready to launch their long-expected assault.

Chinese Nationalist reports said Communist warships headed toward the three-square-mile island and Nationalist planes and ships rushed to engage them.

But no attack developed.

From the little information available here, it appeared the Red ships diverted their course to mainland harbors.

Official reports said two Communist planes flew over Nanchishan today, but there was no contact with any Nationalist planes.

Meanwhile, Nationalist President Chiang Kai-shek's warplanes kept the civil war alive with the fifth straight day of attacks against Red China's buildup base on the Taishan islands, Nationalist air force headquarters said.

The air force said its planes roared over the Taishans in four pre-dawn waves and racked up this score:

Two vessels of unspecified type sunk and another possibly damaged, possible direct hit on one Red craft, hits on four Red craft, including a big one, and bomb strikes on Taishan military installations.

The air force said all its planes returned.

Nanchishan has been the northernmost outpost of Chiang's island chain off Red China since the Tachen evacuation. It is 120 miles north of Formosa, 20 miles off the mainland, and manned by about 5,000 Nationalist regulars and guerrillas.

There never has been any indication that the United States might consider it among the related positions and territories deemed essential to the defence of Formosa and the Pescadores.

The Reds may be trying to learn U.S. intentions.

They did that previously in the Tachen area, where the Nationalists pulled out.

U.S. officials are well aware of the threat to Nanchishan. Any overt move against the island would resent a new hour of decision for the United States—going to its defence, aiding in its evacuation, as in the Tachens, or standing back and letting the Reds seize it.

Great Britain Is Planning Atomic Age Navy; Nevada Bomb Flash Seen 275 Miles Away

LONDON (AP) — Britain today announced plans to revolutionize her navy and even her sea battle tactics to conform with the age of atomic and hydrogen bombs.

The Royal Navy's striking force of the future will be organized around fast carriers and guided missile ships of great fire power.

In introducing navy estimates for the fiscal year beginning April 1, J. P. L. Thomas, first lord of the admiralty, predicted "changes in certain types of naval warfare comparable to that once brought dreadnought" early in this cen- about by the introduction of the tury.

Thomas, civilian head of the navy, explained the program in a white paper presented to Parliament. He denied that the development of weapons of mass destruction had diminished the need for navies.

The statement fixed navy costs in the coming fiscal year at £391,550,00 ($1,096,340,000) or £11,750,000 less than the current year.

Primary emphasis was given to development of guided missile ships to replace Britain's old cruiser fleet.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The second shot of the 1955 atomic test series was fired at 8:45 a. m. EST today.

The flash lighted up the desert and was plainly visible in Las Vegas, 75 miles to the southeast and in Los Angeles 275 miles to the southwest.

It was seen as an orange flash this time, rather than as a brilliant white as many of the previous detonations have been.

The atomic cloud was not immediately evident in the pre-dawn sky.

The shot was detonated from the top of a 300-foot tower on Yucca flat. It had been classed as a medium-size device, perhaps slightly larger than the small air drop which opened the series last week.

The blast, however, was strong enough to rattle buildings in Las Vegas about seven minutes later. There was no initial report of damage.

Russia Claims It Leads U.S. In A-Bomb Race

LONDON (AP) — Russia today heralded the approach of Red Army day with a claim that it is leading the United States in the production of both atomic and hydrogen weapons.

Moscow radio carried a statement by Lt.-Gen. Sergei S. Shatilov made in connection with the celebration to be held Wednesday.

Shatilov said the Soviet army and navy were equipped with "every kind of weapon and the most modern military equipment."

Paper Says U.S. Gangsters Set Up Shop in Montreal

TORONTO (CP)—The Telegram says "big-time United States gangsters, not one a legal immigrant," are setting up shop in the suburbs of Montreal.

"But they have failed conspicuously in their initial attempt to make Montreal the underworld capital of North America," its dispatch from Montreal adds.

The paper says latest official figures, reinforced by private research, reveal that five so-called syndicates numbering dozens of men "are at this moment operating in the outlying settlements of St. Laurent, Dorval, Lachine and L'Abord a Plouffe."

It says they are under the supreme command of a one-time deputy of the imprisoned New York gang boss Frank Costello.

UNDERWORLD "WHO'S WHO"

"Under him come another 25 ex-convicts whose names read like a 'Who's Who' of the U. S. underworld, bearing such nicknames as 'The Enforcer' and 'Booboo.'

"All have entered Canada within the last three or four years, none through official immigration channels. They are also receiving the closest co-operation from well-known Canadian hoodlums."

The paper adds that the syndicates established themselves before the current Montreal crackdown on crime. Their specialty was bookmaking but they also had a hand in the city's prostitution, gaming and narcotics rackets.

Tobacco Growers Ask 3-Cent Cut In Cigaret Tax

OTTAWA (CP) —Reduction of taxes on cigarets by three cents for a pack of 20 was asked of the government today by the Tobacco Marketing Association of Ontario.

In Ontario, this would lower the price to 30 cents if the tax cut were passed on to consumers.

The association, representing growers of 95 per cent of tobacco production in Canada, said federal taxes on cigarets amount to some 54 per cent of the total purchase price, or 17.7 cents on a 33-cent package where there are no local sales taxes.

It said in a brief to Finance Minister Harris that the effect of a tax reduction on federal government revenue would be significantly small.

The association argued that lower taxes would result in increased consumption of tobacco products and thus, in the long run, more revenue.

RECORD SALARY

DETROIT (AP)—Harlow H. Curtice received $686,100 in 1954 as president of General Motors, a company prospectus mailed to stockholders reveals. Curtice was paid $201,100 in fees and salary, plus a bonus award of $485,000 in stock and cash. The total is the most ever drawn by a General Motors president and tops Curtice's own record, set in 1953, by $45,000.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO. (CP) — Synopsis: The cool air that invaded Ontario Monday became stalled Monday night due to a new storm developing south of Lake Erie. This storm is causing snow in southwestern Ontario and a mixture of rain and snow over southeastern Ontario. As the low pressure area moves northeastward into Quebec today the weather will clear slowly in western regions, but will remain mostly cloudy in the eastern part of the province Wednesday. Northern Ontario will remain clear and cold today and Wednesday.

Arrest Two Men Counting Money After Robbery

HAMILTON (CP)Two suspects were arrested while counting money in the basement of a house Monday 10 minutes after an east-end branch of the Royal Bank of Canada was robbed of $5,000.

Police arrested Kenneth Bullock, 26, and Percy Smith, 37, at gunpoint in Bullock's home two miles from the bank. They were charged with armed robbery.

Bank manager Bert Springer said a man, wearing a hat and a brown mask, walked into the bank near closing time waving a sawed-off shotgun. After herding the seven-member staff and two customers into a vault the gunman forced Springer to hand over the cash from two tills.

He then forced Springer into the vault and fled to a waiting car driven by an accomplice. The bank is adjacent to a busy shopping area and several persons said they saw the gunman make his escape.

NEW LOCATION

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — The News-Chronicle Monday published its first paper from its new location in the renovated old city customs building. A formal opening at its new site, with three times the floor space of the old officer, will be held later. The News-Chronicle is a daily owned by publisher Roy H. Thomson.

Politicians, Policemen Join Copper Rush Near Timmins

TIMMINS (CP)—Amateur and professional prospectors by the hundreds, including politicians and policemen, are staking the nearby Kamiskotia district here in the search for copper.

Nearly all of Jamieson, Godfrey, Turnbull and Robb townships have been staked and the rush now is extending into four districts. Not since the days of the Porcupine camp staking rush has there been such activity in the area.

Stakers represent virtually every walk of life, including local police officers and Karl Eyre, Liberal member of the House of Commons for Timmins.

Jack Brady, president of the Porcupine Prospectors and Developers Association, said he feels Kamiskotia is Canada's greatest undiscovered copper area.

"It has been overshadowed by the proximity of the big Porcupine gold mines, but with the huge exploration program scheduled by major companies, it should come into its own at last,' he said.

Several companies have started preparations for diamond drilling in the area. International Nickel Co., is reported to control nearly the entire surface of Kamiskotia lake, 1¼ miles wide and 1½ miles long. It has a drill working from the ice.

Faure's Chances Of Becoming Premier Good

PARIS (Reuters) — Edgar Faure's chances of becoming France's 21st post war premier, and ending a 17-day cabinet crisis, brightened today with agreement by the Radical party to join his proposed cabinet.

The National Assembly was called to meet Wednesday morning and observers took this as an indication that Faure would formally accept the task of forming a government.

Faure, 46, is the fourth politician to try to form a government to replace that of Pierre Mendes-France which fell Feb. 5. He was Mendes-France's foreign minister.

He has already obtained the support of the Conservatives, most of the Gaullists, and of the Popular Republicans. With his own party joining in he should be assured of a comfortable majority.

Last - minute difficulties may arise in connection with filling the 35 or 40 ministerial posts. The Popular Republicans have made their support conditional on seeing the list of ministers.

Turns on Light, House Blows Up, Aged Man Burned

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A man whose house "practically blew up" when he turned on a kitchen light suffered severe burns in escaping from his blazing home early today.

Admitted to hospital with multiple burns over most of his body was Robert Samuel Scott, 76, who was living alone in the frame house on Base Line road here.

An explosion, believed set off by gas fumes escaping from a main, ripped through the one and a half storey house. Flames gutted the building. An extension containing the kitchen was ripped from the main building. Other homes in the area were rocked by the blast.

Mr. Scott dashed from the house in his pyjamas, and smothered flames in the clothing by rolling in snow.

60,000 STRIKE

SAARBRUECKEN (Reuters)—The great steel factories of the Saar ceased production Monday as 60,000 workers went on strike for higher wages. The walkout also threatened serious cuts in the gas supply of the Saar, a disputed territory which lies between West Germany and France and is economically linked to France.

Plan Increase In Pensions For Teachers

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister Dunlop said Monday the provincial government plans to increase pensions to teachers who retired before April 1, 1949, when the teachers' superannuation act was introduced.

About 3,000 men and women teachers in Ontario who were superannuated before that date are under provision of old acts and do not receive as much as they should, said Dr. Dunlop.

He said the department plans to recalculate their pensions on the basis of the average salary each received during the 10-year period immediately before retirement.

The new rate is to be effective April 1, 1955. When recalculation is completed the teachers will receive cheques covering the difference between present pensions and the new amount.

The minister of education also announced a plan to aid financially the widows of teachers who died before April 1, 1949. They will be paid $25 a month, retroactive to April 1, 1954. Dr. Dunlop said the department in March hopes to send cheques for $300 to each of the 350 widows who will benefit by the plan. Cost to the province will be about $85,000 a year.

The government's plans were announced by Dr. Dunlop before the debate on the speech from the throne was resumed Monday.

The debate was adjourned following a 2¼ hour speech by J.B. Salsberg, Communist Labor-Progressive member for Toronto St. Andrew, who was to continue today.

Mr. Salsberg, between interruptions, criticized the government for not taking action to relieve the unemployment situation and for permitting United States interests to make huge profits on Canadian investments. He asked for appointment of a royal commission to study the extent of American control of Canadian natural resources and industry.

Assaulted Parents

BRANTFORD (CP) — Ernest Groff was sentenced to six months in jail Monday for assaulting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Groff, both nearly 80. The couple was taken to hospital in a state of shock.

Mrs. Groff said her son came to their home after drinking and struck his father with his fists and a chair. He also shook and struck her, she said.

Crews Use Pick Axes to Pry Bodies Loose

RIETI, Italy (AP) — Search crews used pick axes today to pry from icy tombs the frozen bodies of 29 victims of a Belgian airliner crash on Mt. Terminillo, high in the Apennines of central Italy.

The plane, a Sabena Belgian Air Lines DC-6, crashed at an altitude of 4,50 0feet Feb. 13. All aboard perished.

Francesco Mauro, prefect of Rieti province, said there were indications would-be looters reached the scene before the official search parties.

"I have suspicions, almost proof, that somebody reached the plane before we did, possibly to loot the wreck," Mauro said. "I have ordered an investigation to find out who found the plane and failed to report it."

INDIAN POPULATION

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's population of 15,400,000 includes 151,942 Indians, Citizenship Minister Pickersgill reported in a return tabled Monday in the Commons. The return said there are 2,223 Indian reserves in Canada, of which Ontario has 164.

Child's Temperature of 109 May Be Highest Ever Recorded in Patient

OTTAWA (CP) — Temperature was back to normal today for tiny Dianne Draper, whose mother said the thermometer showed the tot had a fever of 109 degrees during a bout with septicemia, a form of blood poisoning.

The five-month-old girl's doctor, a child specialist in neighboring Hull, Que., said Monday he believes Dianne's temperature may be the highest ever recorded for a patient who survived. Another leading Ottawa doctor said he could not say a temperature of 109—11 degrees above the normal of 98.2—is a record, but it "is damn high."

Neither doctor would permit use of his name.

Dianne, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Draper of Hull, was brought to the General Hospital here four days ago when her temperature soared. The tot's doctor said her mother recorded the 109-degree temperature. It was 107 when Dianne reached the hospital.

The 9¼-pound girl was fed intravenously when she lost consciousness in the hospital, but treatment with drugs cleared up the poisoning and Dianne now was taking nourishment normally.

Mrs. Draper said Dianne will be out of the hospital in a day or two.

Too Many Ministers Wash Windows When They Should Be Tending Flock

TORONTO (CP)—Too many ministers are washing windows when they should be out tending the flock, a United Church minister said Monday.

Rev. R. S. Christie of Vancouver, associate secretary of the board of evangelism and social service of the United Church of Canada, said a minister cannot bring comfort to homes of the sick and distressed when he is stoking the church furnace.

Many ministers were burdened with secondary duties to such an extent that they had too little time to be pastor, priest and prophet, Mr. Christie said in his report to the board's annual meeting.

"A man or woman called of God to wait upon the flock, to nurture and guide the seeking spirit . . . should not be washing windows nor tending the furnace in church or hall," he said.

"The precious time spent in carrying out routine functions that others could do as well or better, is reflecting unfavorably on the quality and fruitfulness of preaching and teaching."

The report of associate secretary W. G. Berry of Toronto criticized housing in subdivisions.

"We have created socially acceptable slums with a thin veneer of seeming culture and comfort," he said.

Mr. Berry called Canada's liquor laws irrational. Liquor licences were granted hotels catering to the travelling public even though impaired driving is an offence punishable by fine or imprisonment, he said.

About 200,000 church members have pledged total abstinence, despite the social pressure against taking a pledge, he added.

GREY CUP GAME ON FILM SHOWN TO ROTARY CLUB

Grey Cup game thrills spilled over in the Hotel Quinte yesterday when the film of last year's game was shown to members of the Belleville Rotary Club.

The film was introduced by Earl Salter, local representative for Dow Kingsbeer Brewery. Interesting angle on the actual film itself was the fact that, while the first 20 minutes or so were in sparkling technicolor, the latter end of the show was in black and white, a result of weather conditions the day the film was made.

Bill Hurst thanked Mr. Salter on behalf of the club, while chairman for the meeting was president Fred Adsett.

GIVEN SIX MONTHS ON THEFT CHARGES

Pleading guilty to two charges of theft, Walter McFadden, 34, of Toronto, was given concurrent sentences of six months in the common jail when he appeared this morning in police court before Magistrate R. C. Jackson, of Madoc.

McFadden was charged with the theft of two drafting computing machines valued at $450 from an automobile last summer, and also with the theft of a special type auto heater from the CNR express. McFadden was taken into custody last week and charged with the two offences.

RESIDENTS TO ENJOY FILM AT BELLE

Fifty residents of the Hastings County Home were guests of Belle Theatre manager George Forhan this afternoon for a showing of the technicolor musical, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers."

Kiwanian Ken Box was in charge of the theatre party. Fred Rawson provided transportation to and from the home for theatregoers.

Don MacKinnon Again President Fish, Game Club

Don MacKinnon is this year's president of the Belleville Fish and Game Club.

At a recent meeting of the club's directors the following slate of officers was elected: vice president, Bruce Smith; sec.-treas., Ken Yorke; chairman membership, William Adams; chairman restocking, Charles Bishop; chairman hunting, Archie Scott; chairman fishing contest, Jack Goyer.

Russ Whitfield, biologist, Tweed, sat in with the local club on a discussion on restocking district waters. He also asked co-operation of local anglers in a survey for sea lamprey.

Don Bell, Moira River Conservation Authority, recommended a local trout creek for a stream improvement project and a committee of the directors was named to look over a site with Mr. Bell.

Board to Meet Council, Health Dept. on Program

Members of the public school board dental advisory committee will meet with city council and the city board of health in an effort to have the board's dental program carried out by the health department.

At the present time the board's dental program, consisting of special dental clinics in all public schools is carried out by Dr John M. Clarke and an assistant. Board members feel the program could be carried out more efficiently under the direction of the health department and have directed their dental advisory committee to meet with council on the matter.

The decision was made at Monday evening's regular meeting of the public school board.

Exhaust Fan In Cleaning Plant Is Damaged

Innocent probing by a stick on the part of an eight-year-old lad on his way to school this morning put Lloyd's Cleaners on Catherine Street effectively out of business for the day.

Passing by the cleaning establishment while on his way to school, the lad shoved a stick into the discharge opening of an exhaust fan, stripping the blades from the machine. Unfortunately the exhaust fan was used to blow fumes and lint from the clothes drying machine and as result all cleaning process came to a standstill until repairs could be effected.

The cleaner management said the plant would be partially out of business for the day.

WOULD BAN BLINKERS

THE HAGUE, (Reuters)—Blinkers for horses will be banned except in certain specified cases under an animal protection bill now before the Dutch Parliament. It would also ban the docking of dogs' ears and horses' tails and leading cattle by a rope around horns or neck, and would set minimum requirements for the kennels of watchdogs.

Should Interest Canadian Youth In Engineering Says Speaker

A leading Canadian engineer here last night called on members of his profession to encourage the nation's youth in engineering in Canada as a necessity to the physical and economic growth of the country.

Speaking to the annual meeting of district branches of the Engineering Institute of Canada at the Hotel Quinte, president Donald McGregor Stephens, one-time deputy minister of the Manitoba department of mines, warned that if Canadian youth is not made interested in engineering in Canada, the development of the country "is going to be in the hands of others."

Commenting on the interest shown by the United States and Great Britain in Canada's expansion and future, he said: "I sometimes wonder if we have done as fine a job in selling Canada to Canada and Canadians as we have to the United States and the United Kingdom.

He said he doubted if Canada is impressing on its own youth the development possibilities the nation holds for Canadians.

At present, Canadian engineering schools graduate between 1,200 - 1,300 engineers annually, he said. In comparison, if that figure is placed alongside that of the U.S. and Russia ". . . . I think you will find that we are doing very badly."

"Today, the U.S. annually graduates 29,000 engineers and Russia 39,000," he said.

SLOW GRADUATION PACE

When he thought that Canada's graduation pace is only five per cent of that of the U.S. and three per cent of the Russian, of the "development work yet to do" and that Canada controls one of the world's largest land masses ". . . I suggest to you that, perhaps, we have not done, nor are doing, an adequate job of portraying Canada and the future of Canada, to the youth of Canada."

The training facilities for student engineers in the nation's universities demonstrate that they could turn out double the number at present while the engineering schools are providing as fine training as anywhere, he claimed.

"I think it is becoming clear to all of us in the engineering professions to interpret our views as to the future of Canada and of engineering in Canada to the youth of Canada."

"I am satisfied that the country needs them . . . that if we do not claim the youngsters here the physical and economic development of Canada is going to be in the hands of others."

In the course of his address, Mr. Stephens paralleled the growth of the nation's economy with the tremendous engineering schemes carried out across the country.

D. M. STEPHENS

"Once," he said, "it was commonplace to describe Canada as an "economic ribbon of a country."

"How to give Canada some economic breadth and make the economy conform with its geography has been a primary challenge to, perhaps, the last two generations of Canadians.

"Among the leaders trying to gain this economic breadth were the engineers," he said.

He noted the great push northward of the nation's economic schemes, mentioning various mining and industrial developments and said all this work has been engineering in its concept.

PROVIDES STIMULANT

"This northward push has been providing the real stimulant to the industrialization and economic development of the rest of Canada," he said.

"However, the drive has also provided an increased demand for engineers," he stated.

Concluding, said Mr. Stephens: "I do think we have a story to tell our youth and as engineers we have a responsibility of interpreting a story such as this to the youth of Canada."

Over sixty members and their wives from E I C branches in Belleville, Peterborough and Port Hope attended the meeting. Among those present were Mayor Jack Both and Mrs. Both. The meeting also was addressed briefly by L. Austin Wright, general secretary, who is touring Ontario with Mr. Stephens.

Mr. Both welcomed the members on behalf of the city and noted the increased emphasis laid on the importance of engineering.

Chairman for the evening was Al Drysdale, while "Bud" Punchard thanked the speaker.

Princess Leaves Grand Ball Early

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Reuters) Princess Margaret followed briefly in the glass slippered-steps of Cinderella when she left a ball here at the stroke of midnight for a few hours sleep before facing the work-a-day world of Jamaica today.

The pretty princess was the centre of attraction at the open air ball Monday night given by University College. Glamorous in a strapless gown of pink silk tulle and satin she was nearly mobbed by red-gowned students, but she did not have a single dance.

Today she will tour farms and factories. First Margaret will be taken to Denbigh, the island's big agricultural showground, where she will plant a tree; then, to the great aluminum plant at Kendal, and later to a rally at Mandeville. High spot of the evening will be an informal Jamaican barbeque supper.

Asian Parley Centres Attention On 2 Main Topics

By OLEN CLEMENTS

BANGKOK (AP)—Delegates assembling today for the Southeast Asia treaty conference centred their attention on two main topics—setting up a military force for Southeast Asia and economic help for countries threatened by Communist infiltration.

Both projects took on urgent meaning with reports of Communist activities in Laos and in Red China's Yunnan province, both just outside Thailand, the host country.

The conference of eight countries opens Wednesday.

None of the delegates already on hand would discuss their plans publicly. They conferred country by country today.

U.S. State Secretary Dulles arrived shortly after noon from Manila.

DULLES STATEMENT

"Our purpose here is peace and freedom and I am confident that we shall find ways to make that purpose one that will prevail," Dulles said in a statement.

Noting that he had arrived on Washington's birthday, Dulles said the first U.S. president "laid down principles which he hoped would enable us to preserve our freedom and, by conduct and example, help others also to be free. We have tried to live up to those ideals and, indeed, that is why we are here today."

Premier Mohammed Ali of Pakistan and Britain's Foreign Secretary Eden were expected later today.

The French contingent, under Henri Bonnet, arrived early today from Paris.

Philippine, Australian, New Zealand and Thai delegations went to Bangkok airport, along with Thai Premier Pibulsonggram, to meet Dulles. Pibulsonggram said the projected military organization for Southeast Asia probably would be delegated to a committee of military men.

One aspect of the common military establishment already has been suggested by Philippines Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Garcia. He said he would propose a common air force for collective Southeast Asia defence.

JOSEPH HENRY KNOTT

Joseph Henry Knott, 84 South John St., died in Belleville General Hospital Monday, after an illness of one year's duration. He was in his 71st year.

The deceased was born in West Bromwich, England, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Knott, and lived in England prior to moving to Belleville 45 years ago.

He is survived by his wife, the former Mary Anne Johnson; five daughters, Miss Nellie, at home; Mrs. Ray (Dorothy) Allen, of Belleville; Mrs. H. E. (Gladys) Docher, Campbellford; Mrs. William (Phyllis) Haslip and Mrs. W. M. (Betty) Reid, both of Belleville.

Also surviving him are 13 grandchildren, five great grandchildren, four sisters, Mrs. Samuel Henn, Mrs. Nellie Taylor, and Mrs. Alice Shoener, all of Belleville, and Mrs. Florence Goyer, of Guelph; and a brother, Andrew Knott of this city.

Te deceased TheFl The oldm The deceased had been a machinist's helper at the C. N. R. before retirement. He was a member of St. Thomas' Anglican church.

Resting at the Grant Funeral Home, 68 N. Front St.; the funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

ARTHUR C. SINE

The funeral of Arthur C. Sine was held Monday, Feb. 21st, from the chapel of the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home. Rev. Robert Drake conducted the service.

During the service Mr. W. (Buster) Chumbley sang a solo.

Bearers were Gordon Kennedy, Harold Beatty, Briant Casey, Morden Brough, Kenneth Denyes and Sherwin Cronkwright.

Entombment took place in Victoria cemetery vault.

CLARENCE PATRICK MULROONEY

The funeral of Clarence Patrick Mulrooney was held Tuesday, Feb. 22nd, from the Funeral Residence of George F. O'Brien to St. Michael's church where Requiem Mass was said by Very Rev. Dean L. B. Garvin.

Bearers were Thomas McAvoy, Stephen Garvin, Francis Domenico, and Frank Corrigan.

Entombment took place in St. James' cemetery vault.

Allan Defends Ontario System Of Auto Permits

TORONTO (CP)—The man who got a car driver's licence for his dog could be fined $100.

Highways Minister Allan of Ontario mentioned the possibility of a fine in the legislature Monday.

George Gordon, Liberal mezmber of the legislature for Brantford, told the dog story last week to illustrate what he said was the ease with which licences may be obtained. He didn't identify the dog or the owner.

Mr. Allan said it was possible the dog's owner used a licence renewal form, in which case a provincial issuer would be in order to honor the application.

But it was clearly stated on such forms, he added, that any false statements carry a penalty of $100.

Mr. Allan defended the province's system of issuing motor vehicle operators' permits as one recognized among the most economical, workable and satisfactory systems in North America.

"In the issuing of 1,500,000 licences a year, it is reasonable to assume that one person could make a mistake," said Mr. Allan.

"I submit that this system is satisfactory."

Mr. Allan said it was certain that some of the criticism against the licensing system was unfounded.

Mr. Allan displayed a blank operator's permit which requires, among other information, the driver's signature.

NOT THAT SMART

"I haven't seen a dog yet that could sign its own name, although there are some smart ones."

Earlier in the day a request that Mr. Gordon's statement be withdrawn if he did not provide the name of the examiner and purchaser of the licence for the dog was turned down.

Mr. Gordon said it would result in the man's dismissal.

Heifer Defies All Attempts At Capture, Makes Escape

City police and the local pound keeper turned cow-pokes early today when a flighty two-year old heifer got bogged down on the railway tracks but their roundup efforts were not altogether a success as the heifer defied all attempts at capture and made good its escape.

John Dahl, C.N.R ticket agent was first to spot the heifer as it ran wild on Cannifton road near the railway tracks. The heifer effectively blocked Dahl's car as he was on his way to work, then ran down the railway tracks where its feet dropped through the ties on the railway bridge over the Moira.

With trains soon due police were called and Constables Hall and Parker managed to get the heifer back onto its feet.

But the heifer still defied capture and police, accompanied by city dog catcher Charles Thorn, chased the animal back down the track and across Cannifton Road from where bossy made good his escape in the Hillcrest district where officers of the law lost all track.

Police still are at loss to know where the heifer came from, who its owner is — or where the heifer went.

W.C.A. Residence for Senior Women to Be Opened Soon

A non-denominational residence for senior gentlewomen will be opened at 58 Highland Ave, on March 1st, by the Women's Christian Association of Belleville.

Accommodation for 10 paying guests and a housekeeper will be provided in the new home. In addition to individual guest rooms the new home has converted spacious halls into well-appointed common rooms. Other services include a large living room, a dining room, and a utility room on the first floor where guests will have the privilege of doing their own laundry.

Guests' meals will be prepared by the housekeeper, a practical nurse.

"The new residence is not a nursing home," said Mrs. A. E. Purdy, president of the Women's Christian Association. "It is not a home for invalids. Guests must be able to go up and down stairs.

"There is no age limit for prospective guests," said Mrs. Purdy. "It is intended to be a home for those women of mature years who wish to be independent and yet would like to enjoy the companionship of people their own age."

Official opening of the new residence has been postponed until later this spring. A name for the home has not yet been decided.

Establishment of this residence is another in the long series of valuable community enterprises carried forward by the Women's Christian Association in Belleville since its founding in 1878 with Mrs. Jacques as its first president.

OPERATED UNTIL 1947

Mrs. Nathan Jones, second president of the W.C.A., turned the sod for the Belleville General Hospital, July 25th, 1884. The hospital was operated from its founding until 1947 by the Women's Christian Association without cost to Belleville taxpayers.

The W.C.A. presented the hospital and $100,000 to the city in 1947.

A Home for the Aged was operated by the W.C.A. at the corner of Dundas and South John Streets for many years. When it burned about six or seven years ago the association decided to establish a home for gentlewomen if suitable accommodation could be secured.

The new residence was purchased from Mrs. S. Hagerman in September, 1954. Since that time extensive remodelling has been carried out, including the installation of a $6,000 oil heating system, provision of bathroom facilities on all floors and new interior decoration and furnishings.

W.C.A. members who have worked hard to establish this home are: Mrs. R. M. Carmichael, Miss Norma Clarke, Mrs. T. R. Dolan, Mrs. Norman Edwards, Mrs. Earl Hickey, Mrs. Jack Marsh, Mrs. Jack Marshall, Mrs. W. C. Mikel, Mrs. A. E. Purdy and Mrs. T. Y. Wills.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO (CP) — Trade was active at prices on a par with Monday on all slaughter cattle except cows today at the Ontario stockyards.

Cows were actively firm to 50 cents higher because of eastern Canada buying interests.

Receipts: Cattle 1,020; calves 220; hogs 410; sheep and lambs 150; holdover 850 cattle.

Prices: Choice steers, all weights 21-21.25; good steers 19-21; mediums 16-19; commons 12-16; good heifers 17-17.50; a few tops at 18; mediums 14-16; commons 12-14; boner steers and heifers 10-12; good cows 12-12.50; tops of 13; heifery cows to 14; canners and cutters down to 6; good heavy bologna bulls 13-13.50; a few sales to 13.75; butcher bulls to 14; common and mediums down to 10.

Calves were steady at 28-30 for good and choice vealers; mediums 19-27; commons 1-18.

Hogs were 25-25.50 for grade A; sows 19 and stags 14 a hundredweight, dressed.

Feedlot lambs were 21.50 for good ewes and wethers; one load of 24 good southdown lambs 23; common to medium lambs 12-17. Good light sheep sold from 8 to 10 with common and heavy sheep down to 3.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—The stock market eased moderately today, with trading at the slowest pace of 1955.

The New York market was closed for George Washington's birthday.

Industrials led the decline here but drops in individual issues were mostly small.

Papers, constructions, foods and refining oils led the market down but financial institutions gained. Burns A and Canada Permanent Mortgage were off $1 or more at 1 p. m. EST while similar gains went to Canada Malting, Crown Trust, Equitable Life, Imperial Life and Traders Finance A.

Uraniums were mixed but other mining issues and western oils eased. Consolidated Denison was ahead 15 cents to $3.95 at 1 p. m. and Lorado climbed 25 to $3.85. Gunnar and Algom eased minor fractions.

PRODUCE MARKET

TORONTO (CP) — Churning cream and butter print prices were unchanged here today.

The egg market was steady with offerings light and demand steady.

Quotations provided by the Dominion department of agriculture: Eggs, graded, in fibre cases: A large 39; A medium 38; A small 34; B 32; C 26. Wholesale to retail: A large 44; A medium 43; A small 39; B 37; C 31.

Butter solids: Ont., first grade 61.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL. (CP) — The U.S. dollar was at a discount of 1 25-32 per cent the Bank of Canada reported at noon EST, today. Monday's noon rate was 98 3-32 cents. Pound sterling $2.73 5-16 against $2.72 15-16.

Auto Plunges Through Ice, Glenora Ferry Man Escapes

PICTON (Special) — Walter Lewis, 50, a resident near Glenora Ferry Dock, miraculously escaped death early Monday evening when his car plunged through the ice into sixty feet of water carrying him to the bottom. He was attempting to get out of the car when his foot caught in the door and was unable to extricate himself before the vehicle took the plunge.

A couple of friends from the Adolphustown side were visiting with Lewis during the afternoon and started for home, but Mr. Lewis, being uneasy, later drove down to the ferry dock to see if the men got across the ice safely. When the tail light disappeared he started across the ice with his car to see how they made out. It was very foggy on the ice and when Mr. Lewis was returning to the Prince Edward County side of the Bay of Quinte, he got turned around in [illegible] directions.

Believing that he was proceeding to the Glenora dock, he was suddenly confronted with an open space of water a short distance ahead. He slammed on the brakes but the car skidded and in attempting to get out his foot caught in the door and he was carried to the bottom. Somehow he forced himself clear of the car and started for the top. On reaching the top of the water he found himself under the ice. He remembered that between ice and water there was an air pocket.

Mr. Lewis turned on his back to get his breath and then started along underneath the ice to try and find the open water, which he did. He was nearly exhausted by this time but he clung to the edge of the ice to regain his strength and then crawled up on the solid ice and made his way to a nearby home.

Mr. Lewis is a former professional wrestler and his athletic training stood him in good stead.

The Glenora ferry has not been operating for the past two weeks but there is a well defined trail across the ice.

QUEEN ELIZABETH IS HOSTESS TO SHAH OF IRAN

Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi of Iran and Queen Soraya are shown with the British royal family at Buckingham Palace, London, where they were luncheon guests of Queen Elizabeth (right.) At left is the Duke of Edinburgh. Little Prince Charles and his sister, Princess Anne, were brought in to meet the royal couple. The shah is in England for a short private visit. Ex-Mayor Ken Couch Agrees To Referee 'Battle of Mayors'

TRENTON. (Special.) — Ex-Mayor Ken J. Couch noted for his impartial opinions has agreed to referee the forthcoming battle of mayors the feature attraction on the big fight program being held in the Sports' Hangar at South Station, RCAF, Trenton, Monday, February 28.

The versatile Mr. Couch, who throws a lot of weight (280 pounds to be exact) around in industrial circles and who for years took on all comers with ambitions to become local chief magistrate, considers himself qualified to meet the survivor of the Both-Burtt battle.

While no comment has yet seeped out of the closely guarded Both camp, word from Burtt's training headquarters indicates that Trenton's scrappy mayor, has ruled that challenger Couch is in a weight division all by himself and would have to lose 80 pounds before he would risk his title "Mayor of the Quinte Metropolitan Area" as, if and when he wins it. When "K.O." Ken received Mayor Burtt's ruling he predicted that the Trenton chief magistrate would hold the championship a long time if he expected him to render off nearly one-third of his gross weight. He foresees a strict diet coupled with a strenuous conditioning program weakening his great reserve power and chances to rest the belt from the winning mayor.

A Couch supporter hinted that a victorious Both may give his idol a better deal without stipulating the waistline removal project. This has been regarded as hearsay and was not printed to influence the decision of the arbitrator one way or the other. "May the best man win", remarked Ex-Mayor Couch revealing that he will spend the remaining spare time from now to next Monday night brushing up on Marquis of Queensbury rules.

BUILDING NOT DAMAGED

The Bank of Commerce building was not damaged when a car driven by Donald Brinklow, 21, of 24 Carrying Place Road, failed to negotiate the turn from King street to Dundas street and ran into it. The driver reported to police that his accelerator jammed as he was travelling south on King street and his brakes would not respond when he applied them on the slippery surface. Brinklow's car came off second best in the crash. Damage to the front fender was estimated at $15.

CAR HITS HOLE

Jack Gerow of Toronto, complained to police about a hole in the pavement Division street at the corner of Middle street. It seems that his car hit the hole and the jolt caused damage to his drive shaft and transmission mounting.

Great Card Being Arranged For Community Centre Show

TRENTON. (Special.) — Trenton is alive with talk of the Community Centre fight show coming off at the Trenton Air Station next Monday night.

Matchmaker Hub Smith, rest assured, has acquired real scrappers for this eventful program the proceeds from which will be donated in their entirety to a worthwhile cause.

Out-of-town talent heads the eight-bout card. A boy named Don Wallace, of the Barrie Athletic club meets Private Ernie Durrell with the Light Ack Ack Canadian Army, Picton. Expect some smooth action in this five round fixture. Both of these welterweights will go the limit for a win.

MAY STEAL SHOW

Local talent may steal the show however, as Eddie Schamerhorn of Belleville and Roy Deshane of Trenton intend settling an old feud. Schamerhorn according to his trainer, Mark Storms, is in beautiful shape for the five round engagement. Ex-paratrooper Deshane probably not so polished is a rugged individual with a wicked punch. His handler Jack Zigman looks for big things from him. Those who saw these two boys clash at Bayshore Park in 1953 rqemember Zigman encouraged Deshane to a close decision over the Belleville fighter.

Listed in the program as the "Star Bout" it holds promise to be just that. Fighting in the featherweight class Paul Kenny of the Barrie Athletic Club meets tough opposition in Cpl. Don Spears, Army Sigs, Kingston, who defeated a U.S. golden glove champion in the recent newsboy show in Toronto.

Local crowds will get their first appearance of middleweight Lyle Parker of the Barrie A.C., brother of ranking heavyweight J. J. Parker fighting out of New York. Parker, a sturdy lad, faces solid LAC. "Dunk" Glabois wearing Trenton RCAF Station colors. This bout can easily develop into a knock 'em down', drag 'em out affair.

OTHER GOOD BOUTS

Other bouts on the card worth watching include Cpl. Tom Casey, RCAF Station, Trenton, vs Gnr. McLean, LAA, Canadian Army, Picton, two up-and-coming young featherweights; Andre Bald, Barrie A.C. vs LAC Brian Dunovan, RCAF Station, Trenton, lightweight contenders; Bdr. Coughlin, Canadian Army, Picton, vs LAC. Roy Goodwin, RCAF Station, Trenton, welterweight division; AC. Lorne Cutting, No. 6 Repair Depot, Trenton, vs AC-2 Grant McPhee, RCAF Station, Trenton, welterweight class.

An impressive list of officials starts off with master of ceremonies, John Silver, former Warrant Officer Class I Station, Trenton, whose name has been linked with every boxing show hereabouts in the last decade. Three referees selected to handle the regular show are Mark Storm, Belleville; John Rankin, Madoc, and Hub Smith, Trenton. Judges are: Bert Wells, Belleville; Warrant Officer Ernie Bullis, RCAF Station, Camp Borden, and Sgt. Tommy Wilkinson, RCAF Station, Trenton. Official timekeeper F/S. Joe Samain, RCAF Station, Trenton. Counting for the knockdowns: LAC. Smith, No. 6 Repair Depot, Trenton. Whips: LAC. Cobban and F/S. Eric Scheunerman.

Hospital Wing Expense to Date Is $143,868

Total expense of construction of the new wing of the Belleville General Hospital to date is $143,868.

Breakdown of the financial statement of the Hospital Building Fund was made today.

Pledges total $1,233,412 of which $447,545 has been received.

Analysis of the Fund is as follows.

Federal and provincial pledges, $250,000, of which nothing has been received to date.

County of Hastings pledge, $200,000, of which $40,000 has been paid.

City of Belleville pledge, $200,000, of which nothing has been paid.

Public subscription, $583,412, of which $395,280 has been paid.

Bank interest on money to date is $12,265.

Balance on hand is $303,677.

Composers Ask For Stronger Copyright Law

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian musical compositions are finding increased favor abroad and need stronger copyright protection, the Canadian League of Composers said today.

In a submission to the royal commission on copyright, the league opposed any weakening of international copyright provisions.

The league has membership among composers of serious music and aims at promoting performance of Canadian music at home and abroad. Its brief said:

"It is earnestly believed that there is a very definite pattern of distinctively Canadian music now being written. That music is receiving a rapidly-growing attention in European countries and in the United States."

90 P.C. FROM ABROAD

The league said about 90 per cent of all money received by Canadian composers now comes from performances of their works abroad.

For that reason it was disturbed by suggestions that Canada withdraw from the Berne copyright convention, that the copyright term —now the life of the author plus 50 years—be shortened and that registration requirements be fixed.

It said a major and indispensable foundation for promotion of a distinctively Canadian culture, as envisaged by the Massey commission on arts, letters and sciences, is strengthening of copyright protection and widening of the area afforded by international agreements.

The brief said the most important benefit given composers under the Copyright Act is the exclusive right on public performance of their works.

The CBC, it said, gives generous assistance to Canadian composers through public performance over its stations. Less assistance was given by private stations.

PLEA CONVINCES

NEWARK, N. J. (AP)—Thomas Dowd's loyalty to his patron saint earned him an abbreviated sentence for drunkenness Monday. The 53-year-old man complained to magistrate Anthony Giuliano a 60-day term would force him to miss the St. Patrick's Day parade. The judge promptly reduced it to 25 days.

ALLAN EXPECTS

"In the Niagara peninsula, I am happy to announce that tenders are to be called in April or early May for paving the existing unpaved lane of the Queen Elizabeth way between Niagara Falls and Fort Erie. Plans also are being developed for a new controlled access entrance to Fort Erie.

"At St. Catharines, contract was awarded just a few days ago for the Lake street traffic interchange with the Queen Elizabeth way. Contracts for the Geneva and Welland street interchanges will follow shortly.

"Plans for linking up Toronto bypass portion of Highway 401 and the Woodstock-London section are well underway. A line has been surveyed from a point where Highway 27 merges into the bypass through the outskirts of Brampton and the Galt, Preston, Guelph and Kitchener areas.

"In eastern Ontario traffic bottleneck relief projects are well under way. The Kingston by-pass between Highways 38 and 15 is about 80 er cent completed. Tying-in with Highway 2 at either end should begin this year. Work on Brockville bypass was let some six months ago and is proceeding to tie in with the Prescott-Cornwall by-pass which must be ready in time for flooding due to the St. Lawrence river power developments.

ELIMINATE BOTTLENECK

"Storm-damaged bridges on Highways 11 and 400 north of Toronto should again be in full service by beginning of the tourist season.

"By that time, too, there will no longer be a traffic bottleneck at Orillia. Traffic interchanges will carry lines of vehicles without interruption towards Muskoka and North Bay, Owen Sound and Midland, the new Georgian bay area opened by Highway 69, trans-Canada, which should be carrying traffic to Sudbury in July; and to vacation areas in the highlands of Haliburton and the Kawartha lakes areas in Victoria and Peterborough counties.

"A new $2,000,000 bridge and CNR overpass, soon to be completed, will cure the traffic blockage at Washago. Studies are proceeding to bypass Huntsville just as the towns of Gravenhurst and Bracebridge have been bypassed, to their own advantage, by greatly improved Highway 11."

Mr. Allan said that this year his department is inaugurating a policy which should encourage municipal road authorities in counties and townships to construct work of a permanent or long-term value.

"If approved, such work might include sections of municipal roads that could widen market areas and develop useful traffic. They might be links between main provincial highways. . . .

"The department also has in mind construction of large and modern municipal roads bridges, roomy and designed to carry heavy traffic now, and, no doubt heavier traffic in the future."

Mr. Allan thanked the press of the province for supporting provincial and community efforts aimed at reducing traffic accidents.

He said the department plans to expand its traffic studies activities in the metropolitan Toronto area and elsewhere.

"We already have 21 electronic and automatic stations in Ontario to collect facts about traffic and how it varies from hour to hour and day to day. This year we hope to increase the number of these stations to 50.

"This departmental effort also is helipng t odevelo traffic engineering opportunities for young Canadians."

With reference to winter safety measures, Mr. Allan said the department spent $2,300,000 for de-icing chemicals during the 10 months ended last Jan. 31. Of this, $1,537,616 was for salt, which usually is mixed with sand well in advance of the need for distribution.

"These purchases pay off in safety and maintaining uninterrupted flow of traffic on highways for 12 months each year. This modest outlay also provides another safety factor for transporting our children to consolidated grade and district high schools."

200 Cubs, Scouts Honor Memory of Baden-Powell

MIDDLETON PARK — A great man and the founder of a great organization, Lord Baden-Powell of Gilwell, was honored on Sunday by a memorial service held in the auditorium of A/C/M Breadner public school.

Approximately 200 Cubs, and Scouts, accompanied by their parents attended the service.

At the opening the Color Party, under the command of F/L J. Savage, advanced to the stage. After the singing of O Canada, the colors were received by Wing Commander W. G. Dever.

The opening prayer was read by a Scout and the hymn "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus" was sung.

Scouting District Commissioner Art Jackson spoke to the gathering about Cubbing and Scouting. Mr. Jackson stressed the point that the past Chief Scout Lord Baden-Powell helped create a belief in the Brotherhood of Man, and commended the boys to work together to acomplish things which they couldn't do alone.

Mr. Jackson also told about a group of boys who were asked what they thought would enable nations to live in peace. These boys came up with the following five thoughts:

(1) We must create a new enthusiasm towards religion.

(2) We should not let modern conveniences create a disturbance in the home.

(3) Start a home in our own districts to overcome evil amongst ourselves.

(4) We should stand up for our Christian ideals.

(5) We should set an example to others to help overcome the evil desires in their lives.

Station Trenton's Commanding Oicer Group Captain G. G. Diamond, AFC, was called upon and expressed his pleasure at being present and asked the boys to keep up their good work in Cubbing and Scouting.

After the singing of God Save the Queen the Color Party received the colors and retired.

The ceremony's closing prayer was read by a Scout.

SCOUTS AND CUBS

The parents of four Cubs in the "Meteor Pack" attended the Investiture Ceremonies for their boys. The boys: Garry Woods, Garry Dilworth, John Stevens and Walter Sallows were invested by Akela Jack Fowler, assisted by Ross Lindsay (Bagheera) and Jack Yetman, (Balloo).

RCAF SODALITY MEETS

The RCAF Sodality of Our Lady, met last Tuesday evening in the Sunday school room at South Station. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. H. Beninger and reports were given by the conveners of the various committees.

All members attended Mass in the chapel.

Rev. Father W. Dunphy, spiritual director, addressed the Sodalists, conveying to them the necessity of spiritualizing their daily lives.

The members then returned to the Sunday school room to resume their meeting.

A letter of resignation, received from Mrs. H. Dawes, co-ordinator for the annual tea and bazaar, was read to the members and the resignation was accepted. Nominations to fill this vacancy will be carried out at a later date.

The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served during the social hour which followed.

ARABIAN FANTASY

The year the fashion and variety show, presented by the Women's Auxiliary of Station Trenton, will be called "Arabian Fantasy." So, once a week the Social Centre on the station is turned into a little bit of Arabia, as exotic harem girls, sheiks and slaves, rehearse their parts.

Written by Flight Lieutenant J. F. Radcliffe, Arabian Fantasy also includes fashions and models from around the Quinte district. F/L Radcliffe has previously worked with a troupe of actors in England. He also acted as stage manager for Station Trenton's past presentations.

Flight Lieutenant R. Stokes, the director, was a member of the "Ralph Reader Gang," which produced shows overseas before the Second World War. After the war Mr. Stokes toured Northern Scotland with different shows.

In the cast are many names which are fast becoming well known to the Quinte district public. Names such as Mrs. R. F. Murray, who was the convener of "Comet Flight to Paris 1954"; Jack Wallace and his harmonica; Mr. H. Prudens, who is originating some of the music for the show and training the Station Choral Group; Mrs. E. R. McDowell and her dancers, and the Training Command Band, promise "a good show for fifty-five."

Due to the increasing popularity of the Fashion and Variety Shows this year's presentation will run for three nights, March 30th and 31st and April 1st.

In the past a portion of the show's proceeds have been donated to the Trenton Memorial Hospital nursery. This year, however, part of the income from the Opportunity Shop, which has been a steady source of income for the W.A., has been voted to the hospital account. This will enable the Auxiliary to use the proceeds to aid two other worthy causes: the Trenton Community Centre and the Middleton Park Community Activities.

Arabian Fantasy will be co-convened by two young officers' wives, Mrs. G. V. Frostad and Mrs. T. D. MacCaulay.

HARRIMANS HONORED

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP)—The legislature took time out Monday night to wish Governor and Mrs. Averell Harriman a happy 25th wedding anniversary. Resolutions extending "heartiest congratulations" were adopted in the Senate and Assembly. The governor and his wife celebrated their anniversary at an informal reception.

POPULATION STATISTICS

The 1871 census showed Canada's population to be 689,257. In 1951 the population was 14,009,429. That as an increase of 281 per cent in eight decades.

Since 1951, it is estimated, Canada's population has rown another million. Hon. J. W. Pickersgill, Minister f Immigration, told the House of Commons on Thursday f last week that in the past seven years Canada's population has increased by 25 per cent. This increase includd a bonanza of 250,000 new Canadians when Newfoundand became part of Canada. We are not likely to pick p another bonus like that in the future, but even with ut these Newfoundlanders our rate of population increase n the past seven years would have been impressive.

You doubt it? You think that, even with the Newoundlanders included, our population increase in the past even years was no greater than the average for the past ighty years, as shown by the figures quoted above? You oint out that there are eleven seven-year periods in eight ecades and that eleven times 25 per cent is only 275 per ent, or less than the 281 per cent increase already noted? Vell, figures are tricky, so let us see what would have hapened had Canada enjoyed a 25 per cent increase in popuation every seven years since 1871.

Taking the 1871 population at 3,600,000 for simplicy's sake, we find that at the rate of 25 per cent increase n population every seven years we should have had 4,00,000 people by 1878, 5,625,000 by 1885, over 7,000,000 y 1892, 8,750,000 by 1899, almost 11,000,000 by 1906, 13,50,000 by 1913, over 17,000,000 by 1920, over 21,000,000 by 927, over 26,000,000 by 1934, 34,000,000 by 1941, 42,000,000 y 1948 and Canada's population would be over 52½ milion people this year.

These figures give us an insight into the real meanng of growth at the rate of a 25 per cent increase in poplation in seven years. If that rate is continued for even hree decades, our present population of 15,000,000 will ave grown to over 36 million people by 1885, while by the nd of the century it would be over 56,000,000.

Looking at statistics again, it is fascinating to note he change in the distribution of the population, on a perentage basis.

There are, of course, significant similarities between he situation in 1871 and today. Then, as now, Ontario was he most populous province. In 1871 it had 43.94 per ent of the country's population. This climbed to 44.56 er cent by 1881 and has since fallen steadily, to 32.82 er cent in 1951. It is possible, though, that the large roportion of immigrants who settle in Ontario may reult in reversing this trend at the next census. Quebec, with 32.30 per cent of the population in 1871, saw this figre fall to 26.86 per cent by 1921, then start to climb, eaching 28.96 per cent in 1941 and falling only slightly, o 28.95 per cent, in 1951.

Fascinating are the figures for the Northwest Territories. In 1871 they had 1.30 per cent of the nation's opulation. While Canada grew in population, these territories declined in size, as new provinces were formed. t is not surprising, therefore, to learn that the Territories' proportion of the country's population was down to 09 per cent in 1911. It held there for two decades and ince, with the discovery of the rich resources of the vast wilderness which now comprises the Territories, the population has increased until by 1951 it was .11 per cent of he nation's total population.

MOOSE MUST BE PLENTIFUL

Canadian investment firms are worried by evidence of a growing epidemic of "get-rich-quick-fever" amongst Canadians with average incomes.

They are trying to convince would-be speculators that he stock market is not a one-way street to riches, that, n the words of one Toronto broker, "prices can drop as well as climb."

Greenshields and Co. of Montreal made the followng observation in a recent letter;

"Many so-called uranium companies have nothing more than moose pastures upon which they base all kinds of claims to entice the public to buy stocks."

This type of warning is becoming increasingly common. Time and again we hear reference to "moose pasture."

Judging from the number of new "uranium companies" there are a lot more moose in Canada than most moose hunters would ever have believed.

SIMPLE, ISN'T IT, PAUL?

Hon. Paul Martin, Federal Minister of Health, says that the threat of atomic attack on Canada is too great to permit the "idle luxury of debating" whether the federal, provincial or municipal governments should pay for civil defence.

Well, let's see. If municipalities pay for civil defence, this matter must be approved by hundreds of municipalities, scattered throughout Canada. If the provinces pay for it, the approval of ten provincial legislatures is required. If the Federal Government pays, the Liberal majority would require only a few minutes to get the authorization through the House of Commons, if this type of formality is thought necessary.

So who should pay, since we cannot afford the "idle luxury of debating?"

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Though I am not George
Washington,
His birthday brings the thought to me:
I wonder what my dad had done
Had I chopped down his cherry tree.

I wonder what my dad had said
If I had looked him in the eye
And answered, as did George,
[illegible] dad:
"Father, I cannot tell a lie."

I doubt that on that fateful day,
Discovering the fallen tree,
That he would smile on me and say:
Some day a president you'll be.

Though slow to anger was my dad,
And always very fond of me,
I think that day his truthful lad
Had sprawled, face down, upon his knee.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 22nd., 1935

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Women's Conservative Club, which was held in the club rooms, the following officers were elected: Hon. presidents, Mrs. G. W. McCarthy, Mrs. J. W. Kinnear, Mrs. Geo. A. Reid, Mrs. Hope McGinnis and Miss Alice Corby; president, Mrs. F. B. Brodribb; first vice president, Mrs. Williamson; second vice president, Mrs. R. H. Ketcheson; treasurer, Miss A. Harold; secretary, Mrs. Reg. Arnott; pianist, Mrs. Bell; Red Cross representative, Mrs. J. Neate; V. O. N. representative, Mrs. W. Woodley and Mrs. I. Moore. A pleasing feature of the meeting was the presentation of a beautiful basket of flowers to Miss Harold as a slight expression of the appreciation of her valued services as treasurer of the club for eight years, and also the presentation of silver candlesticks to Mrs. Hope McGinnis for her untiring services as president. The presentations were made by Mrs. McCarthy.

Miss Marie Benson is spending a few days at her home at Ivanhoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fisher of Montreal, formerly of Belleville, are spending a few days here with relatives.

30 YEARS AGO

February 22nd., 1925

Ald. G. W. Dawes will leave tomorrow for Ottawa where he will join a deputation which will wait upon the government with regards to assistance for the unemployed.

Mr. S. G. Way, proprietor of the Tweed Advocate, has been elected president of the Tweed Board of Trade, which has been revived.

Mr. Frank P. Thompson and Mr. Hector Poste of the Ritchie Company have left to visit manufacturers in Toronto, Kitchener, Waterloo and Stratford in the interests of the firm.

From our file copy at this time in 1895: Miss Gordon, superintendent of the local hospital, will give a course of eight lectures at the hospital to ladies on practical nursing commencing March 6. The fee for the course is $3, and the proceeds will go towards the fund which is being raised to buy an ambulance.

40 YEARS AGO

February 22nd., 1915

Mr. H. A. Logan, manager of the Great Northwestern Telegraph office in this city, has enlisted as a telegraph operator with the second contingent for overseas service and has left for Kingston. He will be succeeded by Mr. C. R. Fawthorpe of Cornwall.

A barn on West Bridge Street owned by George Evans was destroyed by fire last evening. Several buggies, harness, tents and utensils were destroyed.

The team of the Deacon Shirt Company defeated the Printers in a hockey match last evening, the score being 8 to 4. The following composed the teams: — Printers, — McCullough, Mason, Riggs, French, Bales, Ford and Barlow; Deacons, — Hinchey, Titterson, Finkle, Barrett, Hibbard, Alexander and Rayfield. Mr. Deacon will entertain the members of both teams at an oyster supper next Tuesday evening.

50 YEARS AGO

February 22nd., 1905

The city clock is very poorly lighted. Something should be done about this.

Mr. James B. Gibson, formerly of this city, now of Yorkton, Sask., is visiting his wife's parents, Ald. A. G. Vermilyea and Mrs. Vermilyea, West Bridge Street.

Mr. Ernest Maag and Mrs. Maag, formerly Miss Mary Holton at one time a resident of this city and lately of Bloomington, Ill., have taken up residence here on Bridge Street east, near McDonald Avenue.

Mr. Joseph James of Actinolite is spending a few days in town and is stopping at Hotel Quinte.

Mr. Adam Linton of Campbellford, formerly of this city, was a visitor in town today.

Mr. W. S. Miller of Frankford was a visitor in town today.

Mr. B. Cotter of Madoc was in town today.

Doubts Women Stronger Now

(Ottawa Journal)

The United Kingdom Post Office has withdrawn a rule that women employees must not lift packages heavier than 15 pounds, giving the reason that modern girls are stronger.

We doubt it. We think the strongest women in history were the wives of the pioneers of Canada and the United States. Their memorial in song is the ballad about the 21 children who came to bless the little sod shack in the wilderness. Greatgrandma made 23 meals three times a day and that's how she fritted her time away.

At the risk of being termed unchivalrous we suggest that girls who can ski all day and dance all night, who can drive a golf ball 300 yards and finish their housework in two hours flat any day, are quite strong enough to lift even 20 pounds if put to the pinch. They may not want to do it, for the Post Office or anyone else. Neither do we for that matter, but men, being stupid oxen, like people to think they are stronger than they are. Women are different.

Getting Fast Service

(Niagara Falls Review)

To get fast service try to sit two at a table for four. That way the management will see that you get a rush order to get rid of you.

Would Outlaw Fine Print

(Edmonton Journal)

A familiar warning phrase may pass out of the English language if other governments follow the lead of the Rhode Island legislature. It is now considering a law which requires insurance policies to be printed in "type no smaller than the capital letters of a standard typewriter." In Rhode Island, at least it will no longer be necessary to "read the fine print."

Actually, the golden age of fine print has long been over. A century or so ago, unscrupulous firms often set out controversial clauses in contracts in type so microscopic as to be almost unreadable. Customers perusing the document in haste often overlooked such clauses—especially when they were also artfully concealed by a fold in the paper, or under an overleaf. Only later would the victim learn that, say, the stage coach company had contracted out of all responsibility for his baggage, or that his insurance policy would come due only if he were struck by lightning.

Those Future Hats

(Hamilton Spectator)

A hundred thousand years from now, says a scientist, human beings will have enormous heads to contain their super-developed brains. What makes us shudder is the thought of the scope that this will give to the designers of women's hats.

Best Flying Machine

(By Guy Murchie Jr. in the Atlantic)

Can you imagine any better example of divine creative accomplishment than the consummate flying machine that is a bird?

Flight demands greater intensity of effort than does any other means of animal locomotion, and so a bird's heart beats many times per second, its breathing is correspondingly rapid, and its blood has more red corpuscles per ounce than any other creature. As would be expected of a high speed engine, the bird's temperature is high: a duck's 109.1 and a swift's 111.2 degrees.

Fuel consumption is so great that most birds have a kind of carburetor called a crop for straining and preparing their food before it is injected into the combustion cylinders of the stomach and intestines, and the speed of peristaltic motion is prodigious. You may have heard of the young robin who ate 14 feet of earthworm the first day after leaving the nest, or the house wren who was recorded feeding its young 1,217 times between dawn and dusk. Young crows have been known to eat more than their own weight in food per day, and an adolescent chickadee was checked eating over 550 canker worm eggs for a week.

• • •

The main flying motors fed by this bird fuel are the pectoral muscles, the greater of which pulls down the wing against the air to drive the bird upward and downward, while the lesser hoists the wings back up again. These pectorals, by the way, are the solid white meat attached to the breast-bone.

Man cannot hope to match the bird in sensitivity of flying control. This is not to say, however, that the bird is a faultless flyer. Birds make plenty of mistakes—even forced landings. I saw a heron one day muff a landing in a tree, stall, and fall to the ground, breaking his leg. This is particularly apt to happen to heavy birds like ducks when they are tired. Sometimes ducks lose half a pound on a long migratory flight and are so exhausted on letting down that they splash into the water and cannot take off again for hours.

• • •

The energy of a heavy bird at take-off is very great. It has been estimated at five times normal cruising energy. Many birds, like the swan, need a runway in addition to the most furious beating of wings to get up enough speed to leave the ground. All birds take off against the wind for the same reason that an airplane does: To gain air speed, which is obviously more significant than ground speed at take-off. You have surely noticed that birds feeding by the lee roadside will often take off across the path of an approaching car, actually tempting death to gain the wind's help.

Heavy birds that dwell on cliffs have the advantage of being able to make a catapult take-off, but again they must beware of landing at a place where this needed gravitational asset is not available.

• • •

I heard of a loon that made the mistake of alighting on a small pond set amid a forest of tall pines. When he wanted to take off an hour later he found himself stymied. He could not climb steeply enough to clear the trees or turn sharply enough to spiral out. He was seen thrashing along over the water, whipping the waves with his wings to get under way, even pedalling at the water desperately with his webbed feet before getting into the air. He almost made it a couple of times but also nearly got killed crashing into the big trees.

Finally he had to give up. But this particular loon was lucky. After four frustrated days in his pond jail a very strong wind came up and enabled him to take off and climb so steeply against it that he just brushed between the treetops and was free.

CRAZY PEOPLE

If anyone at the end of the year 1776 had said that George Washington was crazy, two-thirds of the colonists would have agreed. Didn't this officer know when he was defeated? No, he did not; and between December 26, 1776 and January 6, 1777, he fought the battles of Trenton and Princeton, winning what Frederick the Great called the most astounding achievement in modern military history.

During the winter of 1777-78, if anyone had again said that George Washington was crazy, he would have found himself heartily agreed with by most people. Did Washington and his suffering little handful of colonials at Valley Forge think they could defeat the British Empire? Yes, they did; and when spring came Washington received the joyful news that France was ready to help him do it.

There have been crazy men all through history, and some of these were pivotal points upon whom history turned. Columbus, who wanted to sail around the world and find out what was on the other side, was evidently crazy. Didn't he know that when he got there he would fall off? And some years before, a crazy fellow named Galileo had claimed that the earth revolved about the sun instead of the sun about the earth—which was obviously absurd, as one would know if he used his eyes.

But these, regarded by many of their contemporaries as crazy, "obtained a good report through faith," and faith "is the giving substance to things hoped for, the test of things not seen."

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

At one of those tea party-cocktail party affairs in Ottawa, at which, if press photographers are present, you can discreetly set down your cocktail glass and pick up somebody's teacup, I noticed Prime Minister St. Laurent and a chap I know in the External Affairs department over in a corner engaged in gravest colloquy. The Prime Minister lowered his head and, peering up under his eyebrows, listened intently to what the External Affairs fella was saying. The conversation went on for some time, and I could not take my eyes off them. Russia, perhaps? Or some weird angle developing in Washington?

When a few minutes later the External affairs fella came past me in the crowd, I asked him point blank what on earth he and the Prime Minister had been discussing so gravely in public, here at a tea party.

"Cough mixtures," said the External Affairs grandee. "I ran into the most wonderful cough remedy . . ."

He was on the point of giving me the prescription when I went and got another cup of tea.

It is disappointing to discover that our most distinguised citizens are just everyday, ordinary people like you and me. It is absurd of us to imagine they live in a sort of Valhalla, apart from us mortals. When you come to think of it, even Sir Winston Churchill, when the long day is done, has to toddle up to bed and take off his coat and vest and hang them on a chair back. Then he has to stand, even as you and I, in front of the mirror, gloomily surveying what he sees there reflected, while he undoes his necktie and hangs it, all crinkled, on that knob on the side of the mirror.

Bending down and grunting, President Eisenhower, at bed time, has to undo his shoe laces and kick the shoes off. He, like you and me, has to slip his braces, lower his britches, and step out of them, melancoly, and toss them across a chair. There, too, he stands in his shirt-tail and baggy-kneed longs, since, to be old enough to be famous, you likely wear longs.

Then the pyjamas, and then the yawn. And then the grateful slide under the covers, to sleep, even as you or I, arm under the pillow, all sprawled out . . .

Sleep well, ye great men, in these dark times. We wish you, our fellow men, kindly sleep.

Balloon Bomb Found in North

(St. Paul Pioneer Press)

One of the scarces of World War II is recalled by the finding of a Japanese balloon bomb in the wilds of northeast Alaska. It was still in working condition after 10 year's exposure to the weather. The bomb will go to laboratories for examination and will reside permanently in the air force technical museum at Dayton, Ohio.

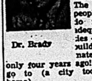
Most Americans remember the Japanese balloons which were released in great numbers to float on the winds across the Pacific to America. They were largely made of paper, but some proved remarkably durable and landed in spots on American soil as far east as Iowa and as far south as the Mexican border.

Paper balloons seem fantastic weapons indeed to be utilized in the same decade as that which sees present day guided missiles and rocket planes.

Personal Health Talks

By DR. WM. BRADY

OLD TIMERS HAD BETTER HEED



Dr. Brady

My doctor believes in natural childbirth and rooming in, (writes an expectant mother who has borne one child) but the hospital refuses to cooperate on rooming-in. The hospital people say they do not have adequate facilities — this after building a new maternity wing only four years ago! So I must go to (a city too far from home) . . .

(Letters like this are coming in steadily increasing volume these days.)

I bore my first child when I was 19. I wanted to have my baby naturally, thanks to enlightenment by a very dear mother. Except for the first stage of labor I never knew a thing, as an ether mask was slapped on my face without my consent. I have a vague memory of coming to momentarily to see my hands in the air trying to fight off anesthesia. I was then put out again and knew nothing of my child's advent into the world. I was not even allowed to see my baby for 24 hours, a ridiculous practice if ever there was one! This was a deep disappointment and . . . modern hospitals take away any natural instincts a mother may have . . . discourage breast feeding . . . no wonder family life is . . .

(Mrs. . . . .)

The hospital people who "refuse to co-operate" because they do not have adequate facilities are ignorant or dishonest or both. Such 19th century institutions are reluctant to discard (1) the Laura Jean Lib atmosphere they manage to maintain in the obstetrics department—it intimidates the expectant mother, especially if she is as ignorant as a Laura Jean heroine should be; and it makes the expectant father play without protest the boob role in the monkey cage, while whatever goes on is going on behind the white enamel curtain; (2) the plate glass show window in which the unfortunate newborn infants are crowded together for exhibition while nearnurses go through the motions of attending them and conveying infection from one to another — it is in the newborn nursery that fatal epidemics of infantile diarrhea occur; and (3) the arbitrary hospital rules and regulations which so admirably keep customers in line.

This expectant mother says "It is almost uncanny to see in print —Dr. Grantly Dick Read's Childbirth Without Fear (Harpers) — thoughts I have had for years . . . how precious are those first days in a baby's life!"

Precious indeed, if the baby has a real mother, but not so precious if the mother doesn't cuddle, love, nurse, care for and watch over her baby, whenever she pleases from the very first.

The cold "scientific" 19th century hospital rules and regulations to which customers without character so meekly submit contribute, I believe, to the American tragedy of divorce. I mean to imply that the separation of husband and wife at the supreme moment of their wedded life makes the idea of divorce less abhorrent. From professional observation and personal experience I believe every husband should be at his wife's side when their baby is being born, and if tricky hospital "regulations" do not permit it, then it is much better to have the baby at home.

Intelligent Sea Gulls

(London Answers)

T.E. Elwell has reason to think sea gulls are among the most intelligent of birds. He has proved that two he knows possess reasoning power and acting ability.

For some time Elwell, of Ramsay, Isle of Man, has been in the habit of feeding sea gulls from his window. Recently he noticed a one-legged gull attempting to get its share of the crumbs and fish scraps he left on the window sill. But its handicap put it at a disadvantage, and even when it managed to get to the food, the other birds pushed it out of their way.

Then it was noticed that the cripple did not come during the day when other were around. It came instead at dusk, and Elwell watched for it and gave it a good meal.

On one occasion, however, he realized that the cripple was actually another sea gull which was acting a part, alighting on one leg and keeping the other tucked beneath it.

Now Elwell has to look closely to see whether the solitary sea gull which arrives for its evening meal is really the one legged bird or the clever masquerader.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

DARE IT IN FAITH!

It is always an inspiration to read about a man who has come up from a humble youth to an outstanding position of responsibility and usefulness. It is an exceptional honor and privilege to meet such a man, as I did recently. Today the name of Harlow Curtice, President of General Motors, is almost a household name throughout the nation, a man who once put a Want Ad into a newspaper for a job—a job that he got and immediately made so important that he attracted others to him, finally reaching the great position that he holds today.

What sort of a man is he? I would say kindly, courteous, modest, and with eyes that have a look to them of having always dared in faith! Men of the courage and ability that Mr. Curtice has demonstrated are all too few but eventually someone, somewhere, finds them out, and no job is too big for them to hold.

The story of the miraculous growth of this Western world has been wirtten by men and women who dared and went ahead, led by their indomitable and never-dying faith. They have been religious, God-fearing men and women. They had vision. That vision is bigger today than ever because of the inspired example of those who led the way, demonstrating what could be done. Is there anything worth while that cannot be achieved by daring, backed up by faith?

It took daring and faith to put those tubes under the Hudson River from New York City to New Jersey—but it was done by daring men after many another had given up the idea or failed in it. Who ever dreamed that we would have planes that would soar through the air at over 600 miles an hour? We thought it was a great achievement when the Wrights stayed in the air for a mile or so!

Why can't there be a universal daring for peace in the world? Imagine what would happen to mankind if say 50,000,000 men and women of the free world should give themselves over to faith and prayer for peace, daily, until it should be achieved. That would mean more than any material triumph imaginable!

ALLOCATIONS

The Rev. L. S. Throop, chairman of the Church Extension committee, challenged the members of Presbytery to finish the task of raising their allocations for the Church Extension Fund.

Several members told of the spirit of self-sacrifice shown by congregations to raise money for this important fund, which has made possible the erecting of scores of new church buildings in new housing areas around cities, in mining areas, and in industrial developments.

The Rev. Arthur Packman, of Stirling, gave a vivid picture of new churches erected at Swastika, and other Northern Ontario centres.

The Rev. James Mackay, Home Mission superintendent, spoke of Knob Lake, Quebec, where Mr. Douglas Ross served as supply for two summers. Mr. Ross is student minister at North Trenton United church, at the present time.

The congregation at Knob Lake have asked for the services of a full time minister and will pay $2,500 toward salary and provide a residence. This congregation is anxious to build a church and will endeavor to raise approximately $19,000 themselves.

College Hill United church in Belleville is an illustration of the help given through the Church Extension Fund. This church has already accepted its allocation to assist other churches.

Some churches have delayed much needed building programs of their own in order to raise money for church extension while others have delayed paying off their mortgages in order to meet their church extension allocation. It is hoped that all the various churches in the Belleville Presbytery will carry out this church need at an early date. The churches who do not provide for this allocation will be visited by a special committee to explain the details and present a concise picture to the various congregations, of this phase of church work.

Rev. C. H. Dickinson, D.D., Book Steward of the United church, told of the encouraging results thus far of "The United Church Observer Every Family Plan", which has increased the number of subscribers within 18 months from 45,000 to 160,000. He urged other congregations to give the idea a try and endeavor to promote the idea at home and abroad.

It was announced that a series of Lay rallies will be held in March. The itinerary is Coe Hill, March 7th, Consecon, March 8th, Marmora, March 9th; Selby on the 10th, and Cannifton on the 11th.

A special appeal was made to pay off the debt on Quin-Mo-Lac Camp this year.

Seven hundred boys and girls and teen-agers attend this camp each summer where they receive inspiration and enjoy recreation.

The Lay Association held its meeting directly after luncheon, and the various committees met to discuss their own particular problems.

Dynamic Woman Directs World Welfare Projects

By PAULINE KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, dynamic director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, spoke a little hoarsely on her latest visit to Toronto.

She has just completed her regular winter cross-country speaking tour and will start preparing for her summer visits abroad to study the relief projects which the committee handles in Korea, Greece and India.

The trim, red-haired executive explained the hoarseness. "I spoke 89 times in seven weeks." That is part of the work she does for the committee, which needs at least $160,000 a year to maintain Unitarian aid commitments abroad.

SUCCESSFUL PROJECTS

The former Czechoslovakian journalist and social worker introduced the service committee to Canada 10 years ago. Each summer abroad she investigates conditions and gets new ideas for the best use of the relief funds. Each winter in Canada she reports her findings and suggestions to women's clubs, church groups and anyone who will listen.

Most successful past projects included the "Milk for Korea" fund which gave 25,000 children milk in the cold months, and the "Barley for Korea" drive which provided 125,000 with hot barley porridge during lean spring months.

This year Dr. Kitschmanova initiated "Operation Codfish," a plan to supply 350,000 pounds of dried salted codfish to supplement the unbalanced diet of Korean children.

A dollar's worth of cod, she says, will feed a child for two months.

CONSTANT REMINDERS

"I try to keep peoplez interested in giving money and clothing to our causes," Dr. Hitschmanova said, "but it's no easy job. Korea and India are so far away and you must keep reminding people of the need."

Among current service committee schemes are powdered milk for Korean babies suffering malnutrition, sewing machines for Korean war widows, blankets for Greek earthquake victims, jeep ambulance units for India and clothing collections.

Dressed in the jaunty olive green uniform of the service committee, she got more animated and enthusiastic as she talks of her last world tour, her third.

"I found more optimism and change in India and Korea than ever before," she said. She returned from the tour last August.

PROGRESS IN INDIA

In India Dr. Hitschmanova especially noticed a new attitude of progress.

"India is learning to stand on its own feet and no longer resents the Westerner," she said. "They have begun to realize that we want to help, not exploit."

India, as never before in its long history, also is looking to its women for leadership.

One male Indian government official confided to Dr. Hitschmanova that behind every new project in health, education, housing or community planning the prodding hand of a woman can usually be found.

"Women's little schemes may seem inconsequential," she said. "but they concern themselves with basic things such as social welfare which builds a stronger nation."

TO SEARCH AGAIN

CARLISLE, Eng. (AP) — Brian Fawcett said Sunday he will leave for Brazil in April to take up the search for his explorer father and brother, Col. Percy Fawcett and Jack Fawcett, who vanished 30 years ago in the jungles. Fawcett plans to fly over grass hut villages in the West Matto Grosso region in the hopes his father or brother —if still alive—will appear when they hear the plane. He conducted a similar search in early 1952.

GERMANS POKE FUN

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—Traditional carnival season parades were held in a dozen West German cities today. The main theme was politics. Floats poked fun at German rearmament, American occupation, Soviet policy and France's death-blow to EDC, (European Defence Community). In Frankfurt, spectators cheered when one of the revelers dressed as Uncle Sam led a soldier of Germany's proposed army by the nose with a long chain.

Two Ministers Say Government Opposes Move

OTTAWA (CP) — Two cabinet ministers said Monday the government opposes deductions for any purpose from money owed stern grain pevbgkqjcmfwypmfw western grain producers by the Canadian wheat board.

Trade Minister Howe and Justice Minister Garson stated the government's position before the Commons voted down 91 to 66 a Liberal back-bencher's resolution to have farmers asked by plebiscite whether they want the board to deduct from grain payments their membership dues to farm organizations.

Vote on the resolution, proposed by John Decore, lawyer from Alberta's mixed-farming area of Vegreville, cut across party lines. It received unanimous support from the CCF. All but one Social Credit member voted for it, along with minority sections of the Liberal and Progressive Conservative parties.

VOTE BREAKDOWN

Favoring it were 10 Liberals, 21 Progressive Conservatives, 22 CCF and 13 Social Credit members.

Liberals who voted with Mr. Decore were Walter Tucker, Rosthern former Saskatchewan Liberal leader; Irvin Studer, Swift Current-Maple Creek; George Weaver, Churchill; T. J. Kickham, Kings; A. B. Weselak, Springfield; W. A. Pommer, Lisgar; James A. Byrne, Kootenay East; Elmore Philpott, Vancouver South, and J. M. Dechene, Athabaska.

The resolution was opposed by 81 Liberals, six Progressive Conservatives; W. D. Wylie (SC—Medicine Hat); and three Quebec independents—Paul Gagnon, Chicoutimi, Fernand Girard, Lapointe, and Raoul Poulin, Beauce.

PCs WHO OPPOSED

The six dissenting Progressive Conservatives were John B. Hamilton, York West; Douglas Harkness, Calgary South; Frank E. Lennard, Wentworth; Dr. Owen C. Trainor, Winnipeg South; A. J. Brooks, Royal, and Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, Esquimalt-Saanich.

Mr. Garson and Mr. Howe said the Wheat Board Act prohibits any deductions from sums owed to farmers by the board. They said the proposal would destroy this immunity and open the way for creditors to make claims against farmers' money in possession of the board.

Mr. Garson said the prohibition also prevented the farmer from being harassed by garnisheeing orders issued by the courts.

Locate Four Persons Missing In Far North

EDMONTON (CP) — Four persons missing on a flight in the northern Arctic since Sunday have been spotted by an RCAF Flying Boxcar and appear unhurt.

Air force officials at Edmonton said Monday night the aircraft was sighted about 44 miles southwest of Cambridge bay, 1,500 miles north of Edmonton. The four unidentified persons seemed unhurt and the aircraft appeared not damaged. The officials said the single-engined Beaver may only have minor trouble.

Food was dropped to the party and an RCMP constable stationed at Cambridge bay was to start today by dog team for the downed plane, owned by Ward Air Ltd., of Yellowknife, N. W. T.

Ward Air will have charge of rescue operations. Temperatures in the area when the Beaver took off were about 35 below zero.

Czech Skater Likes Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. Jan Pachl, mother of 17-year-old figure skater Carol Jane Pachl who is reported to have been friendly with a Czech skating star who "vanished" in Vienna, said Monday the Czech skater had written her about coming to Canada.

Mrs. Pachl said in an interview she first met Miroslaca Nachodska in London in the summer of 1946. At the time, the 29-year-old skater told her she had had an offer from an English ice show, but had turned it down in favor of returning to her own country for the national skating championship.

Miss Nachodska, a member of the Czech skating team in the world championships at Vienna, is reported to be seeking political asylum in the West.

TO HOLD TALKS

OTTAWA (CP)—Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak will hold discussions with Prime Minister St. Laurent and External Affairs Minister Pearson during a six-day visit to Ottawa and Montreal beginning Thursday.

DROP DRUNK CHARGE

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—A drunk driving charge against actress Gail Russell was dropped Monday when her attorney told the court she was too ill to appear. Miss Russell, 30, was kept on probation however, on her plea of guilty to being intoxicated.

Weddings

COE—MERRITT

St. Michael's rectory, Belleville, was the setting on Monday, February 21st, at 10.00 a.m., for a quiet, but pretty wedding when the Rev. Peter Murphy united in marriage, Shirley Ann Merritt, of Bancroft, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Merritt, to Wayne Grant Coe, also of Bancroft, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alphonse Coe.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Mr. Harold Merritt, was lovely in white nylon net over satin with lace insertion, fashioned with fitted bodice having long sleeves, "V" pointed over the wrists, and full, floor-length skirt. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held by a coronet encrusted with seed pearls and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Miss Rosemary Merritt, of Bancroft, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, wearing aqua marine nylon net over taffeta with matching headdress and gloves. She carried a shower bouquet of yellow roses.

Mr. James Vance, of Bancroft, attended the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was held at the New Queen's Hotel, where the bride's mother, attired in navy crepe with pink accessories, and corsage of pink roses, received the guests. The bridegroom's mother, wearing turquoise taffeta with matching accessories and corsage of yellow roses, assisted.

Guests were present from Hamilton, Chatham and Bancroft.

Ladies' Aux. Holds Meeting

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion Branch 99, was held recently in the Legion Hall on Coleman Street. The new president, Mrs. Slater, presided.

Two new members, Mrs. Legacey and Mrs. Terry were initiated. A letter was read from the men's branch thanking the ladies for their generous donation.

Mrs. McGillivary resigned as social chairman. This position was taken over was Mrs. Hodge.

A rummage sale will be held in March.

Mrs. Jeffs presented Mrs. Slater with her past 1st vice-president's badge.

The draw was won by Mrs. Haley.

W.C.T.U. Pays Tribute To Founder

The February meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union paid tribute to Frances Willard, the beloved founder, who has been called the greatest woman philanthropist of the 19th century. She was the first woman to be president of a University, and the first woman professor in a co-educational college. She had a great ambition for better living conditions for all, which is shown in the many reforms she agitated and called for action upon.

Mrs. F. O. Bennett gave a short summary of the many reforms she instituted.

TEMPERANCE QUIZ

Miss Clazie conducted a quiz on Temperance Missions, carried on in some 70 countries for which $23,000 was raised last year. She also gave a Valentine message quoting Barbara Ann Scott, who has been tested a thousand times, but still asks for orange juice. She says "No one seems to mind and believe me the one who follows this pattern has a better time and gets much more out of life." Marlene Stewart feels the same and what a full unselfish life Marilyn Bell lives.

Mrs. Paul had charge of the devotion, reading and commenting on Luke 10. Let us be a friend to all and a good neighbor as was "The Good Samaritan."

Miss Barnum outlined the "Recommendations on Penal Reform for Women." Since over 1,400 of the 3,500 women and girls, who pass through the 45 city, county, and district jails of Ontario each year, are "first offenders" who by careful treatment might be helped to become good and law-abiding citizens, it is most urgent that the women voters of this province, accept the invitation of the Department of Reform Institutions to send in recommendations on the care of female offenders. Many organizations have sent in requests to Premier Frost, urging the government to implement the recommendations of the joint committee, during the session.

Mrs. Montgomery delighted all with an original oration on the months of the year, each bringing a varied kind of celebration. She closed with a poem "The Journey of Life", with the many different stations coming at last to the Station of Rest.

STUDY BOOK

The study book was taken by Mrs. Vandervoort, "Facing up to Life or Running-Away From It." "Feelings of inferiority, dread of failure, frustrations of various kinds, are part of the common experience of human beings. They look for some easy way of escape. Because of the anaesthetic effect of alcohol, a few drinks will numb or dull their senses' of thinking, and they will forget their worries; and it is no cure for the trouble. A better way to solve the problems is to face them and so develop character. The discipline of struggle, gives moral fibre to character. Athletics, music, hobbies of various kinds offer release in a better and more natural way."

NEED RAPID TRANSIT

TORONTO (CP)—Mayor Nathan Phillips said Monday a proposed $15,000,000 rapid transit service east to west along Queen street is a "must for this year." He said in an interview he will ask the federal government Friday for assistance in building the new line, part of which will go underground.

Catholic Women's League Hears Talk on 'Lay Apostolate'

The recent February meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in St. Michael's High school, with Mrs. E. Logan presiding and with the Rev. P. Murphy in attendance.

Two new members were welcomed in the persons of Mrs. A. Bissette and Mrs. Anderson. The executive reports were heard with Mrs. B. E. Burley, 1st vice-president, stating a paid up membership of 428. Reporting for St. Michael's Benevolent Society, Mrs. T. C. Young said that a box of clothing and shoes had been sent to Madonna House at Combermere, and that milk was being supplied to the school children and to three families; also that the society is in urgent need of clothing for children from one to five years of age. Anyone able to assist in this matter is asked to contact Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick, Phone 64 or Mrs. T. C. Young, Phone 5395.

GRATIFYING BALANCE

The financial statement showed a gratifying bank balance and it was learned that six new subscriptions to "The Canadian League" had been received by convener Mrs. J. Farrell.

The president thanked Mrs. P. Cleary, Mrs. K. Soden and Mrs. J. Darlington who, assisted by the councillors, so successfully convened the recent sale of tickets on the bonds.

Hospital visitor, Mrs. J. Lattone, reported making 125 visits to patients in the Belleville General Hospital during the month of January, and a letter was read from Miss Peart, superintendent of nurses, expressing the appreciation of the patients who had received Christmas baskets from the combined subdivisions of the Catholic Women's League. Included, also, in the correspondence, read by secretary, Mrs. A. McFee, was a letter from Mrs. J. E. Boyd, archdiocesan convener of Education, Scholarships and Study Clubs, which pointed out the different channels through which the league could and should assist in higher education and which urged the subdivision to increase, if possible, their donation to the Archdiocesan Seminary Burse.

Reporting on the Queen of Hearts ball, Mrs. Burley extended grateful appreciation to the generous donors and to all those who helped in any way to make this event an outstanding success.

The guest speaker was Dr. Edith Peterkin, who spoke on the "Lay Apostolate." She said in part: "Today, 2000 years after the coming of Christ we are faced with a great spiritual crisis, for it is an age when the plague of secularism poses a serious challenge to Christian principles. It is an age of divorce, birth control, neurosis and 'isms' of every description.

"The Lay Apostolate is the new instrument raised up by the Holy Spirit to combat these conditions and its motto is simply this 'to restore all things in Christ'."

TO LOVE GOD

In closing, Dr. Peterkin said, "We are on earth to love God, nothing else matters; we all express Him in different ways so that everyone may hear in the language he understands. That is why we are all different, why no two people are wholly alike, why life seems so unequal and why we are all in such different places and circumstances; simply that in all places and in all languages Christ may be uttered through men to men."

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. B. E. Burley, and thanked by Mrs. P. Cleary.

Father Murphy addressed the meeting briefly.

Following adjournment, refreshments were served by Mrs. A. McFee and her committee.

Women's Activities

FRANKFORD W.M.S.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Frankford United church met on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Spencer, with 14 members and 13 visitors present. Mrs. J. M. Defoe was in charge of the program. A reading was given by Mrs. Dafoe, "Strength for the Day." The secretary's report was read and approved and Mrs. Reid also gave the report of the W.M.S. Presbyterial which was held in the Frankford United church in January. Mrs. H. Madill gave the treasurer's report. The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. H. J. Madill.

Mrs. George Spencer had charge of the second part of the program and the theme for the meeting was "The church universal in India."

Mrs. Spencer and Mrs. Scott gave talks on "India". Mrs. Fred Charlesworth gave a reading entitled "I Am Your Church."

The temperance secretary, Mrs. D. Mallory, gave a reading on the "ABC's of Liquor."

Mrs. Cecil Reid had charge of the study book, giving a clear picture of growing together of the church in India.

Refreshments were served and a social half hour was spent.

ASKS PROVINCIAL AID

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto metropolitan works committee Monday asked the Ontario government to assume the full cost of correcting the flow of Metro area rivers and streams shoved off their course by hurricane Hazel last October. Works commissioner Leslie Allan said large quantities of gravel and shale were deposited in the streams by the storm, in some cases changing the natural water courses.

Insurance Business So Brisk Actress Has No Time for Stage

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Mrs. Jeanne Griffiths, a Canadian who knows her way round a stage, has a real-life British role pretty well to herself.

The lively former Regina resident is probably the only Canadian woman—or one of the few of any nationality—selling life insurance in this country.

Business is so brisk, says Mrs. Griffiths, who won the Canadian best-actress award in 1950, that she hasn't had time to tread the boards in London, whither she came last fall after two years at Manchester.

"I've got enough on my plate at the moment," the attractive brunette, who exudes Canadian bounce, said in an interview. Hard at work, she's finding a few differences between British clients and the less formal Canadians she used to deal with. But she has no complaints.

WOMEN PLEASED

"People are usually surprised, but quite pleased, to find a woman calling to talk about life insurance. Women are particularly pleased.

"And people are surprised at the very fact that an insurance agent calls. It's the practice in this country to let the customer come around when he wants insurance. One Canadian told me he hadn't seen one agent in his 11 years here."

There's a "restricted clientele." Most office workers, a good source of sales in Canada, work a long time before they can afford insurance.

Business is tougher because lawyers, bankers, accountants and others are qualified to sell a service restricted to the insurance profession at home.

And, says Mrs. Griffiths, Norfolk-born and in her early 30s, Britons don't know as much about insurance as Canadians do.

The former Jeanne Morphy arrived in Canada at three. She won the best-actress award in 1950 in her second crack at the stage—the first was in 1944—appearing as Monica in Noel Coward's "Present Laughter" with the Regina Canadian Legion players.

BUSINESS WITH THEATRE

She came to Britain in 1951 as Mrs. Griffiths, having met her insurance-agent husband on a visit the previous year, and managed to mix business with seven Manchester Repertory Theatre roles before coming to London.

She has joined a well-known rep company here, surviving stiff qualifying tests, but hasn't yet taken any parts.

Mrs. Griffiths finds her nostalgic recollections of the good Canadian life coincide with those of most Canadian expatriates—leaning heavily on central heating and pushbutton plumbing. She meets a lot of Canadians in her work.

"It's a funny thing, but most of them in this country—and there seem to be a lot—aren't convinced they like it," she said. "They beef—as I do—but they stay on."

The Griffiths have reluctantly abandoned, for the time being at least, plans to live on an 80-foot houseboat, fashioned from a former barge and containing both central heating and up-to-date plumbing fore and aft. They couldn't find a suitable mooring spot for the vessel.

Energetic Club Discusses Future Events

The Energetic Club of Holloway Street United church met on Friday evening.

The president, Maitland Duff, gave the call to worship. Cam Hitchon gave the Scripture reading. Meditation by Mrs. T. Forward. The Rev. S. E. Larman led in prayer.

Business was discussed with the main item being the play entitled "The Meddlesome Maid", by a group from the West Huntingdon United church. This play will be presented next month.

Mrs. A. Briscoe gave a humorous reading. An interesting film the "Bright Path", which showed the Hydro Electric Power Company of Ontario in action. It dealt with all phases of their work from the selection of power house site to the final distribution of power to the consumer.

Refreshments were served by Eileen and Amos Briscoe and their group.

The evening closed with the friendship circle.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

TODAY'S GOOD HINT FOR GOOD MANNERS

"Your conversation, as has been wisely said, "is your account of yourself." Therefore watch it . . . watch it most carefully and appraisingly. Stop, look, listen . . . to hear what your conversation tells about You!

THE WIFE WHO ALWAYS SAYS "MINE", NEVER "OURS"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Here's the discussion which took place recently among a group of friends. I think it's a very interesting one, and we'd like to have your point of view about it. One girl, married, refers to possessions jointly owned by her husband as "Mine." When a suggestion was made by a person in the group that the term should be "Ours," the girl became quite upset and said that when her husband is in her presence she then refers to their possessions as "Ours" . . . but that when her husband is not present, she insists on calling all possessions "Mine." (She says that her reason for this is that if she is in a group and refer to possessions a "Ours," people would certainly misunderstand and would think that the article was jointly owned by her and whoever was present.) What do you think about this? — W.T.

The discourtesy of the wife who says "I" instead of "we," "my" or "mine" instead of "our" or "ours" is, alas, a very common example of bad manners. And true it is that the most unfortunate and significant fact about this is that it is not only an unattractive slip of word-usage, but it is generally a revelation of a woman's fundamental attitude. That is, if she speaks in this careless, dominating way, it shows she thinks in the same way. The chances are that the wife who says 'I" instead of "we" and "mine" instead of "ours" is the sharp-mannered wife who corrects her husband in public, or constantly interrupts him, or "reminds" him that he "has told that story before." This attitude of word and manner is most unbecoming, to both wife and husband.

Howevef, it is true that sometimes a wife says and does these things unconsciously, unwittingly, and when it is gently (but firmly!) called to her attention, she changes at once to the charming habit of speaking and thinking 'inclusively' of her husband. She can, if she makes up her mind to, immediately change her habit of thinking by changing her habit of speaking.

I believe (and hope) the wife of whom you write may do this, now that her discourtesy has been called to her attention. The fact that she "became quite upset" and so obviously grasped at such hollow, meaningless excuses as she did, might very well mean, psychologically, that for the first time she was realizing, although she wouldn't admit it, that her way of speaking is not the way of charming, gracious manners. Believe me, unless she is too stubborn and cross to be infuenced, she will do some real thinking about this discussion of her discourtesy-words!

SEQUENCE OF BRIDE'S DANCING PARTNERS AT RECEPTION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I know that at my wedding reception I dance the first dance with my bridegroom. Then what is the sequence? — Bride-to-be

After that first most romantic dance with your bridegroom, you dance next with your father . . . then with your bridegroom's father . . . then with the best man . . . then with the ushers (first with the head usher, if a head usher has been appointed). Then you can "play the field," dancing probably first with your relatives who claim priority, and with other guests.

TWO LEGAL WITNESSES TO MARRIAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Who are supposed to be chosen as the two legal witnesses of a marriage? A member of the bride's family and a member of the groom's family? —B.

The maid (or matron) of honor and the best man are usually the two legal witnesses of the marriage. (When the bride has both a maid of honor and a matron of honor in her bridal party, she chooses as witness the one closer to her in relationship: for example, if her sister is her matron of honor and a cousin or friend the maid of honor, she asks her sister to be a witness.)

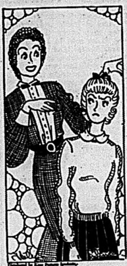
SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS



Distributed by King Features Syndicate

Poor little shy girl! As a toddler she clung to her mother's skirts, hid her face in them. That is when mother should have lent a helping hand, by inviting other children to the home, creating a social circle for her little daughter. Sometimes a little girl will learn more from her comrades, in the way of deportment, than can be taught by her parents.

The self-conscious teen-ager is suffering from social fear. She is afraid she won't do or say the right thing, that her clothes aren't as lovely as they should be, that practically everything in her world is wrong. She thinks she is different from other individuals. She doesn't know that her trouble is a common one.

She isn't the only one whose heart jumps up into her throat and who experiences panicky feelings because she doesn't know quite what to say or what to do when in a social gathering.

The over-protected child is likely to have everything decided for her long after she is old enough to make her own decisions. It is a good thing for a little girl to fight her own fights, wrestle with and think out her own problems. That makes her strong.

Criticism from members of the family is cruel and will do incalculable harm, often driving the girl still further into retirement with her unhappy brooding thoughts. The thing to do is to help her build up a little healthy conceit. She should be told that she is sweet and pretty; her other good qualities should be stressed. Then, in the course of time she may decide that her fears are based on nothing at all, that she is as charming as those other girls who have beaten her in the race for popularity.

This is, admittedly, a tough problem, but it must be tackled and overcome or self-consciousness may continue for years—as many men and women know to their sorrow.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

YOU'RE RIGHT: THE OTHERS ARE WRONG

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Do you think there is any harm in going out with boys whose nationality is different from your own?

I know two or three such boys, and like to go with them, but some of my relatives and friends think this is foolish, so I would like to know what you think. — Jane H.

Dear Jane:

I not only see no "harm" in going out with young people whose nationality is different from yours, but I think it is a very excellent idea indeed. How are people ever to get along together if each nationality keeps to itself and refuses to make friends with others? Our only hope for the future is to learn to understand those who may have different backgrounds and different ideas from our own, and if young people don't make a point of doing this, we will never get very far toward peace and cooperation in the world.

I hope that you and your friends will not only welcome girls and boys of different nationalities into your group, but that you will be able to help others understand that it shows them up in a very unfavorable light if they object to doing so.

BETTER FIND OUT WHAT'S IN THIS BOY'S MIND

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with a boy who says he loves me, too. We have been going together a year and a half.

Now he has asked if I would be his wife in the near future, yet he has told me he isn't good enough for me. He said that if he stopped seeing me so often, he wouldn't feel as if he had to touch me so much, and he said that if we kept on seeing each other, I would turn out bad, and that he didn't want that to happen because he wanted me as his wife. Others have told me that he was pretty wild and carefree before he met me and started dating me steady, but we have always got along fine.

Do you think he really loves me, and that he will return? — K.G.

Dear K.G.:

Your letter is a little confused, and I am not quite sure just what the situation really is.

You ask me if I think this boy will "return," but you haven't said that he has either broken off with you or stopped seeing you. You also say that he said you would "turn out bad" if you kept on seeing each other, and "he didn't want that to happen because he wanted me as his wife." How are you ever going to become his wife if you stop seeing each other?

The best I can do in answering your letter, with nothing made very clear, is to warn you that you had better watch your step with this boy if you are continuing to see each other. If, on the other hand, he has actually broken off with you, he will undoubtedly 'return" if he really does love you, and be very careful to control himself so that there will be no danger whatever of your "turning out bad." Don't forget, however, that how you "turn out" depends entirely on yourself.

I suggest that you insist on his making it perfectly clear what he means when he says he isn't "good enough" for you. When young men use this expression, what they have in mind may be either one of two things: that they are tired of the current romance, and think this is a way to end it without hurting the girl while making themselves appear noble, or else there really is something which they feel makes them a poor risk as a husband. Better find out which of these is the case with this young man.

Foolproof Apple Pie for Novices With a Dividend of Almond Tarts

By Mary Moore

Not one to resort to expedient measures very often I start by alibi-ing about today's idea.

Regular flaky pie pastry is difficult for inexperienced but ambitious pie makers to handle. Don't you agree? Because recently I have been observing this, and because a married cousin of mine is so enthused over her "new pastry" discovery I am giving you details of making an apple pie with hot water pastry.

I know it is not as good as regular pastry but it is dependable for it is never tough. So if you are inexperienced at handling pastry this method will give you practice and confidence in rolling out pastry on a floured board and transferring it to the pie plate. It produces a thoroughly respectable pie that a new bride need not apologize for.

Need I add that the ambitious new cook that I refer to is none other than my flesh and blood Marianne? who, by the way, had her first stint of special duty in a pure white uniform last night. What a thrill!

FOOLPROOF APPLE PIE

HOT WATER PASTRY:

(These amounts are for one 2-crust pie and 10 tarts.)

One cup shortening, 3 cups unsifted but stirred flour, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 cup boiling water. Measure shortening into bowl, pour boiling water over and beat with a fork to blend. Sift flour, salt and baking powder together, then add them gradually to the shortening mixture blending all the time with a heavy spoon. Form into a ball, cover or wrap snugly and chill in refrigerator until ready to use. (This dough must be chilled before it is rolled out.) When it is cold divide dough into three parts. Roll out one-third to 1-8 inch thickness for bottom crust and line a 9-inch pie plate with it. Put in apple filling (see below) and roll out top crust to 1-8 inch thickness, making short slashes in a decorative pattern in this upper crust to allow for escape of steam. Place carefully over apples, sealing edges by pinching with thumb and finger tip or pressing with floured fork. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes, then reduce heat to 375 deg. Fahr. for another 30 minutes or until apples are tender. (Try them through slits with pointed knife.)

Filling—6 cups pared, cored apples sliced 1-4 inch thick (we used Spies), 2-3 cup sugar, 1-4 teaspoon each cinnamon and nutmeg, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 2 teaspoons butter.

Marianne had pastry left over so she made

ALMOND TARTS

Roll out dough and cut out in rounds to fit tart tins—we lined 10 individual fluted tart tins. Fill 2-3 full with Almond Filling after putting 1 teaspoon raspberry jam in bottom of each: Beat 1 egg and stir in 1-2 to 2-3 cup white or light brown sugar, 2 tablespoons soft butter, shake of salt, 1 cup dried blanched or unblanched almonds chopped or ground, 1 teaspoon almond extract. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 12 or 15 minutes. Very good when served warm.

PRAISES MORALE

LONDON (CP)—Col. John W. Forth of Montreal and Ottawa, the Canadian army's senior Protestant chaplain, said Saturday he thinks the morale of Canadian troops in Germany is as high as he has ever seen it. Col. Forth has just returned from two weeks at the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade Group, where he dedicated four new Protestant churches for soldiers and dependents.

RELEASE DEBTOR

BANGOR, Me. (AP)—A federal bankruptcy referee has ordered release of Fred Kennard, 36, father of four children who was held nine months in jail on a $16 debt. The referee, Charles Pomeroy, who granted a writ of habeas corpus, described Maine's debtor law, under which Kennard was held, as "barbaric." He ruled Kennard's debt for automobile parts could be discharged in bankruptcy.

WORKS ON EXPERIMENT

Dr. Hans Selye, 48-year-old endocrinologist world-renowned for his findings on stress, works in his University of Montreal laboratories. With an assistant, Miss Paulette Seguin, he is dissecting a rat in one of his experiments. He heads the university's institute of experimental medicine and surgery, a clearing-house for information on stress from all over the world. (CP Photo).

U of M Scientist Tells How To Live Normal Span of Life

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—Hans Selye of the University of Montreal is described by eminent doctors as one of the greatest medical minds of our time. Yet, to the 48-year-old scientist, two words—why and how—are all that are needed to spell out the goads and goals of his life work.

Why, asks Selye, is it almost always later than you think?

How, he asks, can we learn to live out our proper life span despite the stress and strain that strike modern man fatally, often in his prime?

NOT INTANGIBLE

"By understanding and conquering stress," says Dr. Selye of the subject on which he is a recognized authority. "By taking it in our hands and examining its chemical and psychological properties. Because it has such properties, and they can be measured.

"Stress is not an intangible thing of the imagination. It is as real, and in time it will be as clear to our eyes, as the cornerstone of the University of Montreal."

Austrian-born Selye, of a family that has produced doctors for four generations, heads the university's institute of experimental medicine and surgery, a clearing-house for information on stress from all over the world.

"PLAN OF OFFENSIVE"

Selye has just published his fourth annual report on stress, a yearly follow-up to his major work on the subject in 1950. The initial volume, a 1,000-page text book summarizing not only his own theory but also the world's data on the subject, opened new vistas and hopes for medical men.

Selye himself says the book, with 5,600 references, contained a "plan of offensive" to counteract stress.

Medical authorities say that as a medical text-book Selye's work "Stress" had an impact on the public exceeded only by the Kinsey reports on sex, where sales are concerned.

The odd thing about stress is that—like sex—it always has been common knowledge, in a way.

"The business man driving himself at break-neck speed certainly knows about stress," says Selye. "But when he dies prematurely at 50 years of age, his 'weak heart' is blamed. It isn't understood that stress itself is fatal. It may well be the greatest man-killer of modern times."

INTRIGUING THEORY

Top-ranking medical men from many countries have said Selye's theory, defining stress and measuring its chemical effect on the body, provides answers—holds out a cure to the sufferers of a high-speed age. The answers are not complete, nor universally accepted, but their form has been recognized and applauded by medical journals. Sir Frederick Banting, co-discoverer of insulin, was one of Selye's early supporters and arranged a $500 grant for him.

Selye bases his argument on the simple principle that humans—and animals—have a built-in "alarm mechanism" which comes into play under stress of any kind whatever, from cold feet to a gun at the head.

Glands shoot hormones into the system to counteract stress. This process, designed for protection in "normal" conditions, can wreak havoc, however, if outside forces hammer the body with repeated physical or psychological shock. This includes any abnormal strain of brain or muscle.

Selye showed in experiments with animals that prolonged physical stress produced such ills as heart disease, ulcers and arthritis.

On the other hand, animals in their natural state seldom if ever die from heart attacks, high blood pressure or the rheumatic ills—the so-called diseases of civilization, says Selye.

UNKNOWN ON AMAZON

Furthermore, medical explorers who visited savage tribes far from civilization in the upper reaches of the Amazon found these diseases were unknown to the wild men.

These findings fitted with Selye's long-held belief of "specific and non-specific" disease. He became convinced that the obvious ailment of a patient, such as tuberculosis, was frequently not the whole source of the troubles, perhaps not even the main source.

A "non-specific" factor—stress—was the hidden enemy, upsetting the chemical balance of the body and indirectly causing, or accentuating, the "specific" illness, which could be isolated as a germ.

He found stress worked in three phases—alarm reaction, which includes shock, followed by a period in which the body developed resistance, and then exhaustion, or death.

Thus, a patient suffering from chemical imbalance caused by stress could never recover unless the balance were restored, said Selye. This could be done by injection of hormones, or by operations on the pituitary and adrenal glands, main sources of the trouble.

Selye held this view long before the new "wonder drugs" such as cortisone and acth were announced.

Corroboration of his theory came in 1949 when Dr. Philip S. Hench and his associates of the Mayo Clinic used cortisone in the successful treatment of arthritic patients who had been considered incurable. Similar successes were registered in surgical operations on the pituitary and adrenal glands.

Although Selye still is continuing his experiments with animals, mostly rats, the study now has been widened by others to include clinical research, which means the theory is being applied to humans.

Says the journal of the American Medical Association: "If future events prove this concept correct, it will be one of the most significant medical advances of this century."

Women's Guild Holds Euchre Party

On Thursday evening, the Women's Guild of Trinity Church Shannonville, held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Alvin McKenzie, with the president, Mrs. Fitzgerald presiding.

The meeting was opened in the usual manner.

Mrs. Whittle, treasurer, gave a good report. A plaque was bought in the memory of the late Mrs. Mark.

Lenten folders were handed out to the members and will be distributed among the congregation.

After the meeting a euchre party was held.

EUCHRE PARTY

Nine tables were set up. Winners were ladies 1st, Jean Rump; 2nd Grace Merry; consolation, Mrs. Wescott; men, Bill Houston, Alvin McKenzie; consolation Mr. McBride; lone hand, Grace Merry; door prize, Grace Cox.

Refreshments were served.

The next euchre, will be held on March 3, at Mrs. McBride's.

Mrs. Duckworth was a passenger in the very last lifeboat to leave the stricken Lusitania after it had been torpedoed by a German submarine May 7, 1915, off the coast of England.

Dr. Stapp Human Guinea Pig In Uniform of U.S. Air Force

By RELMAN MORIN

ALAMAGORDO, N.M. (AP)—The printed motto on Lt.-Col. John Paul Stapp's desk says: "Don't let kakorraphiophobia lead you into osphresiolagnia."

He invented the phrase.

You ask what it means and he grins, translating the Greek roots. But behind the fun, there is a serious meaning.

The colonel uses his motto to remind himself that this is a strange age, that fearful forces have been unleashed and that they can blot out human life in a wink. His job is to study them at close range. He uses his own stocky body as a principal instrument.

Stapp is chief of the aero-medical laboratory at Holloman air development centre. He is a doctor, a scientist and a human guinea pig in the blue uniform of the U.S. Air Force.

Some weeks ago, Stapp made headlines by travelling faster on land than any other living man. He rode a rocket driven sled along a fixed track, reached 632 miles an hour in five seconds and stopped—bang!—in just one second.

BLOOD HIT HARD

He was strapped so tightly into the seat that nothing in his body could move except his own blood. It did. It slammed into the back of his eyeballs with such force that they were shoved forward in the sockets. The whites were suffused with blood.

Stapp, lying on a stretcher, thought he had been blinded. Then, a reddish light came into his eyes. Slowly, it turned salmon-colored. And then, dimly, he saw a patch of blue. It was the sky.

"That was a tremendous moment," he says. "I darned near wrote some poetry."

Now he is thinking of attempting a much greater speed, something over 1,000 miles an hour on the sled. The quick, slamming stop will not be necessary. He will try it with dummies first.

What's the point of all this?

Suppose you are a jet pilot, hurtling faster than sound in the upper atmosphere, and you have to bail out. What will happen to you? Will you live through it?

FACE THREE KILLERS

Three potential killers will reach out for your body.

First, deceleration, the slowing up process, the terrible body blow from the air as you drop from, say 700 miles an hour forward motion to near zero in a matter of seconds.

Second, wind-blast. How much blast can the human frame take? In war, it is not uncommon to find men lying dead without an injury visible anywhere. They were killed by "blast," air waves, started by a bomb or shell, that collapsed the lungs.

Third, tumbling, as he leaves his plane, the pilot will be gripped by air pressures far stronger than his own muscles. His arms and legs will flail around like blades of a windmill.

What's the answer to these problems?

"We know enough now," the colonel says, "to be able to plot the charts showing most of what we can expect. We still have to fill in the details.

"So the problem is to devise the equipment—Helmets, flying suits, harnesses—that will take over and counteract these forces when the pilot bails out."

MARMORA

Slate of Officers Presented At IODE Meeting

The regent, Mrs. J. R. Aitcheson presided, the meeting being opened with prayer. The treasurer's report as given by Mrs. C. R. Whittemore was found to be most favorable.

Three letters of appreciation were read. The first was from the local Chamber of Commerce, acknowledging the Chapter's donation to the Santa Claus fund. Another was from Mrs. Charles Brady, who has been ill and the third was from Betty Drew, of Deloro, who received several proficiency awards at the recent Marmora High School Commencement exercises.

For Empire Study, Mrs. R. G. Walsh provided a most interesting reading on "The Great North Country."

Miss Miriam Savage convener of Services at Home and Abroad, reported that boxes have been packed to be sent to Headquarters. Mrs. M. Borland distributed pyjamas to be sewn and also reported a layette has been completed for a new Canadian family.

Mrs. Borland read a letter regarding the Educational program stating that newspaper publications are now available in many languages and will be sent to interested immigrants. Lists of these papers are to be posted on local plant bulletin boards.

The Chapter also planned a bridge party for Friday, February 25, to be held in the Masonic Hall.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, the secretary, Mrs. D. P. Marett, read the minutes of the last annual meeting, which were confirmed.

ANNUAL REPORTS

The following annual reports were read and adopted:

Secretary's — Mrs. D. P. Marett; Treasurer's — Mrs. C. R. Whittemore; Educational — Mrs. Chas. Brady; Echoes — Mrs. W. Tupper; Services at Home and Abroad — Miss M. Savage; Empire and World Affairs read by Mrs. G. Meiklejohn; Film — Mrs. R. G. Walsh; Publicity — Mrs. A. M. Jones; Flower and Gift read by Mrs. J. R. Reynolds.

SLATE OF OFFICERS

Mrs. R. G. Walsh, nominations convener, then presented a slate of officers for 1955:

Regent — Mrs. J. R. Aitcheson; 1st Vice Regent — Mrs. M. Borland; 2nd Vice Regent, Mrs. K. Frost; Secretary — Mrs. D. F. Marett; Treasurer — Mrs. K. C. McKay; Educational Secretary — Mrs. Charles Brady; Echoes Secretary — Mrs. E. Brady; Standard Bearer — Mrs. F. R. Wells; Councillor — Mrs. J. R. Reynolds Mrs. R. G. Walsh, Mrs. C. R. Whittemore, Mrs. E. Brady and Mrs. T. Cousins.

The Regent extended thanks to last year's executive, conveners and members in general for their co-operation during the year.

The meeting having adjourned, refreshments were served.

CEDARGRAIN ASBESTOS SIDING has long enjoyed the endorsement of leading builders and discerning home-owners. Made of asbestos and cement, it is fireproof, rotproof, permanent as stone. It is available in a choice of colors.

Now, an amazing Johns-Manville development makes Cedargrain Asbestos Siding even better than ever! Silicone Seal is invisible. It is not a surface lacquer to wear off, peel or scuff. Although a highly competent water repellant it still allows the wall to "breathe". And it will last for years.

For free, full color booklet on Silicone-Sealed Cedargrain Siding, see your J-M dealer, or write Canadian Johns-Manville, Dept. N-58, 565 Lakeshore Road East, Port Credit, Ontario.

Doesn't darken when wet
Virtually self-cleaning . . . resists soiling
J-M Silicone Seal is invisible . . . won't change color of siding
Not a surface lacquer . . . won't peel or scuff
Not a vapor barrier . . . wall is allowed to breathe

Pre-punched for nailing, J-M Cedargrain Siding is easy to apply to new homes and over old sidewalls in remodelling.

Two Laws Passed by Quebec Viewed as Potential Threats To Freedom of the Press

Governments sometimes enact laws that affect freedom of the press—the public right to know. The following story, one of a Canadian Press series on freedom of the press, reviews the situation in Canada in connection with certain provincial enactments.

Written for The Canadian Press
By FRANK FLAHERTY

The most serious challenge offered the principle of freedom of the press in Canada was a law passed by the legislature of Alberta in 1937. It was called an "Act to ensure the publication of accurate news and information." It was held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of Canada.

More recently two laws passed by the Quebec legislature, one aimed at suppressing communism, and the other at the distribution of literature by Jehovah's Witnesses, have occasioned some alarm and are viewed by many people as potential threats to the freedom of the press.

The history of the Alberta law is significant because it struck directly at the citizen's right to know and because two judges of the Supreme Court of Canada wrote opinions which will long stand as part of the jurisprudence of Canada.

PATTERN IN CURBS

It is also significant because it illustrates the pattern by which governments normally proceed in trying to control the kind of information the citizen gets through his daily newspaper. Press curbs are rarely imposed for the avowed purpose of preventing the citizen from getting to know the truth, nearly always with the purpose of ensuring that he does get the truth, as the authorities see the truth.

Alberta then, as now, had a Social Credit government. The government was attempting to make over the economy of the province according to Social Credit theories. Most of the newspapers of the province were opposed to the changes the government was trying to bring about. The government wanted the citizens to know the truth about its program, as it saw the truth.

CONTRARY EFFECT

The purpose was to give, not to withhold, information but the means chosen had a contrary effect. Newspapers were obliged to publish statements given them by a government board. Within 24 hours after receiving a request they were obliged to disclose the source of any statement published in the previous 60 days and the name and address of the writer of any editorial, article or news item.

Any newspaper which did not obey the law could be stopped from publishing.

Under the guise of compelling the newspapers to let the people know the facts about the government policy the government was taking power to prevent them from knowing any facts it did not want them to know.

The act never became law because the lieutenant-governor, under one of the rarely used powers conferred on him by the British North America Act, reserved it for consideration by the federal government. Instead of disallowing the act, as it might have done, the federal government referred it to the Supreme Court of Canada for an opinion on its validity.

RIGHTS OF CITIZEN

The court, in effect, said the law interfered with the rights of citizens of Alberta to know things which they had a right to know as citizens of Canada. It said no provincial legislature can pass such legislation.

"Every inhabitant of Alberta is also a citizen of the Dominion," said Mr. Justice L. A. Cannon.

"The federal Parliament is the sole authority to curtail, if deemed expedient and in the public interest, the freedom of the press and the equal rights in that respect of all citizens throughout the Dominion."

FREE PUBLIC DISCUSSION

The then chief justice of Canada, Sir Lyman Duff, was no less emphatic in denying a provincial legislature any right to curtail the freedom of the press in respect to the publication of news and opinions on public questions. He said:

"Some degree of regulation of newspapers everybody would concede to the provinces; but the limit, in our opinion is reached when legislation effects such a curtailment of the exercise of the right of public discussion as substantially to interfere with the working of the Parliamentary institutions of Canada."

Sir Lyman went further and in a reference raised the question as to whether even the Parliament of Canada can legislate to curtail the right of public discussion. That right existed at the time of the enactment of the British North America Act, which provided that Canada should have a constitution similar to that of the United Kingdom.

"The statute contemplates a Parliament working under the influence of public opinion and public discussion," he said. "There can be no controversy that such institutions derive their efficacy from the free public discussion of affairs, from criticism and answer and counter-criticism, from attack upon policy and administration and defence and counter-attack; from the freest and fullest analysis and examination from every viewpoint of political proposals."

QUEBEC LAWS

The Quebec Padlock Act and the more recent amendment to the Quebec Freedom of Worship Act have yet to be subject to final scrutiny in the courts. Under the former act a building which the attorney-general of Quebec decides is being used to propagate Communism may be closed for a year.

The law was used to stop publication of "Combat," a Communist publication, and was held constitutional by the Quebec courts. It never reached the Supreme Court of Canada. Hence there is no ruling from the highest court on whether a provincial legislature, indirectly through the control of physical property, can control the press as the Alberta legislature tried unsuccessfully to do directly.

The other Quebec situation that worries believers in freedom stems from a judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada that could be construed as curtailing the principles propounded in the Alberta case. A member of the Jehovah's Witnesses was prosecuted for breach of a provincial law prohibiting distribution of literature on the streets without a police permit.

He appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada which ordered his acquittal. Five of the nine judges agreed the provincial legislature had the right to enact the law. Four said it was unconstitutional. The tract distributor escaped conviction because the present Chief Justice Kerwin based his judgment on another ground, another statute of the province dealing with freedom of worship. The witnesses were free to distribute their tracts only because they were deemed to be performing an act of worship.

LEGAL WEAPONS

Since then the legislature of the province has passed another law saying certain things, including the distribution of publications containing material offensive to other religions, does not constitute freedom of worship, as protected by law.

Thus there are in existence two Quebec laws which, by an indirect route, control over buildings and control over the distribution of newspapers through the streets, could be used to restrict freedom of the press.

Some time some government may try to use them to silence or intimidate a newspaper which publishes things that are offensive to that government or against its political interests.

They stand as warning to the citizen that the line of demarcation between legislation to protect private rights or preserve the safety of the state and legislation which strikes at the right of the citizen to know is still undefined.

MARMORA

'Claim Staking' Concludes Prospectors' Class

MARMORA—Prospectors' classes conducted in St. Paul's Parish Hall, Marmora this past week by Dr. W. D. Harding, of the Department of Mines, concluded on Saturday morning with a talk on the laws governing the staking of claims in Ontario.

It so chanced that this should be the class of the course to be marked by the absence of ladies. Over 60 were present and the geologist had the greatest volley of questions to deal with of the course. As the class ended he admitted that he had had some misgivings as to its success in yielding to the suggestion of Mr. H. R. Pearce to conduct the course. He referred to a similar course he had held in the Town Hall a few years ago when there had been low attendances. This time it had exceeded expectations and when he checked up later on statistics it would prove to be one of the best he had ever held.

He concluded his remarks by thanking Mr. Pearce for his labors in preparation for the classes and thanked the large number which has been in constant attendance.

Cpl. F. Vincent Shortest Man In British Army

By LARRY ALLEN

SINGAPORE (AP)—At 4 feet 2, Cpl. Frank Vincent is the shortest soldier in the British army.

Vincent is a cook in the British military hospital in Singapore. Chunky, robust and easy-smiling, he hails from Kingston-on-Thames, near London.

He managed to get into the army during a period of great emergency. It was not long before the German air blitz on London, and the army needed cooks.

Everything he wears has to be made specially—such as size 1 army shoes. He weighs 104 pounds.

NOT EMBARRASSED NOW

He now is 42 and has had 14 years in the army—seven more to go before he can retire. Before becoming a soldier, he served 12 years in the merchant navy.

"I've been used to being stared at since I was a kid and I've long since got over any embarrassment about it," he says.

At the age of 12 doctors put him through all sorts of tests.

"Then they told me they could do nothing for me because there was absolutely nothing wrong with me, glandularly or any other way. They said I was just "an act of God."

In 1927, when he was 14 and only 3 feet 11½, he was chosen from a group of "the smartest boys" nominated by London schools to act as a page to the Prince of Wales on a tour of Canada. On his way home on the Empress of Australia, he was offered a job as bellboy and thus he joined the merchant navy.

As a ship's cook, he sailed around the world 10 times before the Second World War.

Are there any compensations about being the littlest soldier in the British army?

"You bet there are—it makes everyone friendly to me," says Vincent.

A GENERAL MOTORS PRODUCT

There's a new zip to Dynaflow*
--- and better gas mileage to boot!

THIS is something you really ought to try.

Even though you may be familiar with earlier versions of Dynaflow Drive—either from personal experience or from hearsay—you owe it to yourself to press the pedal of a 1955 Buick with Variable Pitch Dynaflow.

Just as simple as ever to operate—easier, in fact, with the new positioning of the lever.

Just as smooth as ever, with nary a lag, halt or hesitation throughout the speed range.

But brother!—hang on to your hat when you call for action!

Because that's what you get, instantly.

Because twenty power blades inside the very heart of this wondrous automatic transmission switch their pitch for getaway performance—much like the airplane's propeller is angled for take-off.

It's as simple as that—but far more thrilling than words can tell.

And it's a big boon to your gasoline money, too. For, just as the plane's propeller changes pitch aloft for greater fuel efficiency in cruising, so the Dynaflow "propellers" change pitch to deliver a lot more miles per gallon in normal driving and cruising.

Come in and try it—this week. You'll find it harnessed to the highest V8 horsepowers in Buick history—and housed in the bold new styling that says Buick and nothing but.

*Standard on Roadmaster, optional at extra cost on other Series.

BUICK ALONE OFFERS YOU ALL THESE THRILLS FOR '55

Red Wings Tie Boston Bruins 2-2; Share Loop Top Spot With Canadiens

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

NEARLY OVER!

The Kingston Goodyears tightened their grip on second place in the senior "B" group standing last night with an 11-3 victory over the cellar-dwelling Peterborough Petes. The win gave the Goodies 53 points, three behind the leading Colts from Cornwall, three up on the Whitby Dunlops and five in advance of the Memos. The Memos can hop back into a third-place tie with the Dunlops tonight if they can score a victory over the strong Brockville Magedomas.

Cornwall has the No. One position in the bag but the next three spots are far from settled. Kingston and Whitby have two games to play while the Memos have three. They meet Brockville tonight, entertain Kingston here Friday and wind up the schedule with a safari to Clinton on Saturday. They could finish in second place.

Lorne Cook, OHA vice-president, released potential playoff schedules yesterday and it is noted the semi-final series will be a four-of-seven affair, instead of three-of-five as adopted at a pre-season meeting. The finals, likewise, will be four-of-seven.

A WELCOME ADDITION!

It was perhaps a good thing that no "Spud Islanders" were in the offing when we asked Danny Cox, former National Hockey Leaguer, where he was born. Danny smiled almost out loud and came back with "The Biggest Little Island in Canada." That was a poser, at least for us, but we eventually discovered Danny referred to Manitoulin Island. To be specific, Danny first saw the light of day in a place called Little Current.

Danny was recently appointed assistant district manager of the Brewers' Warehouse here and has purchased a home in the city. He came here from the Sudbury district.

Danny is one of those rare ice-lane notables who starred in practically every phase of hockey. Player, coach, referee, he came up with efforts that earned the respect and esteem of his puck-chasing fellows. Even that estimable judge of men and hockeyists, one Michael J. Rodden, a firm friend of Danny in the old days—and still is—puts stamp of approval on him. In fact, Michael strongly suggests that the Memos add Danny to their masterminding brigade — as he puts it.

He left his beloved "island" when a youngster and won his first hockey spurs with the Port Arthur juniors when 17 years of age. Danny had yet to cast his first vote when he was drafted to the Port Arthur senior Bearcats. When he reached his 21st birthday he had helped the Cats to two Allan cups.

The next year, 1926, to be exact, came Danny's big moment. He was signed to a professional contract and joined the Toronto St. Patrick's, from which sprung the present Maple Leafs. He played with the Pats (they became the Maple Leafs a year later) until 1929 when he was sent to Ottawa in the big deal pulled by Connie Smythe, when he bought Frank Nighbor. The next year the Senators received permission to suspend operations and Danny was sent on loan to Detroit Red Wings with such players as Alex. Connell, Hec Kilrea, Alex. Smith and Art Gagnon. The next year he went back to Ottawa.

Came the now famous Connie Smythe-General Fitzpatrick deal in 1933 and Danny found himself with the Gotham Blues chain. He played for a year with Lester Patrick and Danny's versatility came to the fore in a move that saw him with the Ranger chain for a number of years. He was appointed coach of the Minneapolis club in 1934 and after a year in that capacity he was sent to Philadelphia Ramblers as a playing captain. Two years later saw him with the Seattle club and in 1939 he went to the Kansas City team as a playing coach. The next year he went back to Seattle, thence to the Philadelphia Rockets, staying with that club for the next two years.

Then the old gent with the scythe and whiskers began to breathe down Danny's neck. He had been working with the Brewers' Warehouse on off seasons, but now he made it a permanent position. The playing gear, minus the skates, went into the mothballs, but Danny never lost his love for the game.

He was appointed referee-in-chief of the Thunder Bay Amateur Hockey Association; a job he held for nine years. And Danny was as efficient in a sweater-and-whistle role as he was in a playing capacity. A knowledge of players, and the game, gained through years of active participation stood him in good stead, and he became one of the most respected arbiters of his time. He officiated at two Allan Cup series and two Memorial Cup finals.

Danny has had many thrills as a hockey player, but probably his greatest came when Michael J. Rodden signed him and Bill Brydges to a professional contract back in 1926 when the two Port Arthur stars who had helped their club to an Allan Cup victory over the Toronto Varsity team, crossed the threshold of the big time with the former Toronto St. Patricks.

Mrs. Cox is the former Ella Wilson, a native of Aberdeen, Scotland. Daughter Helen is a chartered accountant while "Danny-boy" Cox is a flourishing replica of the "old man," at something over six years of age.

Pronovost Fires Tying Marker As McKenney Sets New Mark First Rookie to Score Twenty

DETROIT (CP)—When defenceman Marcel Pronovost fired the shot that gave Detroit Red Wings a 2-2 tie with Boston Bruins Monday night, it added confirmation to a suspicion that has been growing for some time in the minds of Detroit's National Hockey League opposition.

Offensively the Red Wings are no longer a three-man club.

Actually, they were a four-man club when they started their uninterrupted string of NHL titles seven years ago, but since Sid Abel left for a coaching job with Chicago Black Hawks, their chief scoring threats have been forwards Gordie Howe and Ted Lindsay and defenceman Red Kelly.

In the last three seasons, these three have accounted for 40 to 45 per cent of the team's goals.

This season, with the Wings scoring at approximately the same rate as last year, Howe, Lindsay and Kelly have produced only 29 per cent of the total. The former members of the supporting cast are taking up the slack.

SURPASS PREVIOUS BEST

Three of them — Earl Reibel, Marcel Bonin and Vic Stasiuk—already have surpassed their previous best for a single season.

Alex Delvecchio, whose first-period goal against the Bruins Monday night gave the Wings a temporary lead, needs three more to equal his top of 16.

The Bruins cheered a record of their own as Don McKenney became the first rookie in the club's history to score 20 goals. His second-period marker gave them a 2-1 lead that lasted barely a minute before Marcel Pronovost squared matters for keeps. Veteran Ed Sandford was their other scorer.

The tie boosted the Wings into a tie for first place with the idle Montreal Canadiens, who have three games in hand. The Bruins climbed within three points of the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

MONTREAL (CP)—Detroit Red Wings pulled into a National Hockey League first place tie with Montreal Canadiens Monday night by sawing off to a 2-2 tie with Boston Bruins.

The tie, which left league scoring leaders unchanged, gave the Red Wings one point, enough to catch up with Montreal's pace-setting 76. Canadiens have 13 more games to play in the schedule compared with 10 for the Wings. The fourth-place Bruins narrowed the gap between them and Toronto Maple Leafs to three points. The Bruins and Leafs each have 11 games left.

Canadiens saw action only twice since the official statistics were released last Tuesday and came up with two victories, the only club with a perfect record for the week.

FOUR HABS LEAD

The Big Five of Montreal Canadiens headed the scoring leaders a week ago but was broken up and only four were left. But in two games this power quartet collected 21 points.

Jean Beliveau still tops the list, adding two goals and four assists last week, to run his point-total to 76. Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, breaking loose for five goals against New York, became the leading goal-getter with 32. He also had two assists and the seven points in the week moved him into second place ahead of Maurice (Rocket) Richard, who tallied one goal and gathered in three assists. The Rocket now is in third place with 60 points.

Bert Olmstead held fourth place safely. He is the league's most prolific relay man, with 43 assists, picking up three last week and tallying a goal to give him a total of 52 points.

MOVE MOSDELL

Sid Smith of Toronto and Gord Howe of the Red Wings shoved Montreal's Ken Mosdell from fifth place down to seventh. Smith had two assists, giving him 48 points, while Howe has 48 points. Mosdell also has 47 but takes secondary ranking because he has scored fewer goals, 21 to Howe's 23. George (Red) Sullivan of Chicago is also in the 47 bracket on 15 goals and 32 assists, scoring two of each last week.

Harry Lumley of Toronto now finds himself in a more comfortable position in his bid for the Vezina Trophy. Lumley's goals-against count is 113 compared with 119 for Terry Sawchuk of Detroit. A week ago Lumley had a margin of only three. Lumley will be under fire in 11 more games and Sawchuk in 10 before the trophy and $1,000 prize money are handed out.

Blues Tie At Swim Meet

TORONTO (CP)—The University of Toronto swimming team, awarded a 42½-42 victory over University of Rochester Saturday night, have to settle for a 42-42 tie. The original half-point victory was awarded to Toronto for winning the final race.

U. of T. swim coach Cressy McCatty conceded Monday night that the half-point was a mistake. He said the referee "was apparently quoting an old regulation that was in force many years ago under which the team winning the final race would be awarded a half-point."

Laufman Wins Senior League Scoring Title

TORONTO (CP)—Ken Laufman of Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen is the Ontario Hockey Association senior A scoring champion, figures released by the OHA showed today.

Laufman, who held the top rung for the greater part of the regular 50-game schedule, fired 23 goals and assisted on another 58 for 81 points. He led the league in assists also.

In second place in the scoring was Mickey Roth of Stratford Indians with 74 points made up of 23 goals and 51 assists. Bill Flick, also of Stratford, finished third with 28 goals and 33 assists for 61 points.

Dennis Brodeur, Kitchener goaltender, was the best in the league with a 3.23 goals against average. He allowed 152 goals in 47 games and had one shutout. Second was Bill Harrington of Windsor Bulldogs with a 3.409 average.

Junior Swim Star Shatters Four Records

VANCOUVER (CP)—Helen Stewart, sensational junior swimming star with the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club, has shattered four Canadian swim marks and aided in setting a new relay mark in a club meet.

The 16-year-old swimmer Saturday churned over the junior women's 50-yard free-style course in 26.9 seconds to eclipse both the senior and junior women's marks. The old senior mark was 27.4 seconds and the junior, 27.5 seconds.

She also eclipsed both junior and senior marks in 220-yard breast-stroke event with a time of 3:14.3, one-tenth of a second faster than the former senior mark of 3:14.4.

Then she teamed up with clubmates to cover the 200-yard free-style relay in 1:55.5 to clip 3.3 seconds off the old senior women's mark of 1:58.8.

Ted Simpson cut more than a second off his own Canadian men's 100-yard back-stroke record with a time of 59.3 seconds. The old mark was 1:00.4.

Teepees Wallop Kitchener Dutchies As Junior League Enters Last Phase

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The 1954-55 Ontario Hockey Association Junior A schedule winds up Wednesday night but the first four positions in the standings are still a toss-up.

No matter how they end up, St. Catharines TeePees are the ones to watch in the six-team playoffs. The defending Memorial Cup champions have tremendous scoring power.

The TeePees, now in first place, have recently been sharpening their scoring eyes for the post-schedule action. Led by Hank Ciesla, their top marksman, St. Catharines has bagged 35 goals in their last four games—almost a nine-goal-a-game clip. Four of the league's seven top scorers are on the St. Catharines roster.

Monday night in Guelph the TeePees walloped Kitchener-Waterloo Canucks 10-3. The second-place Guelph Biltmores edged Hamilton Tiger-Cubs 6-5 in overtime at Hamilton during the night's other game.

Ciesla, six-foot-two native of St. Catharines, just about sewed up this year's scoring championship with his performance against the Canucks. The 198-pound centre fired four goals and picked up three assists to vault over the 100-point mark in the scoring race. Hank now has scored 57 goals and 46 assists for 103 points.

Barry Cullen, brother of Brian who set an OHA Junior A scoring record last year, is second in the scoring parade. His three goals and two assists Monday night gave him a season's collection of 45 markers and 41 assists for an 86-point total.

Cec Hoekstra, Ab McDonald and defenceman Elmer Vasko notched the other goals for St. Catharines Monday night. Hoekstra is fourth among scorers with 79 points on 30 goals and 49 assists while McDonald, who has scored 32 markers and assisted on 37 others, is tied for sixth with 69 points.

Stan Baliuk scored twice for Kitchener. Sonny Larose rounded out the total for the last-place Canucks, who have no chance of making the playoffs.

Tom McCarthy's goal with 12 seconds of overtime left gave Guelph the victory over the fifth-place Tiger-Cubs. Bill McCreary, Guelph captain who is third in the individual scorers' list, led the Biltmore victory with two goals and an assist. That raised his season's total to 44 goals and 36 assists for 80 points.

Other Guelph marksmen were Bill Sweeney, Roy Burmister and Bill Graham, who is tied with McDonald among the league's top scorers.

Brian Kilrea, Gary Sharpe, Bill McNeill, Brian Smith and Murray Oliver shared the Hamilton output.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

(This is the second of two articles on Canada's popular sport of curling. In the first article, which appeared last week, Elmer Ferguson told about the early days of curling in Canada.)

Part II — Curling Comes of Age

What the Grey Cup is to football, the Stanley Cup to hockey and the world's series to baseball, is the Canadian Brier Tankard to curling.

There are, as we remarked last week, some 200,000 curlers in Canada; men, women and juniors. Of the senior male group, at least 20,000 entered the lasts last fall in the fond hope of reaching a chance at play for the world's most sought-after curling trophy.

But as in other sports, only the cream of the crop survives when, in the battle that starts at Regina in early March, forty-four good curlers and true, representing Canada from Newfoundland to British Columbia, fight it out for the Canadian title in this sporting round robin. Last year, Edmonton had the Brier, the Grey Cup and the oil millions — a rich collection.

There's high drama in the Brier. Founded in 1927, it was suspended for three years during World War II, resumed in 1946 at Saskatoon. On the final day of the meet, a three-way deadlock for first place developed, necessitating a sudden-death playoff among rinks representing Alberta, Northern Ontario and Manitoba.

Almost 5,000 curling fans, with nothing but their own red-hot enthusiasm to keep them warm, hung on grimly until two-o'clock on a bitterly cold morning to see the first post-war champion in Canada crowned. It was the rink skipped by Billy Rose from the tiny village of Sedgewick, Alberta.

There are 35,000 school students playing the game in Canada, grounding themselves in the inherently sporting character of the roarin' game. And the national school championship brings out some fine curling, as youngsters from every province in the Dominion compete. Women curlers have their tournaments in every province.

In Quebec province, there is, among other winter meetings, the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy and the Seagram Bowl. Awarded annually to the province's international bonspiel, the Seagram Bowl game is rated one of the classics of the curling world, attended by representative rinks from coast to coast. But perhaps it is the club matches, the hundreds of lesser 'spiels, that make curling great in a social and sporting sense.

For it's a great game, a game devoid of inquests, where the skip's decision, right or wrong, is never questioned, the game of true sportsmanship. And the truly amateur game in the finest sense of the word.

Pan-American Games Plans Call for Eighty Competitions

MONTREAL (CP) — Plans for Canada's first representation in the Pan-American Games went forward today, with a possible maximum of 80 athletes to compete in nine sports.

An organization has been established for the Pan-American Games, to be held in Mexico City March 12-26. It is headed by Fred R. Whittall of Montreal, who will also act as manager of the swimming team.

Various sports organizations have named competitors — now numbering more than 80—but the number who can make the trip is still uncertain. Some may miss it for business or personal reasons; other groups and individuals are still trying to raise the necessary funds.

Many of Canada's entrants, including a girls' basketball team, are from the west coast. They will fly direct to Mexico from Vancouver.

The eastern section, from Ontario and Quebec, will leave from Toronto by plane March 11. Whittall said the return trip by plane will cost $285. He said the United States contingent has invited the Canadians to share their quarters on the University of Mexico grounds. He said meal costs are estimated at $3 to $4 a day.

Whittall said he is hopeful of as strong a representation as possible because the Pan-American Games, coming between the Olympics and British Empire Games, can provide Canada's athletes with much needed major competition.

The tentative lineup of Canada's participation:

Track and field, 10 men and four or five women; swimming, 20 to 24 equally divided between men and women; synchronized swimming, about 25 women; girls' basketball squad, 12; wrestling, fencing, equestrianship and gymnastics, two each; cycling, one.

Fred Rowell of Vancouver will be manager of the track and field team and Lloyd Swindells of Vancouver, coach. Tommy Walker of Toronto will coach the swimming team, and Gordon McDonald of Vancouver will manage and coach the girls' basketball team. Mrs. Pansy Forbes of Peterborough, from which city comes the largest entry in the synchronized swimming section, will coach that team.

In most of the other sports, with few entries, a competitor will also serve as manager.

Three Undefeated Rinks in 3rd Round Of Dominion High School Bonspiel

By GERRY MARTIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Three rinks—Northern Ontario, Ontario and Saskatchewan—go into today's third round of the Dominion high school bonspiel undefeated.

Ten rinks representing every province but Newfoundland started out Monday in the round-robin play.

At 9 a.m. AST (8 a.m. EST) today Saskatchewan plays Nova Scotia, Ontario meets British Columbia, and Northern Ontario plays Prince Edward Island. In the other games, Quebec meets New Brunswick and Manitoba plays Alberta.

The second draw is scheduled for 8 p.m. The teams will take the afternoon off to attend a luncheon and tour the Dominion Steel Company plant here.

LOPSIDED SCORES

The opening round Monday was featured by lopsided scores such as Saskatchewan's 16-6 win over Quebec and Alberta's 13-4 triumph over New Brunswick. In the second round, play tightened and Quebec bounced back to gain a thrilling 10-end 11-10 win over Manitoba while Alberta lost out in the final end 9-7 to Northern Ontario's rink from the gold-mining town of Noranda.

Saskatchewan had it a little tougher in the second round but built up an early lead that stood to give them an 8-6 win over British Columbia. In the first round the Kelowna, B.C., quartet pounded Nova Scotia 12-7.

Nova Scotia dropped their second match to Prince Edward Island as Prince of Wales College from Charlottetown shipped in a five on the fifth end. The five was the biggest end recorded Monday.

In the first round PEI lost a 5-3 contest to Ontario. Ontario also handed New Brunswick its second loss, 8-6.

PICK OF ROUND

The Ontario-Prince Edward Island match was the pick of the first round. After starting with a dead end, Sarnia Collegiate skipped by Bill Fraser scored singles on the second and third. The fourth went to Barry MacDonald, Prince of Wales island rink. Ontario took the next two ends with ones to go ahead 4-1, PEI had one in the seventh, the eighth was dead, and the rinks split the next two ends.

Northern Ontario and Manitoba were close until the eighth end when Northern Ontario scored a three to break up the game.

Flying Officer Louie LeCompte, well-known in this district, has been appointed one of the official referees at the world hockey championships which open in Germany, February 25. Louie has officiated at many games in Memorial Arena when he was stationed at Trenton. He was a member of the famous RCAF Flyers team that won the Ontario intermediate "A" championship back in 1937. At present he is stationed with the RCAF Air Division in Metz, France.

Don Wallace Stops Barboie

TORONTO (CP)—A paralyzing right by Don Wallace of Barrie dropped Toronto's Willie Barboie after 26 seconds of the fourth round in the main bout of the weekly amateur boxing show here Monday night.

The bout, in the 150-pound division, was scheduled for five rounds.

Dale Torangeau of Toronto was awarded a decision over Mickey McDonald of Brantford in a three-round preliminary bout.

Penticton Wins Over Czech 'Seconds' 6-0

PRAGUE (CP) — Penticton Vs, who gained a win and a tie in two warmup games against Czech teams before proceeding to the world hockey tournament, have completed their Czechoslovakian tour in an atmosphere of goodwill. The only jarring note was struck by a Prague correspondent for London's Communist Daily Worker.

Writing before the Canadians closed out their visit Monday with a 6-0 victory over the Czech B team Armour Milne said "the name of Canadian ice hockey stinks in Czechoslovakia."

Milne's story in The Daily Worker followed Penticton's 3-3 tie Sunday against the national team they will meet in the round-robin world championships which start Friday in West Germany. There were some fisticuffs as tempers flared in the third period of the encounter.

But Monday's game was played in a milder atmosphere and the crowd cheered the Vs as they outplayed the Czech second-stringers with little apparent effort.

And on reflection, officials of both sides decided the referees were as much to blame as anyone for Sunday's rough stuff, which drew spirited booing from the crowd.

The Daily Worker correspondent saw it differently. He accused the Canadians of "incredibly vicious and unruly behavior. . . Several times the entire Canadian team waded into the Czechs with sticks held threateningly high, jabbing elbows into the faces and necks of the opposing players."

At a luncheon for the two teams Monday, there was general agreement as to the blindness of the referees, but both Canadian and Czech officials said the calls were more severe against the visiting players than the Czechs, who received three penalties to Penticton's eight.

The emphasis Monday was on speed and clean play, although the visitors received five penalties and the Czechs three. Doug Kilburn scored twice for the winners, who fired three goals in an eight-minute burst in the first period, adding a single tally in the second and two more in the third.

Ed Kassian, Bill Warwick, Mike Shabaga and playing-coach Grant Warwick were the other Penticton scorers.

Named To Swim Team But No Money

MONTREAL (CP)—A couple of synchronized swimming champions may have to forego the opportunity to represent Canada at the Pan-American games in Mexico City. The reason: They just haven't that kind of travelling money.

Eila Lindell and Louise Genereux, 20-year-old Montreal girls, were thrilled when they learned they had been named to the Canadian team.

But then they learned they could get only limited financial assistance through the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, with which the Canadian Synchronized Swimming Association is affiliated.

Miss Lindell, a receptionist and switchboard operator, won Canada's Gale Trophy in 1954, which is awarded for best performance in all requirements combined. She won the Canadian strokes title in 1953 and 1954, and tied for solo in 1954. She has been provincial champion four years.

Miss Genereux, a comptometer operator, specialized in the duet with Miss Lindell. The two have been provincial and city and district champions.

Bombers Sign Al Wiley

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers announced Monday night the signing of holdover Canadian guard Al Wiley for the 1955 Western Interprovincial Football Union season.

Wiley, who has been with Bombers since 1950, formerly played for Sarnia Imperials and the University of Western Ontario.

Win Hockey Title and Quit Advises Canadian in Europe

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—The claim by a Communist newspaper man that the name of Canadian hockey "stinks in Czechoslovakia" underlines the hazards that Penticton Vs will face in the world hockey championships starting Friday.

The blunt fact is that Canadians and Europeans do not see eye to eye on the rules of the game.

"Fundamentally, the big difference is over bodychecking," says Richard (Red) Stapleford, a Canadian in London who has had close connections with Canadian, British and continental hockey for nearly 20 years.

"On this side of the water, you can draw time in the penalty box just for what they call the 'intention' of bodychecking. If a man tries to board another player and misses, he might still get the finger."

Differences between Canadian and European styles of play have been sharpened, some authorities here contend, by a British campaign to "clean up" the game. J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne, boss of British hockey and a big influence on the game in Europe, makes no secret of his feeling that Canadians play it too rough.

Ahearne, it is claimed, is always trying to change the rules to conform with this view. In Canada, the game remains as robust as ever, and when Canadian teams come to Europe they find the things they do naturally and legitimately at home are frowned upon by continental referees. But the European practice of holding and pulling a player's sweater is regarded as normal.

The answer, says Stapleford, is for Canada to quit if she regains the title this year.

"It's our game," he said. "I don't see why they should always be forcing their rules down our throat."

Name Canadian Tennis Stars

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy Durocher of Sherbrooke and Mariette Laframboise of Montreal were placed at the top of Canada's 1954 national junior tennis rankings, announced Monday night.

The announcement was made by Dr. Georges Leclerc, chairman of the Davis Cup selection and national ranking committees of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association.

John Swann of Vancouver and Pierre Lambert of Victoriaville, Que., were named second and third in the junior men's lists and Eleanor Dodge of Montreal and Ann Barclay of Vancouver second and third in the women's.

Inga Webber of Kitchener was fourth and G. Delacretaz of Cornwall placed 10th. Miss Delacretaz also won special mention in players under 15.

Durocher did not lose a single match against Canadian juniors during the year. He won the Canadian closed junior title, the Quebec provincial championships and two sectional championships, as well as his matches in interprovincial team play at Ottawa.

Miss Laframboise retained the No. 1 ranking she held the three previous years. She won the Canadian junior championship for the fourth consecutive year, losing only one set in three years. She also had a commendable record in senior competition. She was No. 4 in senior rankings, released a week ago.

Welter Champ Retains Crown

MONTREAL (CP)—Tony Percy of Drummondville, Que., weathered knockdowns in the first and second rounds to go on to win a unanimous decision over Jimmy Watkins of Buffalo, N.Y., Monday night before some 1,200 fans. Percy is Canadian welter titleholder.

Each fighter weighed 153. The bout was telecast in Quebec province.

The decision was loudly booed by the crowd at Mont St. Louis Gymnasium, many of whom felt the American should have been awarded the victory by a clear-cut margin.

In a 10-round semi-final, Charlie Chase of Montreal, Canadian middleweight champ, was awarded a unanimous decision over Al Hogan of Toronto. Chase scaled 162½ and Hogan, 176.

Cannington Wins Over Marmora

MARMORA — In a fairly even game on the Hamilton Crawford Arena on Saturday evening before a crowd of about 150 fans Cannington Juvenile hockey team triumphed over Marmora Juveniles by the score of 10-6 to win the second round in O.M.H.A. playoffs. They took the first game last week in Cannington 11-3 in the two game series in which goals counted. Their elimination of Campbellford in the first round was by 24-4, Marmora got into the round through having the goal-lead over Coe Hill.

Saturday evening's game was clean and pleasing to watch as there were some sparkling bits of play. The homesters registered twice before Cannington retaliated, Bedore beat Meck for the first goal at 4.46 on H. Brooks' pass. Darrah got the second on an assist from Bell.

Halfway through the period Cannington put on the pressure scoring thrice in 2 minutes. Jewell unassisted scored twice and C. Jenkins also netted without an assist. J. Brooks unassisted tied the score but in the last minute Grills put his team one up on assists from the Jenkins brothers.

Hogg scored unassisted for the visitors half way through the second and Darrah unassisted also scored for Marmora.

Jewell did the hat trick in the next minute getting assists from Grills and H. Jenkins.

In the third Grills scored on J. Jenkins' assist and now it was Darrah's turn to do the hat trick which was accomplished on J. Brook's assist. O'Neill's fine play of the evening was climaxed shortly after by a solo effort yielding a goal to place the homesters again within a goal of evening the score.

After five minutes the visitors got another splurge which Prentice failed to withstand despite many good saves and three goals put them in the safety zone. C. Jenkins started the scoring assisted by Howell, E. Wilson was also assisted by that player and then Jewell who had obtained his three goals helped Grills to get his third to end the scoring for the game. Ten penalties were evenly divided.

Teams:—

Cannington — goal, Meck; defence, T. Wilson, H. Jenkins; centre, E. Wilson; wings, C. Jenkins, Howell; alternates: Imoff, Woodward, Grills, Hogg, Jewell, Creber.

Marmora — goal, Prentice; defence, J. Brooks, Walker; centre, Brady; wings, Darrah, Ellis; alternates, H. Brooks, O'Neill, Bedore, Flynn, Moloney, Bell.

Extra goalie, Reynolds.

Referees — W. Post, W. Mulholland.

Stanky Predicts Four-Way Fight

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Manager Eddie Stanky today predicted a four-team battle for the National League pennant involving the defending champion New York Giants, Brooklyn, Milwaukee and his own St. Louis Cardinals.

The peppery little pilot, who arrived here well in advance of the start of the training season, predicted his club will be greatly improved over last year because of added pitching strength and a more fortified bench.

Roy Conacher Suggested For Penticton V's

TORONTO (CP)—The NHL Old-Timers' Association Monday proposed that Roy Conacher, former National Hockey League left-winger, be sent to bolster Penticton Vs in Europe for the world hockey tournament. Conacher said the proposal was news to him.

Lorne Duguid, president of NHL Old-Timers, said Monday his club believes Conacher, who quit NHL hockey four years ago, could contribute sufficient goals with the Vs to beat Russia.

Conacher, 38, scored 223 goals in nine seasons in the NHL, playing with Boston, Detroit and Chicago.

"I might go," Conacher said, "but I'd have to do a lot of skating. I'm out of shape."

Duguid said he was alarmed at the Vs' 3-3 tie with Czechoslovakia Sunday.

But George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said he feels the Vs will be able to take care of all opposition once the world tournament starts Friday.

WILL EXCHANGE VISITS

MOSCOW (AP) — An American all-star college basketball team will visit Russia in July and a Russian team will come to the United States in the autumn, a top Soviet official said Monday.

Alexei Chikin, chief of the foreign division of the Soviet state committee on physical culture, said also an American chess team, including Samuel Reshevsky of New York, is scheduled to visit Moscow in June to repay a visit Soviet teams made to the U.S. last year.

FOR BELLEVILLE AREA
TO HANDLE altex WINDOWS & DOORS

We require immediately an aluminum prime and storm window and door dealer for this area. Previous experience is preferable and a crew of installers and some salesmen are essential.

Exceptional wholesale prices, high quality of the product, ease of installation and low service requirements make this an unusually fine opportunity. In addition, the manufacturer will supply heavy advertising for your area without cost to you.

We will definitely start to market the self-storing Altex window and the door in this area this Spring, and application for the dealership should be made in writing, stating your previous experience, the approximate number of salesmen and installers you would have, and the area covered. Address your letter to Mr. I. S. Wallace, Vice-President Sales, as soon as possible, as we expect to award this dealership by March 1st.

Few Viewers, High Budgets Kill Off Several TV Shows

By WAYNE OLIVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Low audience ratings and high production budgets are knocking several more television shows off the air.

Two scheduled to go are Father Knows Best, starring Robert Young, and I Married Joan, starring Joan Davis. The Young show bows off CBS March 27 and Miss Davis' program leaves NBC April 4.

Breakfast Club, simulcast on ABC-TV and radio, will drop the TV vedsion Friday for lack of sponsors. The radio version will continue.

Stork Club on ABC-TV loses its sponsor March 5, although it may be kept on the network in another time period. The venerable Pantomime Quiz closes on ABC March 6 and Horizons folds the same night.

AUDIENCE DROPS

A dwindling audience also is the cause for the demise March 6 of the Johns Hopkins Science Review on Du Mont after six years as an unsponsored show.

The Joan Davis show is an example of too much Mickey Mouse and Walt Disney. When it began in October 1952 Joan's show had the formidable opposition of Godfrey and His Friends on CBS. Miss Davis slowly gained and caught up with Godfrey about a year ago and all was serene until Disney and his pals moved onto ABC last fall. The Disney show sent ratings for Miss Davis' program into a skid, along with those for the first half of the Godfrey show which Disneyland overlaps.

Robert Young's show was another story. It never was able to get off the ground n the first place, despite good reviews from critics for its warm portrayal of family life.

Julius La Rose will substitute for vacationing Perry Como on the latter's thrice weekly radio and television shows for two weeks starting next Monday.

Trent Valley Hockey League

The Trenton Admirals and Point Anne Cementmen both hold two-game leads in the best-of-five TVL southern section semi-finals after chalking up victories over the Belleville Juniors and Trenton RCAF Flyers in a twin - bill at Memorial Arena last night. Point Anne were chased to the wire before edging the Flyers 5-4 while the Admirals walked off with an easy 10-4 decision over the local junior squad.

POINT ANNE 5, RCAF 4

The Goyer brothers climaxed one of their better scoring nights when Leo took Gerry's pass with nine seconds remaining in the game to beat the Flyer goaltender and take a 2-0 lead in the series. The Pointers had battled uphill all the way, behind 1-0 at the end of the first period, 3-2 going into the final twenty minutes but their usual third-period scoring punch pulled out the win.

Gerry and Leo Goyer scored all five of the winner's markers, Gerry getting the first three and Leo coming through with a pair in the third period. Frank Boucher tallied twice for the losers with Blanchard and Bowman getting the others. Eight minor penalties were handed out by referees Carson and Fitzpatrick with four going to each team.

Blanchard was the lone marksman in the first period with St. Pierre and Tardiff assisting at the five minute mark. Gerry Goyer got his first goal of the night to deadlock the fixture at 1.35 on a long shot that beat sub-goalie Tardiff filling in for Ogden. Leo and Semark drew assists. Boucher made it 2-1 at 4.20 on a partly screened drive and Bowman opened up a 3-1 lead at 16.25 when Bates fanned on a quick slap shot, Francis setting up the play.

Gerry Goyer's second goal was a beautiful effort, Pat Gilmour carrying into the Flyer's zone and dumping the disc into the corner, Gerry digging it out and cutting across the goalmouth to beat Tardiff with two defencemen hacking away at the big forward.

The third period opened with both teams applying end-to-end rushes but missing great scoring chances by poor shooting. Gerry knotted the count at 3-3 on a long shot with both team a man short at 11.35 and Leo tallied on a good passing play with Tim Williams at 13.20 to put Point Anne in front for the first time.

They were unable to hold the lead however when Boucher drove a long screened drive home at 14.20 with Bowman and Francis assisting, setting the stage for the last-minute goal. Gerry Goyer stickhandled his way through the Flyer forwards with the seconds ticking off, pulled the defenders to one side and flashed the disc out front to Leo who made no mistake in completing the beautiful effort.

The teams:—

Point Anne — Bates, Hurst, Semark, L. Goyer, Williams, G. Goyer, Stewart, Gilmour, Hunter, Graham.

RCAF — Tardiff, Childerhouse, Stewart, Francis, Bowman, Rochon, Tardiff, Blanchard, St. Pierre, Branch, Dickson, Brown, Boucher, Racicot.

Referees: Carson and Fitzpatrick.

SUMMARY

First period—
1. RCAF — Blanchard (St. Pierre, Tardiff)	5.00

9. Pt. Anne—L. Goyer (G. Goyer)	19.51
Penalties: Gilmour, Childerhouse, G. Goyer, Stewart.

Lum Carson's Juniors appeared to be out for a victory when they took a 2-1 lead in the first period and made it 3-1 early in the middle stanza, but the Carr clan opened the big guns with five quick tallies to lead 6-3 as the period ended. The third period was a mere formality with the city sextet getting one and the Admirals coming back with four goals to win going away.

Lou Schmidt paced the victor's attack with four goals and one assist while Earl Cousins potted a pair of markers. Joe Scott had three assists while Istead claimed one and two and single goals went to Austin Scott, Jones and Bob Hatfield. Bobby Brooks and Garrison had a goal and assist each for the Belleville team with Leo St. Denis and Atkins also scoring.

Hill played a heads-up game between the pipes for Trenton but Charlton looked weak on several of the visitors' goals, although at times he received little support.

Referee Mike Aquino received a cut over his eyes when racked with a high stick in the initial period and the game was delayed while the official was patched up and took a short rest. Bobby Strahan was his fellow referee and between them they assessed ten minor sentences and a misconduct, the latter going to Doug Murray in the third period.

The teams:

Trenton—Hill, Beale, Jones, Leavy, P. Scott, Cousins, Hatfield, J. Scott, Schmidt, Graham, Istead, A. Scott.

Belleville — Charlton, Baker, Murray, Buskard, Atkins, Bryant, Brooks, St. Denis, Garrison, McKenna, Stolliker, Casey, Fox, Petrie, Bovay, Ashley.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Without the neck of a giraffe you may not be able to see what cards your partner is holding. But you can get a pretty good idea of what he has from the bids you get from him.

Your opening bid is one heart with this south hand:

♠K 5
♥A Q J 6 3
♦A Q 6
♣A 6 2

Suppose your north partner responds at once with a jump to three hearts. What does he tell you? What is he asking you? What are you required to do from then on?

The fact that he did not first takeout to a new suit reveals to you that he has no biddable suit in spades or diamonds or clubs. With a biddable suit of his own he should takeout before assisting.

The fact that he made a jump in number tells you that he holds tricks enough to help make a game with what your opening bid shows. The fact that he assisted your suit says he has adequate support.

The fact that his was an immediate one-jump promises two sure tricks in his hand. Without two sure tricks he would have double-jumped to four hearts as a game promise without two sure tricks.

Your opening bid of one promises a minimum of five tricks. If he sees enough for game in hearts he must hold five tricks. Of the five tricks, remember he has promised two sures among them.

With what you hold, therefore, you may assume he has the ace of spades and the king-queen combination in clubs. He probably has the king of hearts and very likely a doubleton in some side suit.

His jump is a signal that you must keep the bidding alive to at least a game. With the seven tricks you hold you can now see 12 tricks in the pair. So, a slam looks very promising.

Content with hearts as trumps, you will now investigate to see how safe a slam you have. You may even find enough for a grand slam.

Europeans Don't Like Western Style Hockey

DUESSELDORF, Germany (AP) Czech claims that Canadians play "wild west hockey" and Russian charges of "American hooliganism" made officials of the world hockey championships cross their fingers today and hope for the best.

The world championships open simultaneously here and in three other West German cities Friday. Although hockey, even at its most peaceful moments, is an explosive, rough and ready game, championship officials said Monday night they hope the 10-day, 15-nation meeting "will pass without serious incident."

Two weeks ago, a Russian sports magazine said Al Yourkewicz, coach of the American team, was a "hooligan and a rowdy" who went in for dirty play and taught his team bad tricks. Yourkewicz denied the Russian claims.

There is a great difference between hockey in Europe and the game as played in Canada and in has resulted in much bitterness and misunderstanding in recent years.

The European game abhors excessive body checking, stick swinging and many other phases of Canadian play. The Canadians and Americans think just as little of the European version.

Australian Accommodations Said Bad

MELBOURNE (AP)—An American travel agency representative said Monday "Melbourne's accommodation is in a horrible, chaotic mess and visitors to the 1956 Olympic Games would be forced to sleep in the streets."

Sam Mercer made the statement after examining Melbourne facilities.

"It is a disgrace, for Australia has a wonderful chance to build up her tourist trade," Mercer said in an interview.

"Americans will have nothing but contempt for Melbourne's paltry accommodation and shocking liquor laws."

Melbourne is short of hotel space and the city has a 6 p.m. closing time for bars.

Mercer said Americans are trying to charter ships for use as "floating hotels" in Melbourne harbor.

Belleville Opening of a Great New British Film

Mr. W. Fawcett, Manager of the McCarthy Theatre tells the Ontario Intelligencer that "Romeo and Juliet" will open there on Monday, Feb. 28th.

Probably the greatest picture ever filmed by the J. Arthur Rank Organization, "Romeo and Juliet" was made almost entirely at the story's actual location in Italy, in conjunction with Italy's most gifted film-makers.

Romeo is played by handsome young Laurence Harvey, and Juliet by Susan Shentall, young English 'unknown' specially selected for this most coveted role by ace Italian director, Renato Castellani after an all - British search two years ago. Other leading roles are played by Flora Robson, Norman Wooland and Mervyn Johns.

"Advance reports after private showing of "Romeo and Juliet" indicate that the joint British and Italian team have made a picture of extraordinary beauty and outstanding appeal to Mr. and Mrs. Average Movie-goer," states Mr. Fawcett.

The Belleville premiere promises to be one of the town's most memorable opening nights. Many local personalities have accepted invitations to attend.

After this spectacular opening night, "Romeo and Juliet" will remain at the McCarthy Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday, March 1 and 2. Matinees at 2 p. m. and evening performances at 6.30 and 9.10. Mr. Fawcett strongly advises our readers to see this outstanding picture right from the beginning for maximum enjoyment, and to note showing times carefully in advance.

Ed Olson On Way To Second Title

NEW YORK (AP)—Veteran Ed Olson of the Cleveland Barons is making a determined bid to win his second American Hockey League individual scoring title.

The 33-year-old left winger scored seven points last week and has a total of 75 points on 36 goals and 39 assists. Olson leads his injured teammate, Freddie Glover, who has a fractured ankle, by 11 points.

Rookie Jim Anderson of the Springfield Indians is in third place with 62 points and leads in goal scoring with 38.

Little Gil Mayer of Pittsburgh continues to pace the goaltenders with an average of 2.78 on 150 goals allowed in 43 games.

'Spoilers' Ranks as Most Remade of All Movies

By BO THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A bunch of the boys were whooping it up in the Northern Saloon.

Matter of fact, this is the fifth time the boys have whooped it up, and that's a lot of whooping. They're doing it in "The Spoilers," which must rank as the most remade of all movies.

"The Spoilers" is a fabled film because of its terrific fight scene. The history goes back to 1913, when William Farnum and Tom Santschi fought over the affections of Kathlyn Williams. It was a battle such as the infant movie industry had never seen before. The story went that it was actually a grudge match and the two actors really hurt each other.

The fight was recreated in 1923 with Milton Sills and Noah Beery battling over Anna Q. Nillson. In 1930, Gary Cooper and the late William Boyd (not Hopalong Cassidy) had a go at it with Betty Compson as the famale interest. Marlene Dietrich was the cause of the fisticuffs when John Wayne and Randolph Scott slugged it out in 1942.

Now Jeff Chandler and Rory Calhoun are the contenders with Anne Baxter as the prize. I dropped out to Universal to watch the struggle.

I found the Northern Saloon teeming with picturesque Yukon types. The place was askew, since the fight had been going on for a day and would be another two days in shooting. Total time on the screen: Four minutes.

"There have been so many different gimmicks in film fights—eye-gougings, using chains, etc.," explained director Jess Hibbs, "that we thought we would do this one as just a straight, old-fashioned stand-up fight. No breakaway chairs or things like that. The only thing we have is a thrown spittoon.

"I'm trying to get a little humor into it by having a girl show continue on the stage all during the fight. I plan to cut to one of the girls doing a bump just as you hear the sound of a fist hitting."

Directing such a monumental fight is not easy. Hibbs was using two cameras, but wouldn't be able to tell whether the battle was realistic until he saw it on the screen. "The hit may seem good," he remarked, "but on film you might see that tell-tale daylight between fist and chin."

The trick is in having the hitter come close enough and the receiver react at the split second when he is supposed to have been struck.

AT THE CAPITOL — Lovely and talented Jacqueline White is co-featured with Charles McGraw and Marie Windsor in RKO Radio's mystery adventure on a transcontinental train, "The Narrow Margin", showing today and Wednesday for its first Belleville showing. On the same program "The Set Up", starring Robert Ryan.

Court May Decide World Billiard Champ

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A federal court may have to help decide just who is the world's pocket billiards champion.

A two-year dispute over the issue exploded again here Monday when Willie Mosconi filed a $200,000 suit against what he said are "pretenders to the title."

Mosconi named both Luther Lassiter, self-styled champion from Elizabeth City, N.C., and Lassiter's challenger, Irving Crane, Binghamton, N.Y. Lassiter won a title last year in what Mosconi describes as a "maverick tournament."
